The angell of the LORDE stode besyde  $\mathring{y}$  barne of Arnan  $\mathring{y}$  Iebusite. And Dauid lifte vp his eyes, and sawe the angell of  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE stondinge betwene heauē and earth, and a naked swerde in his hande stretched out ouer Ierusalem. Then Dauid and  $\mathring{y}$  Elders beynge clothed with sack cloth, fell vpō their faces. And Dauid sayde vnto God: Am not I he that caused the people to be nombred? I am he that hath synned and done euell: as for these shepe, what haue they done? LORDE my God, let thine hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house, and not agaynst thy people to plage them.

And the angell sayde vnto Gad, that he shulde speake vnto Dauid, that Dauid shulde go vp,  $\mathfrak{g}$  set vp an altare in the barne of Arnan the lebusite. So Dauid wente vp acordinge to  $\mathfrak{g}$  worde of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORDE. But whan Arnan turned him, and sawe the angell (and his foure sonnes with him) they hyd the selues : for Arnan throszshed wheate.

Now whan Dauid came to Arnan, Arnan loked, and was aware of Dauid, and wête forth out of the barne, and worshipped Dauid with his face to the grounde. And Dauid sayde vnto Arnan: Geue me rowme in the barne, to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE therin: for  $\hat{y}$  full money shalt thou geue it me, that the plage maye cease from the people.

But Arnan sayde vnto Dauid: Take it vnto the, and let my lorde the kynge do as pleaseth him. Beholde, that oxe geue I for a burntofferynge, and those vessels to the oxe, and wheate for the meatofferynge, I geue it all. Neuertheles the kynge sayde vnto Arnan: Not so: but for ŷ full money wyl I bye it: for that which is thine wyl not I take for the LORDE, and offre a burntofferynge for naughte.

So Dauid gaue Arnan for  $\mathring{y}$  rowme, sixe Ihundreth Sycles of golde in weight. And there buylded Dauid an altare vnto  $\mathring{y}$ LORDE,  $\mathfrak{q}$  offred burntofferynges  $\mathfrak{q}$  slaynofferynges. And whan he called vpō the LORDE, he herde him thorow the fyre from heauē vpon  $\mathring{y}$  altare of the burntofferynge. And  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE sayde vnto the angell, that he shulde put his swerde in to his sheeth.

At the same tyme whā Dauid sawe, that the LORDE had herde him vpon the corne floore of Arnan  $\hat{y}$  Iebusite, he dyd sacrifice there. For  $\hat{y}$  habitacion of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE which Moses had made in the wyldernes, and the altare of burntofferynges, was at that tyme in the hye place at Gibeon. But Dauid coulde not go thither to seke God before it, for he feared the swerde of the LORDES angell. And Dauid sayde : \* Here shal be  $\hat{y}$  house of God  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and this the altare of burntofferynges for Israel.

The rriff. Chapter.

ND Dauid comaunded to gather together the straungers that were in  $\frac{6}{3}$ londe of Israel, and appoynted masons to hewe stone for the buyldinge of the house of God. And Dauid prepared moch yron for nales in the dores of the portes, and for soch thinges as were to be naled together, and so moch brasse, that it was not to be weyed: and Cedre trees innumerable: for they of Zidon  $\underline{\alpha}$  Tyre brought Dauid moch Cedre tymbre: for Dauid thoughte, Salomo my sonne is but a childe and tender: But the house that shal be buylded vnto the LORDE, shal be greate, that his name  $\underline{\alpha}$  prayse maye of the children of Assaph. The children of Meselemia were these: the fyrstborne Zacharias, the seconde Iediael,  $\mathring{y}$  thirde Sebadia, the fourth Iathniel,  $\mathring{y}$  fifth Elam, the sixte Iohanan, the seventh Elioenai. The children of Obed Edom were these: the firstborne Semaia, the seconde Iosabad the thirde Ioah, the fourth Sachur, § fyfth Nethaneel, the sixte Ammiel, the seventh Isachar, the eight Pegulthai: for God had blessed him. And vnto Semaia his sonne there were sonnes borne also, which bare rule in the house of their fathers: for they were mightie valeaunt The children of Semaia were, Athni, men. Rephael, Obed and Elsabad, whose brethren were valeaunt men, Elihu and Semachia: all these were of the children of Obed Edom. Meselemia had children and brethren which were stronge men, euen eightene.

Hossa of the children of Merari had children, Simri the chefest: for ÿ fyrstborne was not there, therfore dyd his father appoynte him to be chefest, the secode Helchias, ÿ thirde Tebalia, ÿ fourth Zacharias. All the children and brethren of Hossa were thirtene.

This is the ordinaunce of the dorekepers amonge the heades of the valeaunt men in the offyce besyde their brethren, to mynister in the house of the LORDE. And the lot was cast for the small as for y greate thorow out the house of their fathers at euery dore. The lot towarde the East fell vpon Meselemia. And the lot was cast for Zacharias his sonne, which was a man of prudent councell, g vnto him it fell towarde the North: But vnto Obed Edom towarde the South, and to his sonnes besyde the house of Esupim. And vnto Supim and Hossa towarde the West by the gate of Salechet in the strete of the burntofferinges, where the tabernacles stonde together.

Towarde the East were there sixe of the Leuites. Towarde the north foure on § daie tyme. Towarde the south foure on the daye season likewyse. Besyde Esupim two g two. By Parbar westwarde were there foure in the strete, and two besyde Parbar. These are the ordinaunces of the dorekepers amonge the children of the Korahites, and the children of Merari. Of the Leuites, was Ahia ouer the treasures of the house of God, and ouer the treasures that were sanctifyed.

Of the children of Laedan, the childre of the Gersonites. Of Laedan were these the heades of the fathers, namely y Iehielites. The children of the Iehielites were, Setha and his brother Ioel ouer the treasures of the house of the LORDE. Amonge the Amramites, Iezeharites, Hebronites and Vsielites. was Sebuel the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Moses, prynce ouer the treasures. His brother Elieser had a sonne Rehabia, whose sonne was Iesaia, whose sonne was Iorā, whose sonne was Sichri, whose sonne was Selomith: the same Selomith and his brethren were ouer all the treasures of the thinges that were halowed, which kinge Dauid halowed, and the pryncipall of the fathers amonge the rulers ouer thousandes g ouer hundreds, and rulers in the hoost (of warres and spoyles had they halowed it, to repayre the house of the D LORDE) and ouer all y Samuel the Seer, and Saul the sonne of Cis, a Abner the sonne of Ner, and Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia had halowed: what soeuer was sanctifyed, it was vnder the hande of Selomith and his brethren. Amonge the Iezeharites was Chenaia with his sonnes for the worke without ouer Israel, offycers gludges. Amonge the Hebronites was Hasabiag his brethren, valeaunt men, a thousande and seuen hundreth, ouer the offyces of Israel on this syde Iordane westwarde for all maner worke of the LORDE, and to serue the kinge.

But amonge the Hebronites was Ieria the chefest amonge the Hebronites of his kinred amonge the fathers. And search was made amonge them, and in the fortieth yeare of kynge Dauid there were founde valeaut men at Iaeser in Gilead, and their brethren mightie men, two thousande and seuen hundreth pryncipall fathers, and Dauid set the ouer the Rubenites, Gaddites, and ouer the halfe trybe of Manasses, for all soch busynes as belonged vnto God and the kynge.

As for y brasen altare s which Bezaleel the sonne of Vri the sonne of Hur had made, it was there before the habitaof the LORDE: and Salomon and the congregacion soughte God. And Salomon offred a thousande burntofferynges vpo the brasen altare that stode before the Tabernacle of witnesse.

In the same nighte appeared God vnto 13 Salomon, and sayde vnto him : Axe, what shal I geue the? And Salomon sayde vnto God: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid, and hast made me kynge in his Now LORDE God, let thy worde steade. that thou hast promysed vnto my father Dauid, be verified, \* for thou hast made me kynge ouer a people, which is as many in nöbre as the dust vpon the earth. Graunte me wyszdome therfore and knowlege,  $\frac{1}{2}$  I maye go out and in before this people: for who is able to iudge this greate people of thine?

Then sayde God vnto Salomon: For so moch as thou art so mynded, and hast not desyred riches ner good, ner honoure, ner the soules of thine enemies, ner longe life, but hast requyred wyszdome and knowlege, to iudge my people, ouer whom I haue made the kynge, wyszdome therfore and knowlege be geuen the. Morouer, riches g good and honoure wyll I geue the, so that soch one as thou hath not bene before the amoge the kynges, nether shal be after the.

So came Salomon from the hye place (which C was at Gibeon) "vnto Ierusalē from y Tabernacle of witnesse, and reigned ouer Israel. And Salomon gathered him charettes and horsmen, so that he had a thousande and foure hundreth charettes, g twolue thousande horsmen: and those appoynted he to be in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Ierusalem. And the kynge broughte it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer a golde at Ierusalē as stones: and as many Ceders, as the Molberyes trees, that are in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto Salomon out of Egipte, a the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Kena for moneye. And they came vp, and broughte out of Egipte a charet for sixe hudreth syluer pes, and an horse for an hundreth and fiftye. Thus broughte they also vnto all the kynges of the Hethites, and to the kynges of § Syrians.

The ij. Chapter.

ND Salomon thoughte to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE, gan house for his kyngdome: and tolde out thre score and ten thousande men to beare burthens, and foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpō the mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth officers ouer them. + And Salomon sent vnto Hiram the kynge of Tyre, sayenge: As  $\ddagger$  thou dyddest with my father, gsendedst him Ceder trees, to builde an house for to dwell in (euen so do thou with me also.) Beholde, I wyl buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, to sanctifie it, for to burne good incense before him, and allwaye to prepare  $\mathring{y}$  shewbred, and burntofferynges in the mornynge and in the euenynge, on the Sabbathes  $\mathring{u}$  New mones, and solempne feastes of  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE oure God euermore for Israel.

And the house that I wyl buylde, shal be greate: for oure God is greater then all goddes. But who is able to buylde him an house? For heauen g the heauens of all heauens maye not coprehende him. Who am I then, that I shulde buylde him an house? But onely for this intent to burne incense before him?

Sēde me now therfore a wyse mā to worke with golde, syluer, brasse, yron, scarlet, purple, yalow sylke and soch one as can graue carued worke with the wyse men that are with me in Iewry and Ierusalem, whom my father Dauid ordeyned. And sende me tymber of Ceder, pyne tre and costly wodd from Libanus: for I knowe that thy seruauntes can hewe tymber vpon Libanus. And beholde, my seruauntes shalbe with thy seruauntes, to prepare me moch tymber: for the house that I wyl buylde, shalbe greate c maruelous goodly.

And beholde, I wyl geue vnto the carpenters  $\mathcal{C}$ thy seruauntes which hewe the tymber, twētye thousande quarters, of beaten wheate, and twentye thousande quarters of barlye, and twentye thousande Batthes of wyne, and twentye thousande Batthes of oyle.

Then sayde Hiram the kynge of Tyre by wrytinge, and sent it vnto Salomon: Because the LORDE loueth his people, therfore hath he made y to be kynge ouer them. And Hiram sayde morouer: Praysed be § LORDE God of Israel, which made heaven a earth, that he hath geuē kynge Dauid a wyse and prudent sonne, and soch one as hath vnderstondinge to buylde an house vnto the LORDE, an house for his realme. Therfore sende I now a wyse man that hath vnderstondynge, seuen Hiram Abi (which is the sonne of a woman of the doughters of Dan, and his father was of  $\mathbf{D}$ Tyre) which can worke in golde, syluer, brasse, yron, stone, tymber, scarlet, yalowe sylke, lynnen, purple and to carue all maner of thinges, and to make what conynge thinge so euer is geuen him, with thy wyse men, and with the wyse men of my lorde kynge Dauid thy father. And Salomon nombred all the straungers in the londe of Israel, acordinge to the nombre whan Dauid his father nombred them: and there were founde an hundreth  $\mathfrak{g}$  fiftye thousande, thre thousande and sixe hūdreth. And of the same he made thre score and ten thousande bearers of burthens, and foure score thousande hewers vpō  $\mathfrak{F}$  mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth ouerseers, which helde  $\mathfrak{F}$  people at their worke.

The inf. Chapter.

ND Salomon beganne to buylde the 1 A house of the LORDE at Ierusalem vpon the mount Moria, * that was shewed vnto Dauid his father, which Dauid had prepared for the rowme, vpon the corne floore of Arnan the lebusite. In the seconde daye of the seconde moneth in the fourth yeare of his reigne begane he to buylde. And so layed Salomon the foundacion to buylde the house of God: first the length thre score cubytes, the bredth twentye cubites: and the Porche before the wydenes of the house, was twentye cubites longe, but the height was an hundreth and twentye, and he ouerlayed it on the ynsyde with pure golde.

But the greate house syled he with Pyne tre, and ouerlayed it with the best golde, and made palme trees and throwne worke theron, and ouerlayed the house with precious stones to beutifye it. As for the golde, it was golde of Paruaim. And the balkes and postes aboue, and the walles, and the dores of it ouerlayed he with golde, and caused Cherubins to be carued on the walles.

He made also the house of the Most holy, whose length was twentye cubites acordinge to the wydenesse of the house: and the bredth of it was twentye cubites likewyse, and he ouerlayed it with the best golde by sixe hundreth talentes. And for nales he gaue fiftye Sicles of golde in weight, and ouerlayed the chambers with golde. He made also in the house of the most holy, two Cherubins of carued worke, and ouerlayed them with golde: and the length on the wynges of the Cherubins, so that one wynge had fyue cubytes, and touched the wall of the house: and the other wynge had fyue cubytes also, and touched the wynge of the other Cherub.

Euen so had one wynge of the other Cherub fyue cubites likewyse, and touched the wall of the house: and his other wynge had fyue cubites also, and touched the wynge of the other Cherub: so that these wynges of the Cherubins were spred out twentye cubites wyde. And they stode vpō their fete, and their face was turned to the house warde.

He made a vayle also of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and lynenworke, and made Cherubins theron. And before the house he made two pilers fyue and thirtie cubites longe, and the knoppes aboue theron, fyue cubytes. And he made throwne worke for the quere, and put it aboue vpon the pilers: and made an hundreth pomgranates, and put them on the wrythren worke. And he set vp the pilers before the temple, the one on the righte honde, and the other on the lefte: and that on the righte honde called he Boos.

The iiij. Chapter.

E made a brasen altare also, twentye a cubytes longe, and twentye cubytes brode, and ten cubites hye. †And he made a molten lauer ten cubites wyde frō the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubytes hye. And a metelyne of thirtie cubites mighte comprehende it aboute. And ymages of Bullockes were vnder it. And aboute the lauer (which was ten cubites wyde) there were two rowes of knoppes, ý were molten withall.

It stode so vpon the bullockes, that thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue vpon them, and all their hynder partes were on the ynsyde. The thicknesse of it was au hand bredth, and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose. And it conteyned thre thousande Batthes.

And he made ten kettels, wherof he set fyue on the righte hande and fyue on the lefte, to waszshe in them soch thinges as belonged to the burntofferynge, that they mighte thrust them therin: but f lauer (made he) for the prestes to wash in.

Chap. iiij.

Ten golden candelstickes made he also as they ought to be, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made ten tables, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made an hundreth basens of golde. He made a courte likewyse for the prestes, and a greate courte, and dores in the courte, and ouerlayed § dores with brasse. And the lauer set he on the righte syde towarde the south east. And Hiram made cauldrons, shouels and basens.

So Hiram fynished the worke which he made for kynge Salomon in the house of God: namely the two pilers with the roundels and knoppes aboue vpon both the pilers, and both the wrythen ropes to couer both the roundels of  $\hat{y}$  knoppes aboue vpo the pilers, and the foure hundreth pomgranates on both the wrythe ropes, two rowes of pomgranates on euery rope, to couer the roundels of the knoppes that were aboue vpon the pilers.

He made the stoles also and  $\mathring{y}$  kettels vpon the stoles, and a lauer, and twolue bullockes there vnder. And pottes, shouels, fleshokes, and all their vessels made Hiram Abif of pure metall for kynge Salomon vnto the house of the LORDE. In the coaste of Iordane dyd the kynge cause them to be molten in thicke earth betwene Suchoth and Zaredatha.

And Salomon made all these vessels which were so many, that the weight of § metall was not to be soughte out. And Salomon made all the ornamentes for the house of God: namely, the golden altare, the tables and the shewbreds theron, the candelstickes with their lampes of pure golde, to burne before the Quere accordinge to the maner: and the floures and the lampes and the snoffers were of golde, all these were of pure golde.

And the knyues, basens, spones and pottes, were of pure golde. And the intraunce and his dores within vnto the Most holy, and the dores of the house of the temple were of golde. Thus was all  $\mathring{P}$  worke fynished, which Salomon made in the house of the LORDE.

The b. Chapter

A ND Salomon broughte in all  $\frac{1}{2}$  his father Dauid had sanctified," namely, syluer and golde, and all maner of ornamentes, and layed them in the treasures of the house of God. \*The gathered Salomon all the Elders in Israel together, all  $\mathring{y}$  heades of the trybes, prynces of the fathers amoge the childre of Israel vnto Ierusale, to brynge vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto the kynge all the men in Israel at the feast, that is in the seuenth moneth, and all  $\mathring{y}$ Elders in Israel came.

And  $\hat{y}$  Leuites toke the Arke,  $\pi$  broughte it vp with the Tabernacle of witnesse, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle : and  $\hat{y}$  prestes and Leuites broughte them vp. As for kynge Salomon and all the corregacion of Israel that was gathered vnto him before the Arke, they offred shepe and oxen, so many, that no man coulde nombre ner reken them.

Thus the prestes broughte the Arke of  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  33 couenaunt of the LORDE vnto hir place in to the quere of the house, euen in to § Most holy vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, so that the Cherubins spred out their wynges ouer the place of the Arke: and the Cherubins couered the Arke and the staues therof from aboue. And the staues were so longe, y the knoppes of them were sene from the Arke before the quere, but on the outsyde were they not sene. And it was there vnto this daye. And there was nothinge in the Arke, saue the two tables, which Moses put therin at Horeb, whan the LORDE made a couenaunt with the childrē of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of Egipte.

And whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary (for all v prestes that were founde, sanctified them selues, because the courses were not kepte) the Leuites with all those that were vnder Asaph, Heman, Iedithun and their children and brethren, beynge clothed in lynnen, songe with Cymbales, psalteries and harpes, and stode towarde the east parte of the altare, and an hundreth  $\alpha$  twentye prestes with them, which blewe with trompettes. And it was, as yf one dyd trompet and synge, as though a voyce had bene herde of praysinge and geuynge thankes vnto the LORDE.

And whan the voyce arose from § trompettes, cymbales and other instrumentes of musick, and from praysinge the LORDE (because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer) the house of the LORDE

For kynge Salomon offred two and twetye thousande bullockes, and an hundreth thousande and twentye thousande shepe, a so both the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of God.

But the prestes stode in their watches, a B the Leuites with the musicall instrumentes of the LORDE, which kynge Dauid had caused to make for to geue thankes vnto the LORDE, (because his mercy endureth for euer) with psalmes of Dauid thorow their hande. And the prestes blewe trompettes ouer agaynst them, and all Israel stode.

And Salomon halowed the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE, for there prepared he the burntofferynges and the fat of the slayne offeringes: for the brasen altare that Salomon made, might not conteyne all the burntofferinges, meatofferynges, and the fat.

* And at the same tyme helde Salomon a feast seven daies longe, and all Israel with him a very greate congregacion, from Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, and on the eight days helds he a conuccacion. For the dedication of the altare helde they seven daies, and the feast seven dayes also.

But on the thre and twentyeth days of the seuenth moneth he let the people go vnto their tentes ioyfull and with mery hertes because of all the good, that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid, vnto Salomō, and to his people of Israel.

of Israel had not vtterly destroied) those dyd Salomon make trybutaries vnto this daye. As for the children of Israel, Salomon made no bondmen of them vnto his worke, but they were men of warre, and chefe captaynes, and ouer his charettes g horsmen. And the chefe of kynge Salomons officers were two hundreth and fyftie, which ruled the people.

And Salomon caused Pharaos doughter to be fetched vp out of the cite of Dauid, in to the house that he had buylded for her: for he sayde: My wyfe shall not dwell in the house of Dauid the kynge of Israel, for it is sanctifyed, in as moch as ŷ Arke of the LORDE is come in to it.

 Then offred Salomon burntofferynges vnto the LORDE vpon the LORDES altare, which he had buylded before the porche, euery one vpon his daye to offre after the cōmaunde- mente of Moses, on the Sabbathes, Newmones g at the appoynted seasons of the yeare, euen thre tymes, namely in ŷ feast of vnleuended bred, in the feast of wekes, g in the feast of Tabernacles.

with a very greate tryne to Ierusalem (with Camels that bare spyces and golde, and precious stones) to proue Salomon with darke sentences. And whan she came vnto Salomon, she spake vnto him all that she had deuysed in hir mynde. And the kynge tolde her all hir matters, g Salomon had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her.

And whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe the wyszdome of Salomon, and ŷ house that he had buylded, the meates of his table, the dwellinges of his seruauntes, y offices of his mynisters and their garmentes, a his butlers and their apparell, and his parler where he wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, she coulde no longer refrayne. And she sayde vnto the kynge: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaueoure and of thy wyszdome: howbeit I wolde not beleue their 3 wordes, tyll I came my selfe, g sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe of thy greate wyszdome hath not bene tolde me: there is more in § then the fame that I have herde. Happye are thy men, and happie are these thy seruauntes, y allwaye stonde before the, and heare thy wyszdome. Praysed be the LORDE thy God, which had soch pleasure vnto the, that he hath set the vpon his seate to be kynge vnto the LORDE thy God. Because thy God loueth Israel, to set them vp for euer, therfore hath he ordeyned y to be kynge ouer them, that thou shuldest mayntayne iustice and equyte.

And she gaue  $\sqrt[9]{2}$  kynge an hundreth and twentye talentes of golde,  $\mathfrak{g}$  very moch spyce  $\mathfrak{g}$  precious stones. There were no mo soch spyces as these that the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomō. And Hirams seruauntes and the seruauntes of Salomon, which broughte golde from Ophir, broughte costly tymber also  $\mathfrak{g}$  precious stones.

And of the same costly tymber dyd Salomon cause to make stares in the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. And the kynge made a greate seate of Yuery, and ouerlaied it with pure golde: and the seate had sixe steppes, and a fotestole of golde festened vnto the seate, and it had two leanynge postes vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode beside the leanynge postes, and there stode twolue Lions vpö the syxe steppes on both the sides. In all realmes hath not soch one bene made.

And all kynge Salomons drynkynge vessels were of golde, and all the vessels of the house of the wod of Libanus, were of pure golde: for syluer was rekened nothinge in Salomons tyme. For the kynges shippes wente vpon the See with the seruauntes of Hirā, g came once in thre yeare, and brought golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes and Pecockes.

Thus was kynge Salomon greater then all the kynges vpon earth, in riches and wisdome. And all the kynges of  $\oint$  earth desired (to se) Salomons face, and to heare his wysdome, which God had geuen him in his hert. And they brought him yearly euery mā his present: Iewels of siluer and golde, raymēt, harnesse, spyces, horses and Mules.

And Salomon had foure thousande charethorses, "and twolue thousande horsmen, and put them in the charet cities, and with the kyuge at Ierusalem. And he was lorde ouer all the kynges from the water vnto the londe of the Philistynes, and to the coaste of Egipte. And the kynge brought it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders, as there were Molbery trees in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto him out of Egipte, and out of all countres.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, both of his first and of his last, beholde, it is writte in the Cronicles of the prophet Nathan, and in the prophecies of Ahia of Silo,  $\mathfrak{g}$  in  $\mathfrak{F}$ actes of Ieddi the Seer against Ieroboā  $\mathfrak{F}$ sonne of Nebat. And Salomō reigned at Ierusalē ouer all Israel fortie yeares. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers,  $\mathfrak{g}$  was buried in the cyte of Dauid his father. And Roboā his sonne was kīge ī his steade.

And Roboam toke Mahelath & doughter of C Ieremoth y sonne of Dauid to wife, a Abihail the doughter of Eliab y sonne of Isai, which bare him these sonnes: Ieus, Semaria 🛪 Saham. After her toke he Maecha the doughter of Absalom, which bare him Abia, Athai Sisa and Selomith. But Roboam loued Maecha the doughter of Absalom better then all his wyues g concubynes: for he had eightene wyues and thre score cocubynes, and begat eight a twentye sonnes, and thre score doughters. And Roboam set Abia the sonne of Maecha to be heade and prynce amonge his brethren: for he thoughte to make him kynge: for he was wyse, a more mightie then all his sonnes in all the countrees of Iuda g Ben Iamin, and in all the stronge cities. ## The rbi. Chapter.

There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, all  $\hat{y}$  There is a couenaunt with Baesa the lass the syluer and golde in the kynge of Syria, which dwelt at Damascon, and caused to saye vnto him : There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, and estimate the syluer and golde, that thou all  $\hat{y}$  the set of the lass the syluer of the syluer betwene my father and thy father, therfore haue I sent  $\hat{y}$  syluer and golde, that thou kynge of Israel, that he maye departe fro me. Benadad herkened vnto kynge Asa, and sent his hoost agaynst the cities of Israel, which smote Eion, Dan and Abel Maim, and all the corne cities of Nephtali. Whan Baesa herde that, he lefte of from buyldinge Rama, and ceassed from his worke. But kynge Asa toke all Iuda vnto him, and caried awaye ŷ stones and tymber (wherwith Baesa buylded) and he buylded Geba g Mizpa withall.

At the same tyme came Hanani the Seer 33 vnto Asa the kynge of Iuda, and sayde vnto him: Because thou hast trusted vnto the kynge of Syria, and not put thy trust in the LORDE thy God, therfore is the power of the kynge of Syria escaped thy hade. *Were not the Moryans and Lybians a greate multitude with exceadinge many charettes and horsmen? Yet gaue the LORDE them in to thy hande, whan thou dyddest put thy trust in him : for the eyes of the LORDE loke rounde aboute all londes, to strength them y are in him with all their hert. Thou hast done vnwysely, therfore shalt thou have warre from hēce forth. But Asa was wroth at y Seer, and put him in preson: for he murmured with him ouer this thinge. And Asa oppressed certayne of the people at y same tyme.

These actes of Asa both first and last, beholde, they are wrytten in the boke of  $\hat{y}$  kynges of Iuda  $\mathfrak{q}$  Israel. And Asa was diseased in his fete in the nyne and thirtieth yeare of his reigne, and endured ther ouer.  $\dagger$  Nether soughte he the LORDE in his sicknesse, but trusted vnto Phisicians. Thus fell Asa on slepe with his fathers,  $\mathfrak{q}$  dyed in the one and fortieth yeare of his reigne,  $\mathfrak{q}$  was buried in

At that tyme shall it not be well with him that goeth out and in: for there shal be greate vproures vpon all them  $\dot{y}$  dwell on the earth. For one people shall all to smyte another, g one cite another: for God shal vexe them with all maner of trouble. But be ye stronge, and let not youre handes be feble: for youre worke hath his rewarde.

Whan Asa herde these wordes, and the 36 prophecicge (of Asarias the sonne) of Obed the prophet, he toke a corage vnto him, and put awaye the abhominacions out of all $ loude of Juda and Ben Iamin, and out of the cities that he had wonne vpon mount Ephraim: and renued the LORDES altare, which stode before the porche of the LORDE. And all Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasses and Simcon: for there fell many vnto him out of Israel, whan they sawe that the LORDE his God was with him. And they resorted vnto Ierusalem in the thirde moneth of the fyftenth years of the reigne of Asa, and the same days offred they vnto the LORDE of the spoyle that they had broughte, seuen hudreth oxen, and seuen thousande shepe.

■ And they entred in to § couenaunt, that they wolde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, with all their hert and with all their soule. And who so euer wolde not seke § LORDE God of Israel, shulde dye, both small g greate, both man and woman : and they sware vnto the LORDE with loude voyce, with shoutinge, with trompettos and with shawmes. And all Iuda were glad ouer the ooth : for they had sworne with all their hert, and they soughte him with a whole wyll : and he was founde of them, and the LORDE gaue them rest on euery syde.

And Asa  $\mathring{y}$  kynge put downe his mother from the mynistracion, that she had founded in the groue vnto Miplezeth. And Asa roted out hir Miplezeth, and beate it in sunder, and brent it by the broke Cedron. But the hye places were not put downe out of Israel. Yet was the hort of Asa perfecte as longe as he lyued. And loke what his father had halowed, and that he him selfe had halowed, he broughte it in to  $\mathring{y}$  house of God, syluer, golde and ormanetes. And there was no warre vnto the fyue and thirtieth yeare of the reigne of Asa.

Ierusalem fell before the LORDE,  $\mathfrak{g}$  worshipped the LORDE. And the Leuites of  $\mathfrak{F}$ childre of the Kahathites  $\mathfrak{g}$  of the children of the Corahites arose to prayse the LORDE God of Israel with loude voyce on hye. And they gat them vp early in  $\mathfrak{F}$  mornynge, and wete forth by the wyldernesse of Thekoa.

And whan they were goynge out, Iosaphat Ð stode, a sayde: Herke vnto me O Iuda, a ye indwellers of Ierusale: Put youre trust in the LORDE youre God, g ye shal be safe: and gene credence vnto his prophetes, a ye shall prospere. And he gaue councell vnto y people, and appoynted the syngers vnto § LORDE, and them that gaue prayse in the bewtye of holynes, to go before the harnessed me, a to saye: O geue thankes vnto the LORDE, for his mercy endureth for euer. And whan they beganne to geue thankes and prayse, * the LORDE caused the hynder watch that was come agaynst Iuda, to come vpon the childre of Ammon, Moab a them of mount Seir, and they smote them. Then stode the children of Ammon & Moab agaynst them of mount Seir, to damne them, and to destroye them. And whan they had destroyed them of mount Seir, one helped another to destroye them selues also. And whan Iuda came to Mispa vnto the wyldernes, they turned them towarde the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vpo the earth, so that none was escaped.

E And Iosaphat came with his people to deuyde the spoyles of them. And they founde amonge them so moch goodes and rayment and precious Iewels (which they toke from them) that they coulde not beare them. And thre dayes were they deuydinge the spoyle, for it was so moch. On the fourth daye came they together in to the valley of blessynge: for there blessed they the LORDE. Therfore is the place called the valley of blessinge vnto this daye.

So enery man of Iuda  $\mathfrak{g}$  Ierusalem turned back agayne,  $\mathfrak{g}$  Iosaphat before them, to go to lemale with ioye: for  $\mathfrak{F}$  LORDE had geuen them gladnesse on their enemies. "Afterwarde dyd Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda agree with Ahasia the kynge of Israel, which was vngodly in his doynges. And he agreed with him to make shippes, for to go vpon the see. And they made the shippes at Ezeon Gaber. But Elieser the sonne of Dodana of Maresa prophecied agaynst Iosaphat, and sayde: Because thou hast agreed with Ahasia, therfore hath the LORDE broken thy workes. And so  $\hat{v}$  shippes were broken,  $\mathfrak{g}$  mighte not go vpon the See.

ND they of Ierusalem" made Ochosias his yogest sonne kynge in his steade : for the men of warre that came with the hoost of the Arabians, had slayne all y first, therfore reigned Ochosias the sonne of Ioram kynge of Iuda. Two and fortye yeare olde was Ochosias whan he was made kynge, and reigned one yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Athalia the doughter of Amri. And he walked also in y wayes of the house of Achab: for his mother entysed him so y he was vngodly. Therfore dyd he euell in y sighte of the LORDE, euen as y house of Achab: for they were his councell geuers after his fathers death, to destroye him, and he walked after their councell.

And he wente with Ioram the sonne of 33Achab kynge of Israel, to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, agaynst Hasael the kynge of Syria. But the Syriās smote Ioram, so  $\dot{y}$ he turned back to be healed at Iesreel: for he had woundes that were geuen him at Rama, whan he foughte with Hasael the kynge of Syria. And  $\dagger$  Asarias the sonne of Ioram kynge of Iuda wēte downe to vyset Ioram  $\dot{y}$ sonne of Achab at Iesreel, which laye sicke : For it was ordeyned of God vnto Ochosias, that he shulde come to Ioram,  $\mathfrak{g}$  so to go forth with Ioram agaynst Iehu  $\dot{y}$  sonne of Nimsi,  $\dot{z}$  whom the LORDE had anoynted to rote out the house of Achab.

Now whan Iehu wolde be aueged of  $\mathring{y}$  house 0of Achab, he founde certayne rulers of Iuda, and  $\mathring{y}$  childre of Ochosias brethren which serued Ochosias, and he slewe them. \$ And he soughte Ochosias, and they ouertoke him, whā he had hyd him at Samaria:  $\frak{g}$  he was broughte vnto Iehu, which slewe him, and they buried him, for they sayde: He is the sonne of Iosaphat, which soughte  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE with all his hert. And there was no man more of the house of Ochosias that mighte be kynge.

But Iosabeath y kynges sister toke Ioas § sonne of Ochosias, and stale him awaye fro amonge the kynges childre y were slayne, g put him with his norse in a chamber. Thus Iosabeath kynge Iorams doughter, the wyfe of loiada the prest, hyd him from Athalia. so y he was not slayne: for she was Ochosias sister. And he was hyd with them in the house of God sixe yeares, for so moch as Athalia was quene in the londe.

- a B<sup>UT</sup> in the seventh years was Ioiada bolde, "and toke the rulers over hundreds: namely Asaria ý sonne of Ieraham, Ismael ý sonne of Iohanan, Asaria y sonne of Obed, Maeseia y sonne of Adaia, and Elisaphat y sonne of Sichri with him, in to the couenaunt: and they wente aboute in Iuda, and broughte Equites together out of all the cities of Iuda, and the chefe fathers of Israel, to come vnto Ierusalem. And all the cogregacion made a couenaunt with the kynge in the house of God, and he sayde vnto them : Beholde, the kynges sonne shal be kynge, * euē as the LORDE spake cocernynge the children of Dauid.
- B This is it therfore y ye shal do: The thirde parte of you that entre on the Sabbath, shalbe amonge the prestes g Leuites, which are dorekepers at the thresholdes : g one thirde parte in the kynges house, and one thirde parte at the grounde porte. But all the people shalbe in the courtes of the house of the LORDE, and that no man go in to the house of the LORDE, excepte the prestes and Leuites that mynister there, they shal go in: for they are halowed. And let all y people wayte vpon the LORDE. And the Leuites shal get them rounde aboute § kynge, euery one with his weapen in his hande. And who so els goeth in to y house, let him dye. And they shall be with the kynge wha he goeth out g in.
- C And the Leuites g all Iuda dyd as Ioiada y prest had commaunded, and every one toke his men that entred on the Sabbath, with those y wente of on the Sabbath: for Ioiada y prest suffred not those two companies to parte asunder. And Ioiada y prest gaue the captaynes ouer hundreds speares g shyldes, and kynge Dauids weapens, which were in the

And they broughte forth the kynges sonne, g set the crowne vpon his heade, and gaue them the † wytnesse, g made him kynge. And Ioiada with his sonnes anoynted him, g sayde: God saue the kynge.

But whan Athalia herde the noyse of 🕴 🖬 people y ranne together and praysed y kynge. she wente forth to the people in to y house of the LORDE, and loked: and beholde, \* kynge stode in his place at § intraunce, and the rulers and trompettes aboute \$ kynge: and all the people of the londe were glad, a blewe the trompes, and there were syngers y coulde playe with all maner of musicall instrumentes. But she rëte hir clothes, a sayde: Sedicion, sedicion. Neuertheles Ioiada 🕴 prest gat him forth with the captaynes ouer hundreds and rulers of the hoost, and sayde vnto them: Brynge her forth betwene 🕏 walles, g who so euer foloweth her, shal be slayne with  $\psi$  swerde: for the prest had comaunded, that she shulde not be slayne in § house of the LORDE. And they layed handes on her. And whan she came at the intraunce of the horsgate of the kynges house, they put her to death there.

And Ioiada made a couenaunt betwene him E and all the people, and the kynge, y they shulde be the people of the LORDE. Thē wete all the people in to the house of Baal and destroyed it, g brake downe his altares g ymages, g slewe Mathan the prest of Baal before the altare. And Ioiada appoynted y officers in the house of the LORDE amoge the prestes g Leuites # whom Dauid had ordeyned for y house of the LORDE, to offre burnt sacrifices vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, as it is wrytten in the  $\hat{y}$  lawe of Moses: with ioye  $\mathfrak{q}$ songes made by Dauid. And y porters set he at § gates of § house of § LORDE, § none shulde entre, which were defiled with eny maner of thinge.

And he toke the captaynes ouer hudreds and the mightie men and lordes of y people, and all the people of the londe, and brought the kinge downe from the house of the LORDE, and broughte him thorow the hye porte of the kynges house, and caused the TOAS<sup>a</sup> was seuen yeare olde whan he was ମ made kynge, and reigned fortie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Zibea of Berseba. And Ioas dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada the prest lyued. And Ioiada gaue him two wives, a he begat sonnes a doughters. Afterwarde deuysed Ioas to renue the house of the LORDE, g gathered together the prestes and Leuites, g sayde vnto the: Go forth vnto all the cities of Iuda, g gather the money of all Israel, to repayre y house of God yearly, and do it righte soone : but the Leuites made no haist.

Then the kynge called Ioiada the pryncipall, and sayde vnto him: Why lokest thou not vnto the Leuites, y they bringe in from Iuda and Ierusalem, *the collection which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE appoynted to be gathered amoge Israel for the Tabernacle of witnes? For y vngodly Athalia g hir sonnes haue waisted the house of God: and all that was halowed for the house of the LORDE, haue they bestowed on Baalim.

Then commaunded the kynge to make a chest, and to set it without at the intraunce of the house of the LORDE: g caused it to be proclamed in Iuda and Ierusalē, that they shulde bringe in to the LORDE, the colleccio, which Moses the seruaut of God appointed vnto Israel in 🕴 wildernes. The were all 🖞 rulers glad, g so were all y people, g brought it, and cast it in to the chest, tyll it was full.

And whan the tyme was y the Leuites shulde brynge the Arke at y kinges comaundement (whan they sawe v there was moch money therin) then came the kinges scrybe,  $\tau$  he  $\psi$ was appoynted of the chefe prest, and emptyed the chest, and caried it againe in to his place. Thus dyd they euery daye, so that they gathered moch money together. And v kinge and Ioiada gaue it vnto ŷ workmasters of ŷ house of the LORDE, and they hired masons and carpenters to repayre the house of y LORDE, and men that coulde worke in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of  $\S$  LORDE.

And the labourers wrought, so that y re- C pairinge in & worke wente forwarde thorow their hande, and they set the house of God in his bewtye, and made it stronge. And whan they had perfourmed this, they brought the resydue of the money, before the kynge and Ioiada, wherof there were made vessels for the house of the LORDE, vessels for the ministracion and burntofferinge, spones and ornamentes of golde and siluer. And they offred burntofferynges allwaye in the house of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada lyued.

And Ioiada waxed olde, and had lyued longe ynough, and dyed, a was an hundreth and thirtie yeare olde whan he dyed: and they buried him in the cite of Dauid, amonge the kynges, because he had done good vnto Israel, and towarde God a his house. And after the death of Ioiada, came the rulers in Iuda, and worshipped the kynge.

Then consented the kynge vnto the. And B they forsoke the house of the LORDE God of their fathers, and serued y groues and ymages. Then came v wrath of the LORDE vpō Iuda and Ierusalem because of this trespace of theirs. Yet sent he prophetes vnto the, v they shulde turne vnto the LORDE, g they testified vnto thē: but they wolde not heare.

And the sprete of God came vpon †Zachary the sonne of Ioiada the prest, which stode ouer y people, g sayde vnto thē: Thus sayeth God: Wherfore do ye transgresse the comaundementes of the LORDE, which shall not be to youre prosperite: for ye haue forsaken v LORDE, therfore shal he forsake you. Neuertheles they conspyred agaynst him, a stoned him at y kynges comaundement in y courte of the house of the LORDE. And Ioas v kinge thought not on the mercy y Ioiada his father had done for him, but slewe his sonne. Notwithstondinge wha he dyed, he sayde: The LORDE shal loke vpon it, and requyre it.

And whan the yeare was gone aboute, y 👔 power of the Syrians wente vp, c came to Iuda & Ierusalem, and destroyed the rulers in the people, and sent all the spoiles of them vnto Damascon. For the power of the Syrians came but with a fewe men, yet gaue y LORDE a very greate power in to their hande: because they had forsaken § LORDE God of their fathers. They executed iudgment also vpon Ioas. And whan they departed fro him, they lefte him in greate sicknesses.

Neuertheleshisseruaintes conspyred against him (because of the bloude of the childrē of Ioiada the prest)  $\mathfrak{g}$  slewe him vpō his bed,  $\mathfrak{g}$ he dyed, and they buryed him in the cite of Dauid, but not amonge the sepulcres of the kynges. They that conspyred against him, were these: Sabad  $\mathfrak{g}$  sonne of Simeath the Ammonitisse, and Iosabad the sonne of Simrith the Moabitisse. As for his sonnes, and the summe that was gathered vnder him, and the buyldinge of the house of God, beholde, they are wrytten in the storye in the boke of the kynges. And Amasias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

a FYUE and twentye yeare olde was Amasias whan he was made kynge, and reigned nyne and twentye yeare at lerusalem. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalem. And he dyd y which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, but not with a whole hert. Now whan his kingdome was in streigth, he slewe his serunutes which had slayne the kinge his father. But their childre slewe he not, for so is it wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses, *where the LORDE comaundeth, and sayeth: The fathers shal not dye for the children, nether shal the children dye for the fathers: but euery one shal die for his awne synne.

And Amasias broughte Iuda together, and set them after the fathers houses, after the rulers ouer thousandes a ouer hundreds amonge all Iuda and Ben Iamin, and nombred them from twentye yeare olde g aboue, and founde of the thre hundreth thousande chosen men, which were able to go forth to the warre, and caryed speares and shyldes. And out of Israel appoynted he an hundreth thousande stronge men of warre for an hundreth talentes of siluer. But there came a man of God vnto him, and sayde: O kynge, Let not the hoost of Israel come with the: for the LORDE is not with Israel, nether with all the childre of Ephraun. For yf thou commest to shewe thy boldnes in the battaill, God shal make the fall before thine enemies. For God hath power to helpe, and to cause for to fall. Amasias sayde vnto the man of God: What shal be done then with y hundreth talentes y I haue geue

And the childre of Iuda toke ten thousande of the alyue, whom they broughte vp to the toppe of a mountayne, and cast the downe headlinges from the toppe of the mount, so that they all to barst in sunder. But ŷ childre of the men of warre whom Amasias had sent awaye agayne (that they shulde not go to the battayll with his people) fell in to the cities of Iuda, from Samaria vnto Beth Horon, and smote thre thousande of me, and toke moch spoyle.

And whan Amasias came agayne from the C slaughter of the Edomites, he broughte the goddes of the children of Seir, and made them his goddes, and worshipped before them,  $\mathfrak{a}^{+}$ brent incense vnto them. Then was the LORDE very wroth at Amasias, a sent vnto him a prophet, which sayde vnto him: Why sekest thou the goddes of the people, which coulde not delyuer their folke from thy hande? And whan he talked with him, the kynge sayde vnto him : Haue they made y of the kynges councell? Ceasse, why wilt thou be smytten? Then the prophet ceassed, a sayde: I perceaue, that the LORDE is mynded to destroye y, because thou hast done this, and herkenest not vnto my councell.

"And Amasias y kynge of Iuda toke coucell, g sent vnto Ioas the sonne of Ioahas ŷ sonne of Iehu, kynge of Israel, saycge: Come, let vs se one another. But loas the kynge of Israel sent vnto Amasias ŷ kynge of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne in Libanus sent vnto § Cedre tre in Libanus, sayēge: Geue thy doughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest in Libanus ranne ouer y hawthorne, a trode it downe. Thou thinkest: Beholde, I have smytten the Edomites, therfore is thine hert proude to boaste. Neuertheles Amasias consented not: for so was it broughte to passe of God,  $\mathring{y}$  they mighte be geuen in to the handes of the enemies, because they soughte the goddes of  $\mathring{y}$  Edomites. Then wente Ioas the kynge of Israel vp,  $\mathfrak{g}$  they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kynge of Iuda, at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smytte before Israel, and they fled euery one vnto his tent.

And Ioas the kynge of Israel toke Amasias ŷ kynge of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas ŷ sonne of Ioahas, at Beth Semes, g broughte him to Ierusalem, g brake downe the wall of Ierusalē, from ŷ porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, euē foure hundreth cubites longe: and toke with him all the golde, and siluer, and all the ornamentes that were foūde in ŷ house of God with Obed Edom, and in the treasures in the kynges house, and the childrē to pledge vnto Samaria. And Amasias the sonne of Ioas kynge of Iuda, liued after the death of Ioas the sonne of Ioahas kynge of Israel fiftene yeare.

What more there is to saye of Amasias (both the first and last) beholde, it is written in  $\hat{y}$  boke of the kynges of Iuda  $\mathfrak{g}$  Israel. And fro the tyme forth that Amasias departed from the LORDE, they conspyred against him at Ierusalem. But he fled vnto Lachis. The sent they after him vnto Lachis,  $\mathfrak{g}$  slewe him there. And they brought him vpo horses  $\mathfrak{g}$ buried him beside his fathers in the cite of Iuda.

The rrbi. Chapter.

THEN all the people of Iuda toke Osias, A "which was syxtene yeare olde, and made him kynge in steade of his father Amasias. He builded Eloth, a broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kynge was fallen on slepe with his fathers. Sixtene yeare olde was Osias whan he was made kinge, and reigned two and fiftie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Iechalia of Ierusalem. And he did right in the syght of the LORDE, as his father Amasias had done, and soughte God as longe as Zacharias lyued, which taughte in the visyons of God: and as longe as he sought the LORDE, God made him to prospere.

For he wente forth, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, and brake downe y walles of Gath, and the walles of Iabne, and the walles of Aszdod, and buylded cities aboute Aszdod, g amonge the Philistynes. For God helped him agaynst the Philistines, against the Arabians, agaynst them of Gur Baal, g agaynst the Meunites. And  $\hat{y}$  Ammonites gaue Osias presentes, g his name came in to Egipte: for he was exceedinge stronge. And Osias buylded towres at Ierusalem vpon the cornerporte, and on the valley gate, and on other corners, and made them stronge. He buylded castels also in the wyldernesse, and dygged many welles: for he had many catell, both in the medewes and in the playnes, huszbandmen also and wynegardeners on the mountaynes and on Carmel: for he delyted in huszbandrye.

And Osias had an hoost of men of warre 13 goynge forth to the battaill, which were nobred vnder the hande of Ieiel the scrybe a of Maesa the offycer, vnder the hade of Hanania of the kynges rulers. And the nombre of the chefe fathers amonge the stronge me of warre, was two thousande and syxe hundreth. And at Ierusale he made ordinaunce coningly, to be vpon the towres and in the pynnacles, to shute arowes and greate stones. And the fame of him came farre abrode, because he was specially helped, tyll he became mightie.

And whan his power was greate, his hert C arose to his awne destruccion: for he trespaced agaynst the LORDE his God, and wente in to the temple of the LORDE, to burne incense vpon the altare of incense. But Asarias the prest wente after him, and foure score prestes with him, valeaunt men, and withstode kynge Osias, and saide vnto him: *It belongeth not vnto thy offyce (Osias) to burne incense vnto the LORDE, but vnto the prestes belongeth it, euen vnto the children of Aaron, which are halowed to burne incense. Go forth out of the Sanctuary: for thou offendest, and it shall be no worshippe vnto the before God the LORDE.

And Osias was wroth, and had a censoure in his hande. <sup>6</sup>And whyle he murmured with the prestes, the leprosy spronge out of his foreheade in the presence of the prestes in

And Osias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buryed him with his fathers in the pece of grounde beside § kynges sepulcres: for they sayde: He is leporous. And Iotham his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The rybij. Chapter.

a OTHAM was fyue and twentye yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the daughter of Sadoc: a he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE as did Osias his father: sauynge ý he wente not in to the temple of the LORDE, and the people yet marred them selues. He buylded the hye porte of the house of ŷ LORDE, and on the wall of Ophel buylded he moch, and buylded the cities vpon the mountaynes of Iuda, and in the woddes buylded he castels and towres.
a And he fought with the kinge of the child.

And he fought with the kinge of the children of Ammon, and ouercame them, so that the childre of Ammon gaue him ŷ same yeare an hundreth talentes of siluer, ten thousande quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barlye. So moch dyd the children of Ammon geue him also in ŷ seconde g thirde yeare. Thus became Iotham mightye, for he gyded his wayes before the LORDE his God.

What more there is to saye of Iotham,  $\mathfrak{g}$ all his warres, and his waies, beholde, it is wrytten in  $\mathfrak{P}$  boke of the kinges of Israel  $\mathfrak{g}$ Iuda. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was he whan he was made kynge,  $\mathfrak{g}$  reigned sixtene yeare at lerusalē. And Iothā fell on slepe with his fathers,  $\mathfrak{g}$  they buryed him in the cite of Danid, and Achas his sonne was kynge in his steade. A CHAS <sup>b</sup> was twentye yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd not that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as did Dauid his father, but walked in the wayes of the kinges of Israel, and made molten ymages vnto Baalim, and brent incense in the valley of the children of Hennon, and 'bret his awne sonnes in \$ fire, after the abhominacions of the Heithen, who the LORDE expelled before the childre of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice and brent incense vpon the hye places and vpon the hilles, and amoge all grene trees.

Therfore dyd the LORDE his God delyuer him in to the hande of the kynge of Syria, so that they smote him, and caryed awaye a greate multitude of his men presoners, and broughte them to Damascon. He was geuen also vnder the hande of the kynge of Israel, so y he dyd a greate slaughter vpon him. For Pecah the sonne of Romelia smote in Iuda an hundreth a twentye thousande in one daye (which all were valeaunt men) euē because they had forsaken & LORDE God of their fathers. And Sichri a mightie mā of Ephraim slewe Maeseia y kinges sonne, a Asrikam the prynce of the house, a Elkana the nexte vnto the kynge. And the children of Israel caried of their brethren presoners two hundreth thousande, wemen, sonnes and doughters, and toke a greate spoyle from them, and broughte the spoyle vnto Samaria.

But euē there was there a prophet of y | BLORDE, whose name was Obed, which wete out to mete y hoost that came to Samaria, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, because the LORDE God of youre fathers is wroth at Iuda, therfore hath he geuen them ouer in to youre handes: but ye haue slayne them so abhominably, that it is come vnto heauë. Now thinke ye to subdue the children of luda and Ierusalem, to be bondmen and bondmaydens vnto you. Is not this a trespace then with you agaynst the LORDE youre God? are easier to be halowed then the prestes) and many of the burnt offerynges were with the fat of the thankofferynges and drynkofferynges to the burntsacrifices. Thus was the ministracion of the house of the LORDE prepared. And Ezechias reioysed with all the people, that they were prepared with God: for it was done righte haistely.

The ppr. Chapter.

ND Ezechias sent in to all Israel and Iuda, and wrote letters vnto Ephraim and Manasses, that they shulde come to the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, to kepe easter vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And the kynge helde a councell with his rulers, and all the cogregacion at Ierusalem, *to kepe Passeouer in the seconde moneth: for at that tyme they coulde not kepe it, because the prestes were not sanctified ynough, and the people were not yet come together vnto Ierusalem. And it pleased the kynge well and all the cogregacion. And they appointed it to be proclamed thorow out all Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, that they shulde come to kepe Passeouer vnto the LORDE God of Israel: for they were not many to kepe it as it is wrytten.

And the postes wente with the letters from the hande of the kynge and of his rulers thorow out all Israell and Iuda, at y kynges commaundement, and sayde: Ye children of B Israel, turne you vnto the LORDE God of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and he shal turne to y escaped, which are lefte ouer amonge you from the hande of the kynge of Assur: and be not ye as youre fathers and brethren, which rebelled agaynst the LORDE God of their fathers, and he gaue the ouer in to desolation as ye se youre selues. Be not ye hardnecked now as were youre fathers, but offre youre hade vnto the LORDE, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for euer, and serve the LORDE youre God, g so shal the indignacion of his wrath turne awaye from you. For yf ye turne ynto the LORDE, then shal youre brethren and children haue mercy in the sighte of them which holde them in captinyte, that they may come agayne in to this londe : for the LORDE youre God is gracious and mercifull, and shal not turne awaye his face from you, yf ye conuerte vnto him.

And the postes wente from one cite to  $(\mathfrak{C}$  another in the londe of Ephraim and Manasses, and vnto Zabulon. But they mocked them and laughed them to scorne. Yet were there some of Asser and Manasses, and of Zabulon, that submytted them selues, and came to Ierusalem. And the hande of God came in to Iuda, so that he gaue the one hert to do after the commaundement of the kynge and the rulers at the worde of the LORDE. And there came together vnto Ierusalē a greate people, to kepe the feast of vnleuended bred in the seconde moneth, a very greate congregacion.

And they gat them vp, and put downe v ‡ altares that were at Ierusalem, and all the incense put they awaye, and cast it in to the broke Cedron, and slewe the Passeouer on the fourtenth daye of the secode moneth. And y prestes and Leuites were ashamed, and halowed them selues, and broughte the burntofferynges to the house of the LORDE, and stode in their ordinaunce, as it was acordinge, after the lawe off Moses the man of God. And the prestes sprenkled the bloude from the hande of the Leuites: for there were many in the cogregacion which were not sanctified, therfore dyd the Leuites kyll Passeouer for them which were not clensed, that they might be sanctified vnto the LORDE.

There were many people also of Ephraim, Manasses, Isachar and Zabulon, which were not cleane, but ate the Easter lambe not as it is wrytten: for Ezechias prayed for them, and sayde : The LORDE, which is gracious, shalbe mercifull vnto all them that prepare their hertes vnto God, to seke the LORDE God of their fathers, though they be not clensed after the holy purificacion. And the LORDE herde Ezechias, and healed the Thus the children of Israel that people. were founde at Ierusalē, helde y feast of vnleuended bred seuen dayes with greate ioye. And the Leuites and prestes praysed the LORDE every daye with the loude instrumentes of the LORDE. And Ezechias spake hertely vnto all y Leuites, which had good vnderstondinge in the LORDE, and they ate the feast seuen dayes, and offred thākofferynges, and gaue thankes vnto y LORDE God of their fathers.

And all the congregacion deuysed to kepe 2

the feast yet other seuē dayes, and so they helde it those seuen dayes also with ioye: for Ezechias the kinge of Iuda gaue an Heueofferynge for the cögregacion, euen a thousande hullockes, and seuen thousande shepe. But the rulers gaue an Heueofferinge for  $\mathbf{\hat{y}}$ congregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and ten thousande shepe. And many of the prestes sanctified them selues.

And the whole congregacion of Iuda reioysed, the prestes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came out of Israel, and the straungers that were come out of the londe of Israel, and they that dwelt in Iuda, and greate ioye was there at Ierusalem: for sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid the kynge of Israel, was there no soch (ioye) at Ierusalē. And the prestes and Leuites stode vp and blessed the people, and their voyce was herde, and their prayer came in to his holy habitacion in heauen.

The prri. Chapter.

ND whan all this was fynished, all the Israelites that were founde in § cities of Iuda, wente out, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and brake downe the hye places and altares out of all Iuda, Ben Iamin, Ephraim and Manasses, tyll they had destroyed thē. And all the children of Israel wente agayne euery one to his possession vnto their cities.

But Ezechias set the prestes and Leuites in their ordinaunces, euery one after his office, both the prestes and Leuites, for the burntsacrifices and thankofferynges, to mynister, to goue thankes and prayse in the gates of the hoost of the LORDE. And the kynge gaue his porcion of his substaūce for the burntofferynges in the mornynge and euenynge, and for the burntofferynges of the Sabbath, and of the newmone and of the feastes, as it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE.

And he spake vnto  $\hat{y}$  people which dwelt at lerusalem, that they shulde geue porciōs vnto the prestes and Leuites,  $\hat{y}$  they mighte the more stedfastly endure in the lawe of the LORDE. And whā  $\hat{y}$  worde came forth, the childre of Israel gaue many fyrst frutes of corne, wyne, oyle, hony, and all maner increace of the felde, and broughte in moch of all maner tithes. And the children of Israel and Iuda which dwelt in the cities of Iuda, broughte the tithes also of oxen and shepe, and the tithes of soch thinges as were sanctifyed, which they had halowed vnto the LORDE their God, and made here an heape, and there an heape. In the thirde moneth begane they to laye vpon heapes, and in the seuenth moneth dyd they fynishe it.

And wha Ezechias with the rulers wente C in, and sawe the heapes, they praysed the LORDE, and his people of Israel. And Ezechias axed the prestes and Leuites concernynge the heapes. And Asaria the prest the chefe in the house of Sadoc, sayde vnto him: Sence the tyme that they beganne to brynge the Heueofferynges in to y house of the LORDE, we have eaten, and are satisfied, and yet is there lefte ouer: for the LORDE hath blessed his people, therfore is this heape Then commaunded the kynge, lefte ouer. that they shulde prepare chestes in the house of the LORDE. And they prepared them, and put in the Heueofferynges, and tithes and that which was halowed, faithfully.

And the ouersighte of the same had Chanania the Leuite, and Simei his brother the seconde, and Iehiel, Asasia, Naglath, Asahel, Ierimoth, Iosabad, Eliel, Iesmachia, Mahath and Benaia, ordeyned of the hande off Chanania and Simei his brother, acordinge to the commaundement of kynge Ezechias. But Asaria was prynce in the house of God. And Core y sonne of Iemna the Leuite the porter of the Eastgate was ouer the frewyllinge giftes of God (which were geuen for Heueofferynges vnto the LORDE) and ouer the Most holy. And vnder his hande were, Eden, Miniamin, Iesua, Semaia, Amaria, and Sachania in the cities of the prestes vpon credence, that they shulde geue vnto their brethre acordinge to their courses, to the leest as to the greatest.

And vnto them that were counted for men childre from thre yeare olde and aboue, amonge all the that were in to the house of the LORDE, euery one vpo his daye to their office in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened for prestes in the house of their fathers, and the Leuites from twentye yeare and aboue, in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened amonge their children, wyues, sonnes and doughters amonge the whole congregacion: for that which was halowed, sanctifyed they vpon credence. There were men also named by А name amonge Aarons children the prestes vpon the feldes of the suburbes in all  $\S$  cities, that they shulde geue porcions vnto all the men children amonge the prestes, and to all them that were nombred amonge the Leuites.

Thus dyd Ezechias in all Iuda, and dyd that which was good, righte and true in the sighte of the LORDE his God. And in all the busynes that he toke in hāde concernynge the seruyce of the house of God, acordinge to the lawe and commaundement, to seke his God, that dyd he with all his hert, and therfore prospered he well.

The grrif. Chapter.

FTER these actes and faithfulnes came Sennacherib<sup>4</sup> the kynge of Assur, and wente in to Iuda, and pitched before the stroge cities, and thoughte to plucke them vnto him. And whan Ezechias sawe that Sennacherib came, and that his face stode to fighte agaynst Ierusalem, he deuysed with his rulers and mightie men, to couer the waters of the welles that were without the cite, and they helped him: and there gathered together a greate people, and couered all v welles and water brokes in the myddes of the londe, and sayde : Lest the kynges of Assur fynde moch water wha they come. And he toke a corage vnto him, and buylded all the walles where they were in decaye, and made towres theron, and buylded yet another wall without, and strengthed Millo in the cite of Dauid. And made moch ordinaunce and shyldes, and set captaynes of warre ouer the people.

And gathered them vnto him vpon the brode strete by the gate of the cite, and spake hertely vnto them, and sayde: Be stronge and bolde, feare not, and be not afrayed for the kynge of Assur, ner all ŷ multitude that is with him : for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is a *fleshly arme, but with vs is the LORDE oure God, to helpe vs and to fighte for vs. And ŷ people trusted vnto the wordes of Ezechias kynge of Iuda.

<sup>b</sup>Afterwarde sent Sennacherib the kynge of Assur his seruauntes vnto Ierusalem (for he laye before Lachis,  $\mathfrak{g}$  all his hoost with him) to Ezechias  $\mathfrak{F}$  kinge of Iuda,  $\mathfrak{g}$  to all Iuda that was at Ierusalē, sayenge: Thus sayeth Sennacherib  $\mathfrak{F}$  kynge of Assur: Wherin put ye youre trust ye that dwell in the beseged Ierusalem? Ezechias disceaueth you, that he maye delyuer you vnto death, hōger, and thyrst, and sayeth: The LORDE oure God shal delyuer vs from the hande of the kynge of Assur. Is it not Ezechias, that hath put awaye his hye places and altares, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalem: Before one altare shal ye worshippe, and burne incense theron?

Knowe ye not what I and my fathers haue C done to all v people in the londes? Haue the goddes of the Heythen in the londes bene able to delyuer their countrees fro my hande? What is he amonge all the goddes of these Heythen (whom my father damned) that was able to delyuer his people fro my hande? v youre God shulde be able to delyuer fro my hande. Therfore let not Ezechias now disceaue you, and let him not persuade you env soch thinge, and beleue him not. For yf no god of all the Heythe and kyngdomes might delyuer his people fro my hande and from the hande of my progenitours, then shal not youre goddes be able to delyuer you fro my hande.

His seruautes also spake yet more against the LORDE God, and agaynst his seruaunt Ezechias. And he wrote a letter to blaspheme the LORDE God of Israel, and spake of him, and sayde: Like as the goddes of the Heythen in their londes haue not bene able to delyuer their people from my hande, euen so shal not the God of Ezechias delyuer his people fro my hande.

And they cryed with loude voyce in the  $\mathbf{B}$ Iewish langage vnto the people of Ierusalem that were vpon the wall, to make them fearfull and to be fayntharted, that they might wynne the cite. And they spake agaynst the God off Ierusalem, euen as agaynst the goddes off the nacions vpon earth, which were but the workes of mens hondes.

But contrary wyse the kynge Ezechias and the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos prayed, and cryed vnto heauē. And the LORDE sent an angell, which destroyed all the mightie men of the hoost, and the prynces and rulers in  $\mathring{y}$  tentes of the kynge of Assur, so that he departed agayne with shame in to his owne londe.  $\dagger$  And whan he wente in to his gods house, they  $\mathring{y}$  came of his owne body, slewe him there with the swerde. Thus the LORDE helped Ezechias and them at Ierusalem, out appoynted by Dauid the kynge of Israel, and by Salomō his sonne: and stonde in the Sanctuary after  $\hat{y}$  course of the fathers houses amonge youre brethren the children of the people, And after the course of the fathers houses amonge the Leuites, and kyll Passeouer, sanctifye and prepare youre brethren, that they maye do acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

And Iosias gaue lambes and yonge kyddes B which were males, to the Heueofferynge for the comontye (all to the Passeouer for euery one that was founde) in the nombre thirtye thousande, and thre thousande oxen, all of the kynges good. And his prynces of their awne good wyll gaue to the Heueofferynge for the people, a for the prestes and Leuites (namely, Helchias, Zachary and Iehiel the prynces in v house of God amoge the prestes) for the Passeouer, two thousande and sixe hundreth, And thre hudreth oxen. But Chanania, Semaia, Nathaneel and his brethren, Gasabia, Ieiel and Iosabad the chefe of the Leuites gaue the Leuites to the Heue offerynge for the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe,  $\sigma$  fyue hundreth oxen.

Thus was the Gods seruyce prepared, and the prestes stode in their place, and the Leuites in their courses acordinge to the kynges commaundement. And they kylled the Passeouer, and the prestes toke it off their handes, and sprenkled it: and the Leuites toke the skynnes off them, and remoued the burntofferynge there from, to geue it amonge the porcions of the fathers houses in the multitudes of their congregation to offre vnto the LORDE, *as it is wrytten in ŷ boke of Moses, Euen so dyd they with the oxen also. And they dighte the Passeouer at the fyre + acordinge to the lawe. And that which was halowed, dighte they in pottes, kettels, and pannes, and made haist for the comon people. Afterwarde prepared they for them selues also and for y prestes: for the prestes the children of Aaron were occupied in the burntofferynges and fat vntyll the nighte. Therfore must the Leuites prepare for them selues and for the prestes the children of Aaron.

C And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their place (acordinge to ‡ Dauids commaundement) and Asaph and Heman, and Iedithim the kynges Seer, and the porters at all the gates. And they departed not from their office. For the Leuites their brethren prepared for them. Thus was all the Gods seruyce prepared the same daye, that the Passeouer mighte be kepte, and the burntsacrifices offred vpon the altare off the LORDE acordinge to the commaundement of kynge Iosias.

So the children of Israel that were at hande, helde Passeouer at that tyme, and the feast of vnleuended bred, seuen dayes. Sence  $\hat{y}$  tyme of Samuel the prophet, was no Passeouer kepte in Israel like this: and no kynge of Israel had holdē soch a Passeouer as Iosias dyd, and the prestes, Leuites, all Iuda, and soch as were founde of Israel, and the inhabiters of Ierusalem. In the eightēth yeare of the reigne of Iosias was this Passeouer kepte.

After this, whan Iosias had prepared the B house, Necho the kynge of Egipte wente vp to fighte agaynst Carcamis besyde Euphrates. And Iosias wete forth agaynst him. But he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: What, haue I to do with the O kynge off Iuda? I am not come now agaynst the, but I fighte agaynst another house : and God hath sayde, that I shal make haist. Ceasse from God which is with me, that he destroye the not. Neuertheles Iosias turned not his face from him, but prepared himselfe to fighte with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God, c came to fighte with him vpon the playne besyde Mageddo. But the Archers shot at kynge Iosias. And the kynge sayde ynto his seruauntes: Cary me awaye, for I am sore wounded. And his seruautes toke him from the charet, and caried him vpon his seconde charet, and broughte him to Ierusalem. And he dyed, and was buried amonge the sepulcres off his fathers.

And All Iuda and Ierusalem mourned for Iosias, and Ieremy bewayled Iosias, and all the synginge men and wemen, spake their lamētacions ouer Iosias vnto this daye, and made a custome therof vnto this daye. Beholde, it is wrytten also amonge the Lamentacions. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and his mercy acordinge to the scripture in the lawe of the LORDE, and of his actes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda.

The rrrbi. Chapter.

ND the people of the londe "toke Ioahas the sonne of Iosias, and made him kynge in his fathers steade at Ierusalem. Thre and twentye yeare olde was Ioahas whan he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes at Ierusalein. For the kynge of Egipte deposed him at Ierusalem, and condemned the londe in an hundreth talentes of syluer, and one talent off golde. And the kynge of Egipte made Elinchim his brother kynge ouer Iuda and Ierusalë, and turned his name Ioachim. But Necho toke his brother Ioahas, and caried him in to Egipte.

Fyue and twentye yeare olde was Ioachim whā he was made kynge, and reigned eleuē yeare at Ierusale, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE his God. * And Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon wente vp agaynst him, and bounde him with cheynes, to cary him vnto Babilon. And Nabuchodonosor broughte certayne vessels of v house of the LORDE vnto Babilon, and put them in his temple at Babilon. What more there is to save of Ioachim, and off his abhominacions which he dyd, and that were founde in him, beholde, they are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda. And Ioachim his sonne was kynge in his steade.

Eight yeare olde was Ioachim whan he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes and ten dayes at Ierusalë, and dyd  $\dot{y}$  which was euell in the sighte of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE. But whā the yeare came aboute, Nabuchodonosor sent thither, and caused him be fetched vnto Babilon with the costly vessels and Iewels of the house of the LORDE, and made Sedechias his brother kynge ouer Iuda and Ierusalem.

'One and twentye yeare olde was Sedechias whan he was made kynge, g reigned eleuen yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was cuell in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and submytted not himselfe before the face of the prophet Ieremy, which spake out of the mouth of the LORDE. He fell awaye also from Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon (which had taken an ooth of him by God) and was styfnecked, and hardened his hert, that he shulde not conuerte vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And all § chefe amonge the prestes, and the people, multiplyed their synnes, acordinge to all the abhominacions of the Heythen, and dyfyled the house of the LORDE, which he had sanctified at Ierusalem.

* And the LORDE God of their fathers C sent vnto them early by his messaungers (for he spared his people and his habitacion) but they laughed the messaungers of God to scorne, and despysed his wordes, and had his prophetes in derision, so loge tyll the indignacion of the LORDE increased ouer his people, and there was no remedye of healinge. ‡For he broughte the kynge of the Caldees ypon them, and caused for to slave all their yonge men with the swerde in the house of their Sanctuary, and spared nether yonge mā ner virgin, nether aged ner graud father, but gaue them all in to his hande. And all the vessels in the house of God, greate and small, the treasures in the house of § LORDE, and the treasures of the kynge and of his prynces, all this caused he to be caried vnto Babilon. And they brent the house of God, and brake downe the wall of Ierusalē, and all the palaces therof brent they with fyre, so that all the costly ornamentes of it were destroyed.

The iiij. Chapter.

A BUT whan the aduersaries of Iuda and Ben Iamin herde, that the children of the captinyte buylded the teple vnto the LORDE God of Israel, they came to Zorobabel g to the pryncipall fathers, and sayde vnto them: We wyl buylde with you: for we seke the LORDE youre God like as ye do. And we have done sacrifice vnto him, + sence the tyme that Assar Hadon the kynge of Assur broughte vs vp hither. But Zorobabel and Iesua and the other awnciet fathers of Israel, answered them : It is not mete for vs and you to buylde the house of oure God, but we wyl buylde alone vnto the LORDE God of Israel, ‡as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the londe hyndered the people of Iuda, and made them afrayed to buylde, and hyred councelers aganst them and hyndered their deuvce, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, vntyll the reigne off Darius kynge off Persia. But whan Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnynge off his reigne wrote they vnto him a complaynte agaynst them of Iuda and Ierusalem.

And in the tyme of Artaxerses, wrote 33 Bisellam, Mithridath, Tabeel and the other of their councell vnto Artaxerses the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of y letter was wrytten in the Syrians speach, and was interpretated in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum & chaunceler, and Simsai the scrybe, wrote this letter agaynst Ierusalem to Artaxerses the kynge.

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, and other of the councell of Dina, off Arphasath, off Tarplat, off Persia, off Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people swhom the greate and noble Asnaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cities of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Canaan. And this is y summe of the letter that they sent vnto kynge Artaxerses :

Thy serucintes the men on this syde the  $\mathbf{C}$ water and in Canaan. Be it knowne vnto v kynge, that the Iewes which are come vp from the to vs vnto Ierusale in to that sedicious a wicked cite, buylde the same, and make vp § walles of it, a brynge it out of y foundacion. Be it knowne now therfore vnto ý kynge, ý yf this cite be buylded a the walles made vp agayne, the shal not they geue tribute, toll, and yearly custome, and their deuyce shal do ý kynge harme. But now that we all are therby which destroyed the temple, we wolde no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore sent we out, and caused the kynge to be certified therof: That it maye be soughte in ŷ Cronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Cronicles, and perceaue, that this cite is sedicious and noysome vnto kynges and londes, and that they cause other also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therfore do we certifie the kynge, that yf this cite be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothinge on this syde the water by the reason of it.

Then sent y kynge an answere vnto Rehum 🗃 the chaunceler, and Simsai the Scrybe, and to the other of their councell that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde v water. Peace and salutacion. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene opely red before me, and I haue commaunded to make search: and it is founde, that this cite of olde hath made insurreccion agaynst kynges, g how y vproure and rebellion hath bene commytted therin. There haue bene mightie kynges also at Ierusalē, which haue reigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and toll, tribute and yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundemēt, forbyd the same men, that the cite be not builded, tyll I haue geuē cōmaundemēt. Take hede now that ye be not necligent here in, lest the kynge haue harme there thorow.

Now wha kynge Artaxerses letter was red before Rehum the chaunceler and Simsai the Scrybe and their councell, they wente vp in all the haist to Ierusalem vnto the Iewes, and forbad them with the arme and auctorite. Then ceassed the worke of the house of God at Ierusalem, and continued so vnto the seconde yeare of Darius kynge of Persia.

The b. Chapter.

HE prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary y A sonne of Iddo, prophecied vnto y Iewes that were in Iuda and Ierusale, in the name of the God of Israel. "Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, and with them the prophetes of God which strengthed the. At the same tyme came to the Thathnai the debite on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their councelers, and sayde thus vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buyldinge. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Iewes, that they were not inhibyte, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll there came a wrytinge therof agayne.

This is the summe of the letter  $\frac{1}{2}$  Thathnai the Debyte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their councellers of Apharsach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. And these are the wordes that 13 they sent vnto him : Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace. Be it knowne vnto the kynge, that we came in to Iewry to the house of  $\hat{y}$  greate God, which is buylded with all maner of stone, and balckes are layed in the walles, and  $\hat{y}$  worke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in their handes. Neuertheles we axed the Elders and sayde vnto them : Who hath comaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We axed their names also, that we might certifye the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs with these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruaūtes of the God of heauen and earth, and buylde the house  $\dot{y}$  was buylded many yeares agoo, \*which a greate kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. Howbeit whan oure fathers prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, the gaue them ouer in the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon the Caldee, which brake downe this house, g caried  $\dot{y}$  people awaye vnto Babilon.

‡ Neuertheles in the first years of Cyrus the C kynge of Babilon, y same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God: for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalē, and broughte the in to $ temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of y temple at Babilon, s and delyuered them vnto Seszbazer by name, whom he made Debyte, and sayde vnto him : Take these vessels, go thy waye and brynge them vnto the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Seszbazar, and layed § foundacion of the house of God at Ierusalem. Sence that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet is it not fynished. Yf it please v kynge now, let there be search made in v kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kynge Cyrus commaundement, that the house of God at Ierusalem shulde be buylded : g sende vs y kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The bi. Chapter.

THEN comaunded kinge Darius, that a search shulde be made in  $\mathring{y}$  library of  $\mathring{y}$ kynges treasure house, which laye at Babilon. So at Egbathanis in a castell that lyeth in the londe of the Meedes, there was founde a boke,  $\mathfrak{g}$  in it was there an acte wrytten after this maner: In the first yeare of kynge Cyrus, comaunded the same kynge Cyrus to buylde  $\mathring{y}$  house of God at Ierusalem, in the place where the sacrifice is made,  $\mathfrak{g}$  to laye the

Let them worke in  $\mathfrak{F}$ house of God, that the Debyte of  $\mathfrak{F}$  lewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I have commaunded also, what shalbe done to  $\mathfrak{F}$  Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shal diligently be take of the kynges goodes, even of the rentes beyonde the water,  $\mathfrak{g}$  geven vnto the men, and that they be not hyndered. And yf they haue nede of calues, lambes, or goates for the burntoffrynge vnto § God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Ierusalem, there shalbe geuen them daylie as is acordinge: and se that this be not done necligētly, that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto § God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I geuē. And what man so euer he be that altereth these wordes, there shal a balke be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shal be hanged theron, and his house shalbe prysed for the dede.

But the God that dwelleth in heauen, destroye all kynges and people, that put to their hade to alter and to breake downe the house of God at Ierusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathai  $\hat{y}$  Debyte beyonde  $\hat{y}$  water, and Sethar of Bosen with their councelers (to whom kynge Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And  $\hat{y}$  Elders of the Iewes buylded, and they prospered thorow the prophecienge of Aggeus the prophet and Zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundement of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Persia. And they perfourmed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was the sixte yeare of the reigne of kynge Darius.

\* And the children of Israel, the prestes, the Leuites, and the other children of  $\hat{y}$  captyuite helde the dedicacion of the house of God with ioye, and offred at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundreth calues, two hundreth lambes, foure hundreth goates: and for the synofferynge for all Israel, twolue he goates, acordinge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the prestes in their courses, and  $\hat{y}$  Leuites in their offices, to mynister vnto God which is at Ierusalē, as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captyuite helde Passeouer vpon the fourtenth daye of the first moneth: for y prestes and Leuites had purified them selues, so y they were all cleane as one man, and kylled Passeouer for all the children of the captyuite, and for their brethre the prestes, and for them selues. And the childre of Israel which were come agayne out of captivite, and all soch as had separated them selues vnto them from the fylthinesse of the Heythen in the londe, to seke the LORDE God of Israel, ate a helde the feast of vnleuedded bred seuen dayes with ioye: for the LORDE had made them glad, and turned the hert of the kynge of Assur vnto the, so that their handes were strengthed in the worke of the house of God, which is § God of Israel.

Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Ierusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kynge Artaxerses. And they came to Ierusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seuenth yeare of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, deuysed he to go vp from Babilon: and on  $\mathring{y}$  first daye of the fifth moneth came he to Ierusalem, acordinge to the good hande of God vpon him: For Eszdras prepared his hert to seke the lawe of the LORDE, and to do it, and to teach the precepte g iudgment in Israel.

And this is the summe of the letter, that 弼 kynge Artaxerses gaue vnto Eszdras the prest, the scrybe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the LORDE and of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Eszdras the prest and scrybe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutacion. I have commaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which are mynded of their awne good wyll to go vp to Ierusalem, that they go with the, beynge sent of the kynge and of the seuen lordes of the councell, to vyset Iuda and Ierusalem, acordinge to the lawe of God, which is in thy hade: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, which the kynge and the lordes of his councell geue of their awne good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitacion is at Ierusalem) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all y countre of Babilon: with it that the people and prestes geue of their awne good wil vnto the house of God at Ierusalem. C

Take thou the same, and by diligently with the same money, calues, lambes, goates, and meatofferynges and drynkofferynges, to be offred vpon the altare of the house of youre God at Ierusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren to do with the remnaunt of the money, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vessels that are geuen the for the mynistracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And what so euer thinge more shal be nedefull for the house of thy God, which is necessary for the to spende, let the same be geuē out of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded all the treasurers beyonde the water, y loke what so euer Eszdras the prest and scrybe in the lawe of the God of heauē, requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same diligently, vntyll an hundreth talëtes of syluer, and tyll an hundreth quarters of wheate, and tyll an hūdreth Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundreth Batthes of oyle, and salt without measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauē, that there come no wrath ypon the kynges realme g his children.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall B haue no auctorite to requyre taxinge a custome, and yearly rentes vpon eny of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in y house of this God. But thou Eszdras (after the wyszdome of thy God that is in thy hande) set thou judges and arbiters, to judge all the people that is beyonde Iordane, euen all soch as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyl not diligently fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shall haue his iudgmet for the dede, whether it be vnto death, or to be banyshed, or to be condemned in good, or to be put in preson.

Praysed be the LORDE God of oure fathers, which so hath inspyred  $\mathring{y}$  kynges hert to garnysh the house of God at lerusalem: and hath enclyned his mercy vnto me in the presence of the kynge, and his councelers, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (acordinge to the hāde of the LORDE my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel together,  $\mathring{y}$  they mighte go vp with me.

The biij. Chapter.

THESE are the heades of their fathers that were named, "which wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kynge Artaxerses reigned. Of the childre of Phineas, Gersom: of the children of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of Dauid, Hattus: of the childre of Pareos, Zachary, and the men childre nombred with him, an hundreth and fiftye. Of the children of Pahath Moab, Eleoenai the sonne of Serahia, and with him two hundreth males.

Of the children of Sechania, the sonne of Iehasiel, and with him thre hundreth males. Of the children of Adin Ebed, the sonne of Ionathan, and with him fiftie males. Of the children of Elam, Iesaia the sonne of Chap. bííj.

C

Athalia, and with him seuentie males. Of the children of Sephatia, Sebadia the sonne of Michael, and with him foure score males.

Of the children of Ioab, Obadia the sonne of Ichiel, and with him two hundreth g eightene men children. Of the children of Selomith, the sonne of Iosiphia, and with him an hundreth and thre score males.

33 Of the children of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, and with him eight and twentye males. Of the children of Asgad, Iohanan the yongest sonne, and with him an hundreth and ten males. Of the last children of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, leiel and Semaia, and with them thre score males. Of the children of Bigeuai, Vthai and Sabud, and with them seuē males. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Aheua, there abode we thre dayes.

And whan I loked amonge the people  $\mathfrak{g}$ the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. The sent I Elieser, Ariel, Semaia, Elnathan, Iarib, Elnathan, Natha, Zachary and Mesullam the rulers, and Ioiarib and Elnathan the teachers, and those sent I vnto Iddo  $\mathfrak{F}$  chefest at Casiphia, that they shulde fetch us mynysters for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casiphia.

And (acordinge to the good hande of oure God vpon us) they broughte us a wyse man from amonge the children of Maheli the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israel, euen Serebia with his sonnes and brethren, eightene. And Hasabia, and with him Iesaia of the children of Merari, with his brethren g their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whom Dauid and the princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites, two hundreth g twentye, all named by name.

And even there at the water besyde Aheua, caused I a fastinge to be proclamed,  $\dot{y}$  we mighte humble oure selves before oure God, to seke of him a righte waye for us,  $\mathfrak{g}$  oure children and all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to require of the kynge, soudyers  $\mathfrak{g}$ horsmen, to helpe us agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure God is for the best vpon all them that seke him, and his violence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So "3 Ead. 8. d. we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he herde us.

And I toke out twolue of the chefe prestes, 🖪 Serebia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them there the syluer and golde and vessels for the Heue offeringe vnto the house of oure God, which the kynge, and the lordes of his councell and prynces, and all Israel that were at hande, had geuen to the Heue offerynge: and there weyed I them vnder their hande sixe hundreth and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundreth talentes, and in golde an hundreth talentes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande guldens, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the LORDE, therfore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the LORDE God of youre fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and awncient fathers of Israel at Ierusalem in the chestes of the house of the LORDE. Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer and golde g vessell, to brynge it to Ierusalem vnto y house of oure God.

So we brake vp, from the water of Aheua on the twolueth daye of the first moneth, to go vnto Ierusalem : and the hande of oure God was vpon us, and delyuered us fro the hande of the enemies and preuv waytinges by the waye. And we came to Ierusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on y fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell, weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the prest, and with him Eleasar the sonne of Phineas, and with them Iosabad the sonne of Iesua, and Noadia y sonne of Benui the Leuites, acordinge to the nombre a weight of euery one. And the weight was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captingte, which were come out of preson, offred burntofferinges vnto  $\S$  God of Israel: twolue bullockes for all Israel, sixe and nyuetye ramnes, seuen and senentye lambes, and twolue goates for a synofferynge, all to the burnt offeringe of the LORDE. And they delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers,  $\mathfrak{g}$  to the Debytes on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The ir. Chapter.

WHAN all this was perfourmed, the A rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the prestes, g Leuites are not separated from the nacions in the londes as touchinge their abhominacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, Iebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egipcians, and Amorites. * For they have taken the doughters of the same, a their sonnes, and haue myxte the holy sede with y nacions in the londes: and the hande of the rulers and lordes of councell hath bene principall in this trespace.

Whan I herde this, I rente my clothes and my rayment, and plucte out the heer of my heade and of my beerd, and sat mournynge. And there resorted vnto me all soch as feared the worde of the LORDE God of Israel because of the greate transgression. And I sat mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifyce. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice I rose vp fro my heuvnes, and rente my clothes and my raiment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the LORDE my God, and sayde:

My God, I am ashamed, and darre not lifte vp mine eies vnto the my God : for oure wickednesses are growne ouer oure heade, a oure trespaces are waxen greate vnto y heauē. Sence the tyme of oure fathers have we bene in greate trespace vnto this daie, † and because of oure wickednesses haue we and oure kynges bene delyuered in to the hande of y kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captinyte, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daye.

C But now is there a litle and sodane graciousnes come from the LORDE oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maie geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God maye lighte oure eyes, and geue vs a litle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and oure God hath not forsake vs though we be bondmen, and hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kynges of Persia, that they shulde geue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, and to sett vp the desolacion therof, and to geue vs an hedge in luda and Ierusalem.

O oure God, what shall we saye now after this? that we have forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruauntes the prophetes, and saide: The londe wherin ye shal come to possesse it, is an vncleane londe thorow the fylthines of the people of the londes, in their abhominacions wherwith they have made it full of vnclennes on euery syde. Therfore shal ye not geue youre doughters vnto their sonnes, and their doughters shall ye not take vnto youre sonnes, and seke not their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and enioye the good in the londe, and y ye and youre children maye haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure eucli dedes and greate trespace) thou oure God hast spared oure wickednesses, and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe.

As for vs, we have turned backe, a have let go thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abhominacions. Wilt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothynge remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? OLORDE God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped, as it is this daie. Beholde, in thy presence are we in oure trespace, for because of it is there no stondinge before the.

ND whan Eszdras prayed after this 3 maner and knowleged, wepte, and laie before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very greate congregacion of men and wemen, and children : for the people wepte very sore. And Sachania the sonne of Iehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Eszdras: We haue trespaced agaynst the LORDE oure God, in that we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the londe. Now there is hope yet in Israel cocerninge this, therfore let vs make a couenaut now with oure God, that we shal put awaye all the wyues (and soch as are borne of them) acordynge to the councell of y LORDE, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, y we maye do acordynge to the lawe. ND whan Saneballat, Tobias and Gosem A the Arabian, and the other of oure enemyes herde, that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Saneballat and Gosem sent vnto me, sayenge: Come and let us mete together in the vyllages vpon the playne of the cite Ono. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstondynge I sent messaungers vnto them, savenge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I can not come downe. The worke shulde stonde still, yf I were necligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue the same answere.

Then sent Saneballat his seruaunt vnto me 33 the fifth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: It is tolde the Heythen, a Gosem hath sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for y which cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kynge in these matters, and hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Ierusalem, and to saye : He is kynge of Iuda.

And Tobias sent letters, to put me in feare.

The bij. Chapter.

N OW whan we had buylded the wall I hanged on the dores, and the porters, syngers and Leuites were appoynted. And I comaunded my brother Hanani, and Hanania the ruler of the palace at Ierusalem: (for he was a faithfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other) and I sayde vnto them: Let not the gates of Ierusalē be opened vntyll the Sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stondinge in the watch, the dores shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citesyns of Ierusalem appoynted to be watchmen, euery one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for  $\hat{y}$  cite, it was large of rowme, and greate, but  $\hat{y}$  people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded. And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gatherd together the pryncipall men and ŷ people, to nombre them, and I founde a register of their nombre, \*which came vp afore out of the captiuyte (whom Nabuchodonosor ŷ kynge of Babilō had caryed awaie) and dwelt at Ierusalem and in Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and were come with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Asaria, Raamia, Naheman, Mardachai, Bilsan, Mispereth, Bigeuai, Nehum and Baena.

These were the heades amõge the prestes and their brethren in the tyme of Iesua. The Ieuites were these: Iesua, Bēnui, Cadmiel, Scrubia, Iuda and Mathania, ouer the office of thankesgeuynge, they g their brethrë: Bachuchia g Vnni and their brethrë, were aboute them in the watches.

Issue begat Ioachim. Ioachim begat Eliasub Eliasib begat Ioiada. Ioiada begat Ionathan Ionathan begat Iaddua. And in the tyme of Ioachim were these the chefe fathers amonge the prestes : namely of Seraia was Meraia, of Ieremy was Hanania, of Eszdras was Mesullam, of Amaria was Iohanan, of Malluch was Ionathan, of Sebania was Ioseph, of Harim was Adna, of Meraioth was Helcai, of Iddo was Zachary, of Ginthon was Mesullā, of Abia was Sichri, of Miniamin 13 Moadia was Piltai, of Bilga was Sammua, of Semaia was Ionathan, of Ioiarib was Mathnai, of Iedaia was Vsi, of Sallai was Callai, of Amok was Eber, of Helchias was Hasabia, of Gedaia, was Nethaneel.

And in the tyme of Eliasib. Ioiada, Iohanan and Iaddua, were the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites, and the prestes wryttē vnder the reigne of Darius y Persian. The children of Leui the pryncipall fathers were wrytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyme of Iohanan the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amoge the Leuites, Hasabia, Serebia and Iesua the sonne of Cadmiel,  $\alpha$ their brethren ouer agaynst them, to geue prayse and thankes, acordinge as Dauid y mā of God had ordeyned it, one watch ouer agaynst another. Mathania, Bacbuchia, Obadia, Mesullam, Talmon and Acub were porters in the watch at the thresholdes of the gates. These were in the tyme of Ioiachim the sonne of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and in the tyme of Nehemias the Debyte, and of the prest Eszdras the scrybe.

And in the dedicacion of the wall at Ierusalem, were the Leuites soughte out of all their places, that they mighte be broughte to Ierusalem, to kepe  $\mathring{y}$  dedicacion in gladnesse, with thankesgeuynges, with synginge, with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the children of the syngers gathered the selues together from the playne countre aboute Ierusalem, and from the vyllages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Gilgal,  $\mathfrak{g}$  out of the feldes of Gibea  $\mathfrak{g}$  Asmaueth: for  $\mathring{y}$  syngers had buylded them vyllages aboute Ierusalem. And  $\mathring{y}$  prestes and Leuites purified them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the prynces to go vp vpon the wall, and appoynted two greate queres of thankesgeuynge, which wete on the righte hande of the wall towarde the Donggate, and after them wete Hosaia, and halfe of the prynces of Iuda, g Asaria, Eszdras, Mesullam, Iuda, Ben Iamin, Semaia and Ieremy: and certayne of the prestes childre with trompettes, namely Zachary  $\beta$  sonne of Ionathan, the sonne of Semaia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Michaia, the sonne of Sachur, the sonne of Assaph, and his brethren, Semaia, Asareel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathaneel and Iuda and Hanani, with the musicall instrumentes of Dauid y man of God.

Fo. cccclbi.

And Eszdras ŷ scrybe before thē towarde the Wellgate, and they wente vp ouer agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of thankesgeuynge wente ouer against them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon y wall, towarde ý Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll ý brode wall. and to y porte of Ephraim, and to the Oldgate, and to y Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in y presongate stode they styll, and so stode the two queres of thankesgeuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliachim, Maeseia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenai, Zachary, Hanania, with tropettes, and Maeseia, Semaia, Eleasar, Vsi, Iohanan, Malchia, Elam and Aser. And the syngers songe loude, and Iesrahia was the ouerseer.

3E And the same daye were there greate sacrifices offred,  $\mathfrak{q}$  they reioysed: for God had geuē them greate gladnesse, so that both the wyues and children were ioyfull,  $\mathfrak{q}$  the myrth of Ierusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were there men appoynted ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were & Heue offerynges, the firstlinges and the tithes) that they shulde gather them out of v feldes aboute the cities, to destribute the vnto the prestes and Leuites acordinge to the lawe: for Iuda was glad of the prestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the purificacion. And the syngers g porters stode after the commaundemet of Dauid a of Salomon his sonne: * for in the tyme of Dauid and Assaph, were the chefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel geue porciōs vnto the syngers and porters, euery daye his porcion, and they gaue thinges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thinges that were sanctified, vnto the childre of Aaron.

The riij. Chapter.

ND what tyme as the boke of Moses A was red in y eares of the people, there was founde wrytten therin, +y the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come in to the congregacion of God, because they mett not the children of Israel with bred and water.‡ and hyred Balaam against the, that he shulde curse them : neuertheles oure God turned $ curse in to a blessynge. Now whan they herde the lawe, they separated from Israel euery one that had myxte him selfe therin. And before this had the prest Eliasib delyuered the chest of y house of oure God vnto his kynsman Tobia: for he had made him a greate chest, and there had they aforetyme layed the meatofferynges, frankencense, vessell, and the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle (acordinge to the commaundement geuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the Heueofferynges of the prestes.

But in all this was not I at Ierusalem: for 13in 9 two and thirtieth yeare of Artaxerses kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge, and after certayne dayes optayned I lycence of the kynge to come to Ierusalē. And I gat knowlege of 9 euell that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth all the vessels of Tobias house out of the chest, and commaūded them to clense the chest. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the meatofferynge and the incense.

And I perceased, that the porcions of  $\mathbf{v}$ Leuites were not geuen them, for the which cause the Leuites and syngers were fled, euery one to his londe for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, and sayde : Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Iuda the tithes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer y treasure, euen Selemia y prest, and Sadoc the scrybe, g of the Leuites Pedaia, and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Sachur the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was, to destribute vnto their brethren. At the same tyme sawe I some tredinge wyne presses on the Sabbath, and brynginge in clusters, and asses laden wyth wyne, grapes, fygges, and brynginge all maner of burthens vnto Ierusalem, vpon the Sabbath daye. Then reproted 1 the rulers in Iuda, and saide vnto them: What euell thinge is this that ye do, Dyd not and breake the Sabbath daye? oure fathers even thus, and oure God broughte all this plage vpon vs a vpon this cite? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Sabbath.

Ð And whan the portes of Ierusalem were drawen vp before the Sabbath, I commanded to shutt the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Sabbath: and some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, y there shulde no burthe be broughte in on the Sabbath daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twyce ouer nighte without Ierusalem with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, a sayde vnto them : Why tary ye all night aboute the wall? Yf ye do it once agayne, I wil laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they nomore on the Sabbath. And I sayde vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halowe the Sabbath daye. Thynke vpō me (O my God) cōcernynge this also, g spare me acordynge to thy greate mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I lewes, that maried wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, and their children spake halfe in the speache of Asdod, and coulde not speake in § Iewish language, but by y tonge mighte a ma perceaue euery people. And I reproued them, IE and cursed them, g smote certayne men of the, and plucte them vp, and toke an ooth of them by God: "Ye shal not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes, nether shal ye take their daughters vnto youre sonnes, or for youre selues. #### The first Chapter.

IN the tyme of Ahasuerus, which reigned from India unto Felicie from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and seven and twentye londes, what tyme as he sat on his seate roiall in the castell of Susan in the thirde yeare of his reigne, he made a feast vnto all his prynces and seruauntes, namely vnto the mightie men of Persia and Media, to the Debities and rulers of his countrees, that he mighte shewe the noble riches of his kingdome, and the glorious worshippe of his greatnesse, many dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

And whan these dayes were expyred, the kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto greate and small, seuen dayes longe in the courte of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged whyte, reed a yalow clothes, fastened with coardes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and siluer made 38 vpon a pauement of grene, white, yalowe and black Marble. And y drinke was caried in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessell. And the kinges wine was moch acordynge to the power of the kynge. And noman was appoynted what he shulde drinke: for the kynge had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye whan the kynge was mery of the wine, he comaunded Mehuman, Bistha, Harbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Sethar and Charcas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd seruyce in the presence of kynge Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with the crowne regall, that he might shewe y people and prynces hir fairnesse : for But the quene Vasthi she was bewtifull. wolde not come at the kynges worde by his Then was the kynge very chamberlaynes. wroth, and his indignacio kyndled in him.

And the kynge spake to y wyse men that had vnderstondinge in the ordinaunces of the londe (for the kinges matters must be hadled before all soch as haue knowlege of the lawe and judgment: And the nexte vnto him were, Charsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Meres, Marsena and Memuchan, the seuen prynces of the Persias, and Meedes, which sawe the kynges face, and satt aboue in the kyngdome) What lawe shulde be execute vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not acordynge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaines. The saide Memucha before the kynge a the prynces: The quene Vasthi hath not onely done euell agaynst the kinge but also agaynst all the prynces and all the people in all the londes of kynge Ahasuerus, for this dede of the quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so that they shall despyse their huszbandes B before their eyes, and shall saye: The kynge Ahasuers comaunded Vasthi y quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And so shall the pryncesses in Persia and Media save lykewyse vnto all the kynges prynces, whan they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shall there aryse despytefulnes and wrath ynough. If it please the kynge, let there go a kyngly commaundemet from him, and let it be wrytten acordynge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come nomore before kynge Ahasuerus, and let the kynge geue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And y this wrytinge of the kynge which shalloe made, be published thorow out all his empyre (which is greate) that all wyues maye holde their huszbandes in honoure, both amonge greate and smal.

This pleased the kynge and the prynces, and the kynge dyd acordynge to the worde of Memuchan. Then were there letters sent forth in to all the kynges londes, in to euery londe acordinge to the wrytinge therof, and to euery people after their laguage, y euery man shulde be lorde in his awne house. And this caused he be spoken after the language of his people.

The if. Chapter.

FTER these actes whan the displeasure a of kynge Ahasuerus was layed, he thoughte vpon Vasthi, what she had done, and what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruauntes: Let there be fayre yonge virgins soughte for the kynge, and let the kynge appoynte ouerseers in all § londes of his empyre, that they maye brynge together all fayre yonge virgins vnto the castel of Susan to the Wemens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth the wemen, and let him geue them their apparell. And loke which damsell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis steade. This pleased the kynge, and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a lewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Iair, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Cis, the sonne of Iemini, which was caried awaye from Ierusalem, * whan Iechonias the kynge of Iuda was led awaye, (whom Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon caried awaye) and he norished Hadassa (that is Hester) his vncles 33 daughter: for she had nether father ner mother, and she was a fayre and beutyfull damsell. And whan hir father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receaued hir as his awne daughter.

Now whan y kynges comaundemet and comyssion was published, a many dasels were broughte together vnto the castell of Susan vnder § hande of Hegai, Hester, was takē also vnto ý kynges house vnder ý hande of Hegai & keper of & wenne, a the damsell pleased him, a she founde grace in his sighte. And he put her with hir maydes in y best place of § Womes buildige. And Hester shewed it not vnto hir people g hir kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, y she shulde not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before y courte of y Womes buyldinge, y he might knowe how Hester dyd, and what shulde become of her.

Chap. iij.

And whan the appoynted tyme of euery damsell came that she shulde come to \$ kynge Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twolue monethes in the deckynge of the wemen (for their deckynge must haue so moch tyme, namely sixe monethes with Balme & Myrre, & sixe monethes with good spyces, so were the wemē beutifyed) then wente there one damsell vnto \$ kynge, and what so euer she requyred, y must be geue her to go with her out of the Womens buyldinge vnto y kynges palace. Now whan the tyme came of Hester the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (whom he had receaued as his awne daughter)  $\frac{1}{2}$  she shulde come to the kynge, she desyred nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the wemen sayde.

And Hester founde fauoure in the sighte of all them that loked vpon her. And Hester was taken vnto kynge Ahasuerus in to the house royall, in the tenth moneth which is called Tebeth, in the seuenthe yeare of his reigne.

And the kynge loued Hester aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his sighte before all the virgins: and he set the quenes croune vpon hir heade, and made her quene in steade of Vasthi. And the kynge made a greate feast vnto all his prynces and seruauntes (which feast was because of Hester) and let the londes be in quyetnes,  $\alpha$  gaue royall giftes.

And whan the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Hester shewed hir kynred and hir people, acordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Hester dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, like as whan he was hir tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kinges chamberlaynes, Bigthan and Theres which kepte the dore, were wroth, and sought to laye their handes on the kynge Ahasuerus: Wherof Mardocheus gat knowlege, and tolde it vnto quene Hester, and Hester certified the kynge therof in Mardocheus name. And whan inquisicion was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tre: and it was wrytte in the Cronicles before the kynge.

The iij. Chapter.

FTER these actes dyd the kynge promote Aman the sonne of Amadathi the Agagite, and set him hye, a set his seate aboue all y prynces that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Aman : for the kinge had so comaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes which were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: Why transgressest thou the kynges commaundement? And whan they spake this daylie vnto him, and he folowed them not, they tolde Aman, that they mighte se whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had tolde them, y he was a lewe. And whā Aman sawe, that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, ner worshipped him, he was full of indignacion g despyte, that he shulde laye hondes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him y people of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroye the people of Mardocheus, and all the people that were in the whole empyre of Ahasuerus.

In the first moneth that is the moneth 33 Nissan, in y twolueth yeare of kinge Ahasuerus, was there occasion and oportunyte sought by Aman, from one daye to another, and from the same moneth vnto the twolueth moneth, that is the moneth Adar. And Amā sayde vnto kinge Ahasuerus: There is a people scatered abrode and dispersed amonge all people in all the londes of thine empire, and their lawe is cotrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kinges profit to suffre the after this Yf it please the kynge, let him maner. wryte, that they maye be destroyed, g so wil I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. And what requyrest thou? Yee axe euen halfe of the empyre, and it shal be done. Hester y quene answered and sayde: Yf I haue founde grace in thy sighte (O kynge) and yf it please the kynge, then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre and my people for my peticions sake: for we are solde to be destroyed, to be slayne, and to perishe. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmen and bondwemen, then wolde I holde my tonge, so shulde not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme. The kynge Ahasuerus spake a saide vnto quene Hester: What is he that? Or where is he y darre presume in his mynde to do soch a thinge after that maner? Hester sayde: The enemye and aduersary is this wicked Aman.

As for Amā, he was exceedingly afraied before ŷ kynge g ŷ quene. And the kynge arose frö the bancket g frö ŷ wyne in his displeasure, and wente in to the palace garden. And Aman stode vp, and besoughte quene Hester for his life: for he sawe ŷ there was a mischaüce prepared for him of the kynge allready.

And whan the kynge came agayne out of the palace garden in to y parler where they had eaten, Aman had layed him vpon the bed that Hester sat vpon. Then saide the kinge: wyl he force the quene also besyde me in the house? As some as that worde wente out of the kynges mouth, they couered Amans face. And Harbona one of the chamberlaynes that stude before the kynge, sayde: Beholde, there stude the a galewe in Amās house fiftie cubytes hye, which he had made for Mardocheus, that spake good for y kinge. The kynge sayde: Hange him theron. So they hanged Aman on the galewe that he had made for Mardocheus. Then was the kynges wrath stylled.

The biff. Chapter.

THE same daye dyd kynge Ahasuerus 🏽 geue the house of Aman the Iewes enemye, vnto quene Hester. And Mardocheus came before y kinge: for Hester tolde how that he beloged vnto her. And the kynge put of his fynger rynge, which he had taken from Aman, a gaue it vnto Mardocheus. And Hester set Mardocheus ouer the house of Aman. And Hester spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, a besought him, that he wolde put awaye the wyckednes of Aman the Agagite, and his deuice that he had ymagined against y Iewes. And the kynge helde out the golden cepter vnto Hester. Then rose Hester, and stode before the kynge, and sayde: Yf it please the kynge, and yf I haue foude grace in his sight, a yf it be couenyent for the kinge, and yf it be accepted in his sighte, then let it be wryttē, y the letters of the deuyce of Amā the sonne of Amadathai the Agagite, maie 33 be called agayne: which letters he wrote, to destroie § Iewes in all § kynges lödes. #### The first Chapter.

TN the lode of Hus<sup>e</sup> there was a man called Iob: an innocent and vertuous man, soch one as feared God, and eschued euell. This man had' vij. sonnes, and iij. doughters. His substaunce was vij. M. shepe, iij. M. camels, v. C. yock of oxen, v. C. she asses, and a very greate housholde : so y he was one of the most principall men amoge all them of the east countre. His sonnes now wente on euery man, and made banckettes: one daye in one house, another daye in another, and sent for their in sisters, to eate a drinke with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banckettinge rounde aboute, lob sent for them, and clensed them agayne, stode vp early, and offred for euery one a bretofferinge. For lob thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes have done some offence, and have bene vnthankfull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd lob cuery daye.

Chap. XXXIII.

God punysheth for synne, yet heareth he a meke prayer.

Chap. XXXIIII.

Iob withstodeth the wordes of them, which saye, that the wicked only are punyshed.

Chap. XXXV.

lob is reproued, for holdinge himself rightuous.

Chap. XXXVI.

An argument, that God punisheth no man, excepte he haue deserued it.

Chap. XXXVII.

The power of God is here descrybed. Iob is reproued.

Chap. XXXVIII. XXXIX. XL. XLI.

The foreknowlege and wisdome of God.

Chap. XLII

Iobs frendes are reproued, and he himself is restored to his prosperite agayne.

Sathan came also amonge them. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: From whence commest thou? Sathan answered the LORDE, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lode, dand walked thorow it.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Sathā: hast thou not considered my seruaunt lob, how that he is an innocēt and vertuous mā: soch one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none like him in the londe? Sathan answered, and sayde vnto the LORDE: Doth lob feare God for naught? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and all his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his hondes? Is not his possession encreaced in the londe? But laye thyne honde vpo him a litle, touch once all that he hath, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the LORDE sayde vnto Sathan: lo all that he hath, be in thy power: only vpon him self se that thou laye not thine Then wente Sathan forth from the honde. LORDE.

Therfore I will not spare my mouth, but 38 vill speake in the trouble of my sprete, in vwtternesse of my mynde will I talke. Am I see or a whalfysh, that thou kepest me so in preson? When I thynke: my bedd shall comforte me, I shall haue some refresshinge by talkynge with myself vpon my couche: 'The troublest thou me with dreames, ad makest me so afrayed thorow visions, that my soule wyssheth rather to be hanged, and my bones to be deed.

I can se no remedy, I shall lyue nomore: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. "What is man, that thou hast him in soch reputacion, and settest so moch by him? Thou takest diligent care for him, and sodely doest thou trye him.

Why goest thou not fro me, ner lettest me alone, so longe till I swalow downe my spetle? I have offended, what shal I do vnto §, O thou preseruer off men? Why hast thou made me to stonde in thy waye, and am so heuy a burden vnto my self? Why doest thou not forgeue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wickednesse? Beholde, now must I slepe in the dust: and yff thou sekest me tomorow in the mornynge, I shalbe gone.

The biij. Chapter.

THEN answered Baldad the Suhite, and A sayde: How longe wilt thou talke of soch thinges? how longe shal thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Doth God peruerte the thinge that is laufull? Or, doth the Allmightie destroye the thynge that is right? 'Whe thy sonnes synned agaynst him, dyd not he punysh the for their wickednesse? / AN that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of dynerse miseries. He cometh vp, and falleth awaye like a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Thinkest thou it now well done, to open thine eyes vpon soch one, and to brynge me before the in iudgment? Who can make it cleane, that commeth of an vncleane thinge? No body. The dayes of man are shorte, y nombre of his monethes are knowne only vnto the. Thou hast apoynted him his boundes, he can not go beyonde them. Go from him, that he maye rest a litle : vntill his daye come, which he loketh for, like as an hyrelinge doth. 33

Yf a tre be cutt downe, there is some hope yet, that it will sproute and shute forth the brauches againe: For though a rote be waxen olde and deed in the grounde, yet whe the stocke getteth the sent of water, it will budde, and brynge forth bowes, like as when it was tirst planted. But as for man, when he is deed, perished and consumed awaye, what becommeth of him? TOB answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes herde soch thinges. Miserable geuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to saye? I coude speake, as ye do also. But wolde God, that youre soule were in my soules steade : then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shulde comforte you with my mouth, and release youre payne with y talkinge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorow wil not ceasse : and though I holde my toge, yet wil it not departe fro me. And now that I am full of payne, and all that I have destroied (wherof my wryncles beare wytnesse) there stödeth vp a dyssembler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angrie at me, he hateth me, and gnassheth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemy skouleth vpon me with his eyes.

They have opened their mouthes wyde vpon 33 me, <sup>d</sup> and smytten me vpon the cheke despitefully, they haue eased the selues thorow myne aduersite. God hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly, and delyuered me in to the hondes of  $\psi$  wicked. I was somtyme in wealth, but sodenly hath he brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the neck, he hath rente me, and set me, as it were a marck for him to He hath compased me rounde shute at. aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, a not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath geuë me one wounde vpon another, and is falle vpon me like a giaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my skynne, and lye with my strength in the dust.

My face is swolle with wepinge, a myne C eyes are waxen dymme. Howbeit there is no wickednesse in my hondes, and my prayer is clene. O earth, couer not my bloude, and let my crienge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyth. My frendes laugh me to scorne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body might pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares are come, a I must go the waye, from whence I shal not turne agayne.

thine owne conceate? Where vnto loke thine eyes, y thy mynde is so puft vp agaynst God g lettest soch wordes go out of thy mouth? What is man, that he shulde be vncleane? what hath he (which is borne of a woman) wherby he might be knowne to be rightuous? Beholde, he hath founde vnfaithfulnesse amoge his owne sanctes: "yee the very heauens are vnclene in his sight. How moch more then an abhominable and vyle mā, which dryncketh wickednesse like water? A fearfull sounde is euer in his eares, a when it is peace, yet feareth he destruccion : He beleueth neuer to be delyuered out of darcknesse, the swearde is allwaye before his eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lyuinge, he thinketh planely, that the daye of darcknesse is at honde. Sorow and carefulnesse make him afrayed, g copasse him rounde aboute, like as it were a kinge with his hoost redy to the battayll. For he hath stretched out his honde agaynst God, a armed himself agaynst 🖞 Allmightie. He runneth proudly vpon him, g with a stiff necke fighteth he agaynst him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his body well lykynge. He wil nether applye himself to faithfulnes ner treuth, so sore is he disceased with vanite.

He shall perish, afore his tyme be worne out, and his honde shal not be grene. He shal be pluckte of as an vntymely grape from y vyne, and shal let his floure fall, as the olyue doth. <sup>(3)</sup> THEN answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere. And why? my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficiently herde the checkynge g reprofe, therfore am I purposed to make answere after my vnderstödinge. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynninge (euer sence the creacion of man vpon earth) the prayse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of Ypocrytes continued but  $\frac{1}{2}$  twincklinge of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to the heauē, so that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perisheth at the last like donge: In so moch  $\frac{1}{2}$  they which haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He vanysheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde,  $\alpha$  passeth awaye as a vision in  $\frac{2}{2}$  night. So that the eye which sawe him before, getteth now no sight of him,  $\alpha$  his place knoweth him nomore. His childre go a begginge, their handes bringe the to sorow and heuynesse.

From his youth his bones are ful of vyce, 33 which shal lie downe with him in y earth. Whe wickednesse is swete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth, that wyll he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth, shalbe turned to the poyson of serpetes within his body. The riches y he deuoureth, shall he perbreake agayne, for God shal drawe them out of his bely. The serpentes heade shall sucke him, and the adders tonge shall slave him : so that he shal nomore se the ryuers and brokes of hony and butter : But laboure shal he, a yet haue nothinge to eate. Greate trauayle shal he make for riches, but he shal not enjoye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them : houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His bely coude neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perish in his couetousnesse. He deuoured so gredely, 🏾 y he left nothinge behynde, therfore his goodes shal not prospere. 'Though he had plenteousnesse of euery thinge, yet was he poore, a therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde.

For though y wicked have neuer so moch to fyll his bely, yet God shal sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his battayll to rayne ouer him: so that yf he fle the yron weapens, he shall be shott with the stele bowe. feare. Shuldest thou the se no darcknesse? Shulde not the water floude runne ouer the? Now because y God is hyer the the heauens, g because thou seist y the starres are so hye, wilt thou therfore save : "Tush, how shulde God knowe? Doth his dominion reach beyonde the cloudes? Tush, the cloudes couer him, y he maye not se, for he dwelleth in heauen. Well, thou wilt kepe the olde waye, v all wicked mē haue gone : both olde a yonge, whose foundacion is a runnynge water, which saye vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner: 'Tush, what wil the Allmightie do vnto vs? where as he (not with stodinge) fylleth their houses with all good. Which meanynge of the vngodly be farre fro me. 'For with ioy shal the godly, and with gladnesse shal the innocent se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, a their posterite consumed with the fyre.

Therfore recocile the vnto God, g be content, so shal all thinges prospere with the right well. <sup>d</sup>Receaue the lawe at his mouth, a laye vp his wordes in thine herte. For yf thou wilt turne to the Allmightie, "thou shalt stonde fast, a all vnrightuousnesse shall be farre from thy dwellinge: He shal geue the an haruest, which in plenty g abundaunce shall exceade the dust of the earth, and the golde of Ophir like ryuer stones. Yee the Allmightie his owne self shalbe thine haruest, the heape of thy money. Then shalt thou haue thy delyte in the Allmightie, a lift vp thy face vnto God. The shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, a he shal heare the, a thou shalt kepe thy promyses. Thē, loke what thou takest in honde, he shal make it to prospere with the, and the light shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth himself, him shal he set vp: and who so loketh mekely, Yf thou be innocēt, he shal shalbe healed. saue the : and thorow the vngiltynesse of thyne handes shalt thou be delyuered.

The rriff. Chapter.

A OB answered, and sayd: My sayenge is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hande heuy amonge my groninges. O that I might se him g fynde him: O that I might come before his seate, to pleate my cause before him, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes:

<sup>a</sup> Eccli. 23.d. Eze. 8. b. 9. c. <sup>b</sup> Iob 21. b. <sup>c</sup> Psal. 106. e. <sup>d</sup> Pro. 2. a. <sup>c</sup> Deu. 30. a. That I might knowe, what answere he wolde geue me: g that I might vnderstonde, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wil he pleate agaynst me with his greate power g strength, or wyll he leane him self vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not do so with me. But let hym geue me like power to go to lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before, I fynde him not: yf I come behynde, I cā get no knowlege of him: Yf I go on the left syde to pondre his workes, I can not atteyne vnto them: Agayne, yf I go on the right syde, he hydeth himself, y I can not se him. 'But as for my waye, he knoweth it: g trieth me as y golde in y fyre.

Neuertheles my fete kepe his path, his hye strete haue I holden, and not gone out of it. I haue not forsaken the comaundemet of his lippes, but loke what he charged me with his mouth, that have I shutt vp in my herte. It is he himself alone, who will turne him back? He doth as him listeth, and bryngeth to passe what he wil. He rewardeth me in to my bosome, a many other thinges mo doth he, as he maye by his power. This is $ cause, that I shrenke at his presence, so that when I considre him, I am afrayed of him. For in so moch as he is God, he maketh my herte soft: and seynge that he is Allmightie, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I get out of darcknesse, the cloude hath so couered my face.

NONSIDERINGE then that there is no tyme hyd from the Allmightie, how happeneth it, that they which knowe him, wil not regarde his dayes? For some me there be, <sup>s</sup>that remoue other mēs londe markes: that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take y wyddowes oxe for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, "g oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wilde asses in y deserte go by tymes (as their maner is) to spoyle: Yee the very wildernesse ministreth foode for their children. They reape the corne felde that is not their owne: and gather the grapes. out of his vynyarde, whom they have oppressed by violence. SO these thre men wolde stryue nomore with lob, because he helde himself a rightuous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachel the Bussite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Iob, that he called himself iust before God. And with lobs thre fredes he was angrie also, because they had founde no reasonable answere to ouercome him. Now taried Eliu till they had ended their communicacion with Iob, for why? they were elder then he. So when Eliu y sonne of Barachel y Bussite sawe, that these thre men were not able to make Iob answere, he was myscontent: so that he gaue answere himself, and sayde: 'Consideringe y I am yonge, c ye be men of age, I was afrayed, c durst not shewe forth my mynde, for I thought B thus within my self: 'It becometh olde men to speake, a the aged to teach wyszdome. liudgment of the vngodly, yee euen soch a iudgment and sentence shalt thou suffre. For then shal not thy cause be stilled with crueltie, ner pacified with many giftes. Hath God ordened then, that the glorious life off the g all soch mightie men shulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, till there come a night for the, to set other people in thy steade. But beware that thou turne not asyde to wickednesse and synne, which hytherto thou hast chosen more then mekenesse. Beholde, God is of a mightie hye power: Where is there soch a gyde and lawegeuer as he? Who wil reproue him of his waye? who wil saye vnto him : thou hast done wronge?

玬 O considre how greate and excellent his workes be, whom all men loaue and prayse: yee wondre at him, and yet they se him but a farre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowlege, nether are we able to come to y experiece of his yeares. He turneth y water to smal droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, "so that they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can sprede out the cloudes (a couerynge off his tabernacle) and cause his light to shyne vpo them, and to couer the botome of the see. By these thinges gouerneth he his people, and geueth the abundaunce of meate. In § turnynge of a hande he hydeth the light, g at his commaundement it commeth agayne. The rysinge vp therof sheweth he to his frendes and to the catell.

The rrrbij. Chapter.

А

T this my hert is astonnied, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse y goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth every thinge vnder the heauen, and his light reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaringe voyce foloweth him: for his glorious magesty geueth soch a thondre clappe, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueth an horrible sownde, when God sendeth out his voyce : greate thinges doth he, which we can not coprehende. 'When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, Immediatly the showers haue their strength and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they might knowe their owne workes. The beestes crepe in to their dennes, g take their rest. Out of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the breth of God, the frost commeth,  $\mathbf{t}$  the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes do their laboure in geuynge moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He distributeth also on euery syde, acordinge as it pleaseth him to deale out his workes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth the thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punysh eny londe, or to do good vnto them, that seke him.

Herken vnto this (o Iob) stonde still, and considre the wonderous workes of God. Art thou of coucel with God, when he doth these thinges? When he causeth the light to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his coucell. when he spredeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowlege of his wonders? and how thy clothes are warme, whe the lode is still thorow the south wynde? hast thou helped him to spred out the heauen, which is to loke vpo, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teach vs what we shal saye vnto hi, for we are C vnmete because of darcknes. Shal it be tolde him, what I saye? Shulde a man speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery ma seith not the light, y he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth whan he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the north, but the prayse and honoure off Gods feare commeth fro God himself. It is not we that can fynde out the allmightie: for in power, equite and rightuousnesse he is hyer then can be expressed. Seinge then that euery body feareth him, why shulde not all wyse men also stōde in feare of hī?

Hast thou geuen the horse is strength, or lerned him to bowe downe his neck with feare: that he letteth him self be dryuen forth like a greshopper, where as the stoute nevenge that he maketh, is fearfull? he breaketh y grounde with the hoffes of his fete chearfully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harnest men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a back for eny swerde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shilde glistre: yet russheth he in fearsly, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tush (sayeth he) for he smelleth the batell afarre of, y noyse, the captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the goshauke flyeth towarde the south? Doth the Aegle mounte vp & make his nest on hye at thy commaundement? He abydeth in the stony rockes, ād vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre aboute with his eyes. <sup>a</sup> His yonge ones are fed with bloude, and where eny deed body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Morouer, God spake vnto Iob and sayde: Can he that stryueth with the Allmightie, be at rest? Shulde not he which disputeth with God, geue him an answere? Iob answered the LORDE, sayenge: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answere the, therfore will I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spoken, but I will saye nomore.

The rl. Chapter.

A THEN spake the LORDE vnto Iob out of the storme, and sayde: <sup>b</sup>gyrde vp thy loynes like a man, and tell me the thige that I will axe the. Wilt thou disanulle my iudgment? Or, wilt thou condemne me, <sup>b</sup>y thou thy self mayest be made rightuous? Is thine arme then like the arme of God? Maketh thy voyce soch a soude as his doth? Then arme thy self with thine owne power, vp, decke the in thy ioly araye, poure out the indignacion of thy wrath: se that thou cast downe all § proude, loke well, that thou makest all soch as be stubburne, to obeye: treade all the vngodly vnder thy fete, cast the downe in to the myre, and couer their faces with darcknesse: Then will I confesse also, that thyne owne right honde hath saued the.

Beholde, the cruell beaste (whom I made 13 with the) which eateth haye as an oxe : lo, how stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out his tale like a Cedre tre, all his vaynes are stiff. His shynnes are like pipes off brasse, his rygge bones are like staues of yro. First when God made him, he ordened the wyldernesse for him, y the mountaynes shulde geue him grasse, where all the beastes off the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth amoge the redes in the Mosses, the fennes hyde him with their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without eny laboure might he drynke out the whole floude, and suppe off Iordane without eny trauayle. Who darre laye honde vpon him openly, and vndertake to catch him? Or, who darre put an hoke thorow his nose, ad laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou drawe out 'Leuiathan with an a angle, or bynde his tonge with a snare? Canst thou put a rynge in the nose of him, or bore his chaftes thorow with an aule? Wyll he make many fayre wordes with the (thynkest) thou) or flatre the? Wyll he make a couenaunt with the? Or, art thou able for to compell him to do the contynuall seruyce? Wilt thou take thy pastyme with him as with a byrde, or geue him vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye hew him in peces, to be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the nett with his skynne, or y fysh pänyer with his heade? Darrest thou laye honde vpon him? It is better for the to considre what harme might happe the there thorow and not to touch him. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the: Euery man also that seyth him, shall go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

DE mercifull vnto me (o God) be mercifull a ynto me, for my soule trusteth in ŷ: °g vnder the shadowe of thy wynges shal be my refuge, vntill wickednesse be ouerpast.

I call vnto God ý most hyest, euē ý God ý shal helpe me vp agayne. He shal sende fro heauen, a saue me fro the reprofe of him that wolde swalowe me vp. Sela.

This shal God sende, for his mercy and I lye with my soule faithfulnesse sake. amonge the cruell lyons: euen amonge the children of men, whose tethe are speares and arowes, and their tonge a sharpe swerde.

В Set vp thy self (o God) aboue the heaues, They haue and thy glory aboue all the earth. layed a nett for my fete, g pressed downe my soule: they have dygged a pyt before me, and are fallen in to it them selues.

Sela. ' My hert is ready (o God) my hert is ready, to synge and geue prayse. Awake (o my glory) awake lute and harpe, I my self wil awake right early. I wil geue thakes vnto the (o LORDE) amonge the people, I wil synge prayses vnto the amonge the Heithe. For y greatnes of thy mercy reacheth vnto the heauens, and thy faithfulnesse vnto the cloudes. Set vp thy self (o God) aboue the heaues, g thy glory aboue all y earth.

Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth of the worlde were made, thou art God from euerlastinge and worlde with out ende. Thou turnest man to destruccion, Agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye children of men. <sup>4</sup> For a thousande years in thy sight are but as yesterdaye that is past, and like as it were a night watch.

As soone as thou scattest them, they are even as a slepe, and fade awaye sodenly like 'In the mornynge it is grene the grasse. and groweth vp, but in the euenynge it is cutt downe and wythered. For we consume awaye B in thy displeasure, and are afrayed at thy wrothfull indignacion. Thou settest oure miszdedes before the, and oure secrete synnes in the light of thy countenaunce. For when thou art angrie, all oure dayes are gone, we brynge oure yeares to an ende, as it were a tayle that is tolde. The dayes of oure age are iij. score yeares a ten : a though men be so stronge that they come to iiij. score yeares, yet is their strength then but laboure and sorowe: so soone passeth it awaye, g we are gome. But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, thy fearfull a terrible displeasure? C teach vs to nombre oure dayes, that we maye

This psalme do the Hebrues ioyne vnto it that goeth before, and it is with them the cxvi. psalme.

BELEUED, <sup>a</sup>and therfore haue I spokē, but I was sore troubled. I sayde in my haist: All men are lyers.

What rewarde shal I geue vnto $ LORDE, for all the benefites $ he hath done vnto me? I wil receaue the cuppe of saluaciō, and call vpon the name of the LORDE.

I wil paye my vowes in the presence of all his people, right deare in the sight of  $\mathring{Y}$ LORDE is the death of his sayntes. O LORDE, I am thy seruaunt, I am thy seruaunt, and the sonne of thy handmayden, thou hast broken my bondes in sonder. I wil offre the 'the sacrifice of thankes geuynge, and wil call vpon the name of the LORDE. I wil paye my vowes vnto the LORDE in the sight of all his people, in the courtes of the LORDES house, euë in the myddest of the, o Ierusalem. Halleluya.

The crbi. Psalme.

PRAYSE the LORDE all ye Gentiles, laude him all ye people. For his mercifull kyndnes is euer more and more towarde vs, q the trueth of the LORDE endureth for euer. Halleluya.

The crbij. Bsalme.

The cryrbij. A psalme of Dauid.

A WIL geue thakes vnto the (o LORDE) with my whole hert, euen before the goddes wil I synge prayses vnto the.

"I wil worshippe towarde thy holy teple, and prayse thy name because of thy louynge kyndnesse and treuth, for thou hast magnified thy worde, acordynge vnto thy greate name. When I call vpo the, thou hearest me, and endewest my soule with moch stregth. All the kynges of the earth shal prayse the (o LORDE) when they heare the wordes of thy mouth. Yee they shal synge in the wayes of the LORDE, that greate is the glory of the LORDE. 'For, though the LORDE be hye, yet hath he respecte vnto v lowly: as for v proude, he beholdeth him afarre off. Though I walke  $\bar{1}$ § myddest of trouble, yet shalt thou refresh me: thou shalt stretch forth thine hade vpo the furiousnes of myne enemies, a thy right hande shal saue me. The LORDE shal make good for me, yee thy mercy (o LORDE) endureth for euer: 'despyse not then the worke of thine owne handes.

The cryrbiij. A psalme of Dauid.

O LORDE, thou searchest me out, and knowest me. Thou knowest my downe A syttinge a my vprisynge, thou vnderstödest my thoughtes afarre of. Thou art aboute my path g aboute my bedd, g spyest out all my wayes. For lo, there is not a worde i my toge, but thou (o LORDE) knowest it alltogether. Thou hast fashioned me behinde a before, g layed thine hode vpon me. Soch knowlege is to wonderfull a excellet for me, I can not atteyne vnto it. Whither shal I go then from thy sprete? <sup>d</sup>Or, whither shal I fle from thy presence? "Yf I clymme vp in to heauen, thou art there: yf I go downe to hell, thou art there also. Yf I take the wynges of the mornynge, a remayne in the vttemost 33 parts of the see: Euch there also shal thy honde lede me, and thy right hande shal holde me. Yf I saye : peraduēture the darcknesse shal couer me, then shal my night be turned to daye. Yee the darcknesse is no darcknesse with the, but the night is as cleare as the daye, the darcknesse g light are both alike. For my reynes are thyne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe. I wil geue thakes vnto the, for I am woderously made: maruelous are thy workes, and that my soule knoweth right well. My bones are not hyd from the, though I be made secretly, and fashioned beneth in the earth. Thine eyes se myne vnparfitnesse, they stonde all writt $\bar{e}$  $\bar{i}$  thy boke: my dayes were fashioned, when as yet there was not one of them.

How deare are thy coucels vnto me o God? O how greate is the summe of them? Yf I tell them, they are mo in nombre then the sonde: when I wake vp, I am present with the. Wilt thou not slaye  $\hat{y}$  wicked (oh God) that the bloudethyrstie mighte departe fro me? For they speake vnright of the, thine enemies exalte them selues presumptuously.

I hate them (0 LORDE) that hate the,  $\mathbf{u}$ I maye not awaye with those that ryse vp agaynst the. Yee I hate them right sore, therfore are they myne enemies.  $\mathcal{I}$ Trye me (0 God) and seke the grounde of myne hert : proue me,  $\mathbf{u}$  examen my thoughtes. Loke well, yf there be eny waye of wickednesse in me,  $\mathbf{u}$  lede me in the waye euerlastinge.

The crerif. A psalme of Dauid.

DELYUER me (o LORDE) from the euell men, oh preserue me from the wicked men. Which ymagin myschefe in their hertes, g stere vp strife all the daye longe. They sharpen their tonges like a serpent, Adders poyson is vnder their lippes. Sela. Kepe me (o LORDE) from the hande of the vngodly, preserue me from the wicked men, which are purposed to ouerthrowe my goinges. The proude haue layed a snare for me, g spred a nett abrode with coardes, yee g sett trappes in my waye. Sela.

But my sayenge is vnto the LORDE: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayer o LORDE. O LORDE God, thou strength of my health, thou hast couered my heade in ŷ daye of battayll. Let not ŷ vngodly haue his desyre (o LORDE) let him not haue his purpose, lest they be to proude. Sela. Let the myschefe of their owne lippes<sup>s</sup> fall vpon ŷ head of thē, ŷ cōpase me aboute. Let hote burnynge coales fall vpō thē, let thē be cast in to the fyre, and in to the pytt, that they neuer ryse vp agayne. # The Proverbes of Salomon.

What this boke contegneth.

Chap. I.

The wysdome of God calleth vs by the mouth of Salomō, exorteth vs, and geueth vs warnynge to eschue the wicked : whose vngodly couersacion in worde and worke, and punyshment also of the same, is here descrybed.

Chap. II.

How wisdome maye be gotten, and what profit commeth of it.

Chap. III.

He exorteth us to the feare of God and to pacience: he commendeth wyszdome, g requyreth us to cleue vnto the same.

Chap. IIII.

A fatherly exortacion vnto wisdome, with the profit therof, and how we ought to refrayne the mebres of oure body fro euell.

Chap. V.

He exorteth vnto wyszdōe, and to bewarre of harlottes: he telleth what harme maye folowe therout, whē men medle with soch: he teacheth men, louyngly to cleue vnto their maried wyues, and descrybeth the ende of the vngodly.

Chap. VI.

He warneth men to bewarre of suertishipe, exorteth the slouthfull to laboure, sheweth the wikednesse of false tonges, and requyreth men

HESE are the prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel: to lerne wyszdome, nurtoure, vnderstondinge, prudence, rightuousnesse, iudgment and equite. That the very babes might haue wyt, and that yonge men might haue knowlege and vnderstondinge. By hearinge, the wyse mā shal come by more wysdome: and by exto bewarre of aduoutry, because it is more perlous then theft or felony.

Chap. VII.

He exorteth vnto wiszdome, sheweth the condicions of harlottes, and what hurt happeneth vnto soch as enclyne to the prouocacios and desyres of the flesh.

Chap. VIII.

Wyszdome calleth men swetely vnto her, and telleth them what treasure and power she hath. A comendacion and prayse of wiszdome, wherout euery ma is exorted to cleue vnto her.

Chap. IX.

Wyszdome crieth vpö the ignoraūt, and promiseth them greate thinges. The foolish maner of a light woman.

Chap. X.

From this chapter forth vnto the XXXI, there are described many swete, louely and wyse sentences, which teach men wyszdome and what profit commeth of it : Agayne, how men maye auoyde foolishnesse, and the hurte therof.

Chap. XXXI.

Wyszdome warneth vs to bewarre of euell women, and descrybeth the couersacion, maner, behauoure of an honest maried wyfe.

perience, he shal be more apte to vnderstonde a parable, and the interpretacion therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speaches of the same. "The feare of the LORDE is the begynnynge of wysdome. But fooles despyse wysdome and nurtoure.

Che first Chapter.

A MY sonne, heare thy fathers doctryne, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shal brynge grace vnto thy heade, g shal be a cheyne aboute thy necke. My sonne, cosente not vnto synners,* yf they entyse the, and saye: come wyth us, let us laye wayte for bloude, g lurke preuely for the innocēt wythout a cause: let us swalowe the vp like § hell, *let us deuoure thē quycke and whole, as those that go downe in to the pytt. So shal we fynde all maner of costly riches, and fyll oure houses wyth spoyles. Cast in thy lott amonge us, we shal haue all one purse.

My sonne, walke not thou with them, refrayne thy fote frō their wayes. 'For their fete rūne to cuell,  $\sigma$  are haistie to shed bloude. But in vayne is  $\vartheta$  net layed forth before the byrdes eyes. Yee they thō selues laye wayte one for anothers bloude, and one of thō wolde slaye another. These are the wayes of all soch as be concetous, that one wolde rauyshanothers life.

Wyszdome crieth without, " g putteth forth hir voyce in the stretes. She calleth before  $\psi$ congregacion in v open gates, and sheweth hir wordes thorow § cite, sayenge: O ye childre, how loge wil ye loue childyshnesse? how longe wil 🖇 scorners delyte in scornynge, 🛪 🕏 vnwyse be enemies vnto knowlege? O turne you vnto my correccion: lo, I wil expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstöde my wordes. C Seinge then that I have called, and ye refused it: 'I haue stretched out my honde, and no mā regarded it, but all my coūcels haue ye despysed, and set my correccios at naught. Therfore shal I also laugh in youre destruccion, and mocke you, when y thinge that ye feare cometh vpon you: euen whe v thinge that ye be alrayed of, falleth in sodenly like a storme, and youre misery like a tempest: yee wha trouble and heuynesse cometh vpon you. Then shal they call vpo me, but I wil not heare: they shal seke me early, but they shal not fynde me: And y because they hated knowlege, and receaued not \$ feare of \$ LORDE, but abhorred my councell, and despysed my correceion. # The ij. Chapter.

Y sonne, yf thou wilt receaue my wordes, A and kepe my comaundemetes by the, that thine eare maye herken vnto wysdome, applie thine herte then to vnderstödinge. For yf thou criest after wyszdome, g callest for knowlege: yf thou sekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: The shalt thou vnderstonde y feare of the LORDE, and fynde ŷ knowlege of God. For it is the LORDE that geueth wyszdome, <sup>e</sup> out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstondinge. He preserueth y welfare of the rightuous, and defendeth them y walke innocently: he kepeth them in y right path, and preserueth y waye of his sayntes. Then shalt 38 thou vnderstonde rightuousnesse, judgment and equite, yee and euery good path. Yf wyszdome entre in to thine herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shal councell preserue the, and vnderstondinge shal kepe the. That thou mayest be delyuered fro 🕏 euell waye, and from the man y speaketh frowarde thinges. From soch as leaue the hye strete, and walke i v wayes of darcknesse: which reioyse in doynge euell, and delyte i wicked thinges: whose wayes are croked, and their pathes slaunderous.

<sup>4</sup>That thou mayest be delyuered also from  $\mathbb{C}$  the straunge woman, and from her that is not thine owne: which geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the huszbande of hir youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of hir God. For hir house is enclyned vnto death, and hir pathes vnto hell. All they that go in vnto her, come not agayne, nether take they holde of the waye of life.

That thou mayest walke in  $rac{1}{7}$  good waye, and kepe the pathes of the rightuous. For the iust shal dwell in the londe, and the innocentes shal remayne in it: but the vngodly shalbe roted out of  $rac{1}{7}$  londe, and the wicked doers shalbe taken out of it.

synne, but there is fauourable loue amonge the rightuous. The herte of him that hath vnderstondinge wil nether dispare for eny sorow, ner be to presumptuous for eny sodane ioye.

The houses of the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowne, but the tabernacles of  $\oint$  righteus shal florishe. There is a waye, which some men thinke to be right, but the ende therof ledeth vnto death. The herte is soroufull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrth is heuynesse. An vnfaithfull personne shal be fylled with his owne wayes, but a good mā wyl bewarre of soch. An ignoraūt body beleueth all thinges, but who so hath vnderstondinge, loketh well to his goinges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euell, but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An vnpacient man handeleth foolishly, but he that is well aduysed, doth other wayes.

The ignorant haue foolishnes in possessio, but the wyse are crowned with knowlege.

The cuell shal bowe them selues before  $\hat{y}$ good, and the vngodly shal wayte at the dores of the rightuous. The poore is hated euen of his owne neghbours, but the riche hath many frendes. Who so despyseth his neghboure, doth amysse: 'but blessed is he that hath pyte of the poore. They that ymagin wickednes, shalbe disapoynted: but they that muse vpô good thinges, vnto soch shal happen mercy and faithfulnesse. Diligēt laboure bryngeth riches, but where many vayne wordes are, truly there is scarcenesse.

Riches are an ornament vnto the wyse, but the ignoraunce of fooles is very foolishnesse. A faithfull wytnesse delyuereth soules, but a lyar dysceaueth them. The feare of the LORDE is a stroge holde, for vnto his he wyl be a sure defence. The feare of the LORDE is a well of life, to auoyde the snares of death. The increase and prosperite of the comons is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is the confucio of the prynce. Pacience is a token of wiszdome, but wrath and haistie displeasure is a token of foolishnesse. A mery herte is the life of the body, but rancoure consumeth awaye the bones. He that doth a poore man wroge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pitie of the poore, doth honoure vnto God.

The vngodly is afrayed of euery parell, but the rightuous hath a good hope  $eu\bar{e}$  in death. Wyszdome resteth in the herte of him that hath vnderstondinge, and he wyll teach them that are vnlerned. "Rightuousnes setteth vp the people, but wyckednesse bryngeth folke to destruction. A discrete seruaunt is a pleasure vnto  $\hat{y}$  kynge, but one  $\hat{y}$  is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

The rb. Chapter.

SOFTE āswere' putteth downe displeasure, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wyse tonge commendeth knowlege, a foolish mouth blabbeth out nothinge but foolishnesse. The eyes of the LORDE loke in euery place, both vpon  $\hat{y}$  good and badd. A wholsome tonge is a tre of life, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foole despyseth his fathers correccion, but he  $\hat{y}$ taketh hede whan he is reproued, shal haue  $\hat{y}$ more vnderstödinge.

In the house of the rightuous are greate riches, but in the increase of the vngodly there is mysordre. A wyse mouth poureth out knowlege, but  $\hat{y}$  herte of the foolish doth not so. 'The LORDE abhorreth  $\hat{y}$  sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the rightuous is acceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodly is an abhominaciō vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, but who so foloweth righteousnes, him he loueth. He that forsaketh  $\hat{y}$  right strete, shalbe sore punyshed:  $\underline{c}$  who so hateth correccion, falleth in to death. The hell with hir payne is knowne vnto the LORDE, how moch more then the hertes of men?

<sup>s</sup>A scornefull body loueth not one  $\dot{y}$  rebuketh him, nether wil he come amonge  $\dot{y}$  wyse. <sup>h</sup>A mery herte maketh a chearfull countenaunce, but an vnquyet mynde maketh it heuy. A wyse herte wil seke after knowlege, but  $\dot{y}$ mouth of fooles medleth with foolishnesse. All the dayes of the poore are miscrable, but a quyete herte is as a cotynuall feast. <sup>i</sup> Better is a litle with the feare of the LORDE then greate treasure, for they are not without sorowe. Better is a meace of potage with loue, then a fat oxe with eucll will.

'An angrie man stereth vp strife, but he  $\dot{y}$  is pacient stilleth discorde. The waye of  $\dot{y}$

Chap. 11.

In this chapter (and in the other also) he maketh oft tymes mesion of the wordes and couersacio of the vngodly: that by this meanes he maye the better cause men to despyse all creatures, in respecte of the only euclastinge God.

Chap. III.

Euery thinge hath a tyme. There is no thige, but God hath put tedyousnesse and trauayle in it, to exercise men withall. What so euer a man enioyeth of his laboure, the same is a gift of God, geuen to the intent that men shulde feare him.

were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them, or that wolde delyuer and defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I judged those that are deed, to be more happie then soch as be alyue : yee him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease the they both, because he seith not the miserable workes that are done vnder the Sonne. Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of laboure was hated of euery man. This is also a vaine thinge, and a vexacion of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, a eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (saieth he) is better with rest, the both $ B handes full with laboure and trauayle. Morouer, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanite vnder the Sonne. There is one man, no mo but himself alone, hauynge nether childe ner brother: yet is there no ende of his

carefull trauayle, his eyes can not be satisfied with riches, (yet doth he not remembre himself, a saye:) For whom do I take soch trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and miserable thinge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profit of their laboure. Yf one of them fall, his companyon helpeth him vp againe : But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, when two C slepe together, they are warme: but how can a body be warme alone? One maye be ouercome, but two maye make resistauce : A threfolde cable is not lightly broken. A poore childe beynge wyse, is better then an olde kinge, that doteth, and can not bewarre in tyme to come. "Some one commeth out of preson, a is made a kynge : a another which is borne in the kyngdome, commeth vnto pouerte. And I perceaued, y all men lyuynge vnder the Sonne, go with the seconde childe, that commeth vp in the steade of the other. As for the people that have been before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their joye the greater thorow him. This is also a vayne thinge and a vexacion of mynde. Whan thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy fote, and drawe nye, that thou mayest heare : 'that is better then the offeringes of fooles, for they knowe not what euell they do.

The b. Chapter.

BE not hastie with thy mouth, a let not this hert speake eny thige rashly be-For God is in heaven, a thou fore God. vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be fewe. For where moch carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: g where many wordes are, there men maye heare fooles. 'Yf thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to perfourme it. As for foolish vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou promyse eny thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shuldest promise, and not paye. Vse not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, y thou saye not before the angell: my foolishnesse is in y faute.

For the God wil be angrie at thy voyce, and destroye all y workes of thine handes.

And why? where as are many dreames a many wordes, there are also dyuerse vanities: <sup>d</sup> but loke y thou feare God. Yf thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealt withall, so y equite a the right of the lawe is wraisted in the londe : maruell not thou at soch judgmet, for one greate ma kepeth touch with another, and the mightie helpe the selues together. The whole londe also with the feldes and all that is therin, is in subieccion and bondage vnto y kinge.

He that loueth money, wil neuer be satis- 13 fied with money: and who so delyteth in riches, shal haue no profit therof. Is not this also a vayne thinge? Where as many riches are, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sauynge that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe man slepeth swetely, whether it be litle or moch that he eateth: 'but the abundaunce of the riche wil not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I have sene vnder the Sonne (namely) riches kepte to the hurte of him y hath them in possession.

<sup>1</sup> For oft times they perishe with his greate misery and trouble : and yf he haue a childe, it getteth nothinge. Like as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, and carieth nothinge awaye with him of all his laboure. This is a miserable plage, C y he shal go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, y he hath labored in the wynde? All the daies of his life also must he eate in the darcke, with greate carefulnesse, sicknesse a sorow.

"Therfore me thinke it a better and a fayrer thinge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his laboure, y he taketh vnder the Sonne all the dayes of his life which God geueth him, for this is his porcion. For vnto whom so euer God geueth riches, goodes and power, he geneth it him to enjoye it, to take it for his porcion, and to be refreshed of his laboure : this is now the gifte of God. For he thinketh not moch how longe he shal lyue, for so moch as God fylleth his hert with gladnesse.

The bi. Chapter.

91 7 THERE is yet a plage vnder 🕏 Sonne, 🛪 it is a generall thinge amonge mē: when God geneth a man riches, goodes g honoure, so that he wanteth nothinge of all that his herte can desyre : and yet God geueth him not leue to enjoye the same, but another man spêdeth them. This is a vayne thinge g a miserable plage. Yf a man begett an hundreth children, and lyue many yeares, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, nether be buried : as for him I saye, that an vntymely byrth is better then he. For he cometh to naught, a goeth his waye in to darcknes, and his name is forgotten. Morouer, he seyth not the Sonne, and knoweth of no rest nether here ner there: Yee though he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good life. Come not all to B one place? All the laboure that a man taketh, is for himself, and yet his desyre is neuer fylled after his mynde. For what hath the wyse more then the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walke before the lynynge? The sight of the eyes is better, then that the soule shulde so departe awaye. Howbeit this is also a vayne thinge and a disquietnesse of mynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victory of him that is mightier the he: A vayne thinge is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

The bij. Chapter.

FOR who knoweth what is good for man A lynynge, in 🕏 dayes of his vayne life, which is but a shadowe? Or, who wil tell a man, what shal happen after him vnder the Sonne? 'A good name is more worth then a precious oyntment, and the daye of death is better thē 🕈 daye of byrth.

It is better to go in to an house of mournynge, then in to a bancket house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuinge, taketh it to herte. It is better to be sory then to laugh, for whe the countenaunce is heuy, the herte is ioyfull. The herte of § wyse is in the mournynge house, but the hert of the foolish is in the house of myrth. It is better to geue eare to the chastenynge of a wyse man, 'then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughinge of fooles is like y crackynge of thornes vnder a pott. And v is but a vavne thinge.

Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man B to go out of his witt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thinge is better then the begynnynge. The pacient of sprete is better then the hie mynded. Be not haistely angrie in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Save not thou : What is the cause that v dayes of v olde tyme were better, then they y be now? for that were no wyse question. Wyszdome is better then riches, yee moch more worth then the eye sight. For wyszdome defendeth as well as moneye, and the excellent knowlege and wyszdome geueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Considre the worke of God, how that no man can make the thinge straight, which he maketh croked. Vse well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of mysfortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothinge els.

These ij. thiges also haue I cosidred in § C tyme of vanite: y the just man perisheth for his rightuousnes sake, a the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou nether to rightuous ner ouer wyse, "y thou perish not : be nether to vnrightuous also ner to foolish, lest thou die before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this,  $\mathfrak{g}$  not to let  $\mathfrak{F}$  go out of thy hande. For he y feareth God shal escape them all.

Wyszdome geneth more corage vnto the wyse, then ten mightie men of the citie: for there is not one just vpo earth, y doth good, a sinneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde y is spoken, lest thou heare thy serusunt curse the : for thine owne hert knoweth, that thou thy self also hast oft tymes spoke euell by other men. All these thinges haue I proued because of wyszdome : "for I thought to be wyse, but she wente farther fro me then she was before, yee a so depe that I might 19 not reach vnto her. I applied my mynde also vnto knowlege, and to seke out sciece, wisdome and vnderstondinge: to knowe the foolishnesse of the vngodly, and the erroure of dotinge fooles. And I founde," that a woman is bytterer then death : for she is a very angle, hir hert is a nett, and hir handes are chevnes. Who so pleaseth God shal escape from her, but the synner will be taken with her.

4 Rom. 11. c. $2 Re. 20. c. Eccli. 7. a. 2 Par. 6. f. Luc. 17. a.

Beholde (sayeth  $\mathring{y}$  preacher) this haue I diligently searched out  $\mathfrak{g}$  proued,  $\mathring{y}$  I might come by knowlege: which as yet I seke, and fynde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. 'Lo, this onely haue I founde, that God made man iust  $\mathfrak{g}$  right, but they seke dyuerse sotylties, where as no man hath wyszdome  $\mathfrak{g}$ vnderstödinge, to geue answere there vnto.

The biij. Chapter.

WYSZDOME maketh a mas face to A shyne,<sup>d</sup> but malice putteth it out of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundemet (I warne the) a the ooth y thou hast made vnto God. Be not haistie to go out of his sight, a se thou cotynue in no euell thinge: for what so euer it pleaseth him, y doeth he. Like as when a kynge geueth a charge, his commaundement is mightie: Euen so who maye saye vnto him : what doest thou?" Who so kepeth the commaundement, shall fele no harme: but a wyse mans herte discerneth tyme and maner: For every thinge wil have opportunite and iudgment, and this is the thinge that maketh men full of carefulnes a sorowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell him? Nether is there eny mā ý hath power ouer ý sprete, to kepe stil y sprete, ner to haue eny power in the tyme of death: It is not he also that can make an ende of the batayll, nether maye vngodlynes delyuer him y medleth withall.

33 All these thinges have I considered, and applied my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sonne: how one man hath lordshipe vpon another to his owne harme. For I have oft sene y vngodly' brought to their graues, and fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moch y they were forgotten in the cite, where they were had in so hye a greate reputacion. This is also a vayne thinge. Because now that euell workes are not haistely punyshed, the hert of man geueth. him self ouer vnto wickednesse: But though an euell personne offende an hundreth tymes, and haue a longe life: yet am I sure, that it shal go well with the that feare God, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be well with him, nether shal he prologe his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanite vpon earth: There C be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of v rightuous. This me thinke also a vaine thinge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thinge vnder the Sonne, then to eate and drynke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of his laboure all the daies of his life, which God geueth him vnder the Sonne. When I applied my mynde to lerne wyszdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of soch a fashion, y I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner night) I vnderstode of all y workes of God, that it is not possible for a man, to attayne vnto 🖞 workes that are done vnder § Sonne: and though he bestowe his laboure to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto thē: yee though a wyse man wolde vndertake to knowe them, yet might he not fynde them.

The ir. Chapter.

FOR all these thinges purposed I in my  $\mathfrak{A}$ mynde to seke out. The righteus and wyse yee and their workes also are in the hande of God: and there is no man that knoweth ether the loue or hate of the thinge that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth with the rightuous as with the vngodly:<sup> $\mathfrak{s}$ </sup> with the good  $\mathfrak{a}$ cleane as with the vncleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth not: like as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also <sup>d</sup> O how fayre art thou (my loue) how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes. O how fayre art thou (my beloued) how well fauored art thou? Oure bed is decte with floures, ysylinges of oure house are of Cedre tre, goure balkes of Cypresse.

The if. Chapter.

I AM the floure of the felde, and lylie of the valleys: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue amonge the daughters.

Like as the aple tre amonge the trees of the wodd, so is my beloued amonge the sonnes. My delite is to sitt vnder his shadowe, for his frute is swete vnto my throte. He bryngeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refresh me with grapes,  $c\bar{c}$ forte me with apples, for I am sick of loue. 'His left hade lyeth vnder my heade,  $\tau$  his right hande enbraceth me.

I charge you (o ye doughters of Ierusalem) B by the Roes g hyndes of the felde, y ye wake not vp my loue ner touch her, till she be content herself.

Me thynke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hoppinge vpon ymountaynes, and leapinge ouer the litle hilles. My beloued is like a Roo or a yonge hart. Beholde, he stondeth behynde oure wall, he loketh in at the wyndowe,  $\mathfrak{q}$  pepeth thorow the grate.

The bij. Chapter.

WHAT pleasure haue ye more in § Sula-A mite, than when she daunseth amonge the men of warre? O how pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shues, thou prynces daughter? Thy thees are like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a connynge workmaster : Thy nauell is like a rounde goblett, which is neuer without drynke: Thy wombe is like an heape of wheate, sett aboute with lilies: Thy two brestes are like two twyns of yonge roes: Thy neck is as it were a tower of yuery: Thyne eyes are like y water poles in Hesebon, besyde the porte of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is like the tower of Libanus, which loketh towarde Damascus: That heade that stondeth vpon the is like Carmel: The hayre of thy heade is like the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre and louely art thou (my derlynge) in pleasures? Thy stature is like a date tre, and thy brestes like the grapes. I sayde: I wil clymme vp in to the date tre, and take holde of his braunches. Thy brestes also shalbe as the vyne grapes, the smell of thy nostrels like the smell of apples, and thy throte like the best wyne.

This shalbe pure g cleare for my loue, his lippes and teth shal have their pleasure. There wil I turne me vnto my loue, and he shal turne him vnto me. O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take oure lodginge in the vyllages. In the mornynge wil we ryse by tymes, and go se the vynyarde : yf it be spronge forth, yf the grapes be growne, g yf the pomgranates be shott out. There wil I geue the my brestes: There shal the Mandragoras geue their smell besyde oure dores: There (o my loue) haue I kepte vnto the all maner of frutes, both new and olde.

The biij. Chapter.

THAT I might fynde the without a kysse y, whom I loue as my brother which suckte my mothers brestes: a that thou woldest not be offended, yf I toke the and brought the in to my mothers house: that thou mightest teach me, and that I might geue the drynke of spyced wyne and of the swete sappe of my pomgranates. "His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heade, a his right hande embraceth me.

I charge you (o ye daughters of Ierusalē) that ye wake not vp my loue ner touch her, tyll she be content herself. What is she this, that cometh vp from the wildernes, and leaneth vpon hir loue? I am the same that waked B the vp amonge the aple trees, where thy mother beare y, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

O set me as a seale vpo thine hert, and as a seale vpon thine arme : for loue is mightie as the death, a gelousy as the hell. Hir coales are of fyre, and a very flamme of the LORDE: so y many waters are not able to quench loue, nether maye y streames drowne it. Yee yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shulde counte it nothinge.

When oure loue is tolde oure yonge sister, whose brestes are not yet growne, what shal we do vnto her? Yf she be a wall, we shal buylde a syluer bollworke there vpon: Yf she be a tower, we shal festen her with bordes of Cedre tre.

Yf I be a wall, g my brestes like towres, 🕼 then am I as one that hath founde fauoure in his sight.

Salomon had a vynyarde at Baal Hamon, this vynyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: y euery one for the frute therof shulde geue him a thousande peces of syluer. But my vynyarde (o Salomon) geueth the a thousande, and two hundreth to y kepers of the frute.

Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons maye herken to the same. O get the awaye (my loue) as a roo or a yonge hert vnto the swete smellinge moūtaynes.

Heare the worde of the LORDE ye tyrauntes of Sodoma: and herken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am discontent for the brentoffringes of wethers, and with y fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gootes. When ye apeare before me, who requyreth you to treade within my porches? Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost laboure. "I abhorre youre incense.

Israel: wente vp toward Ierusalem to besege it (but wanne it not.) Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahas) herde worde therof, y Siria and Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (yee and y hertes also of his people) like as a tre in the felde, that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahas (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at the heade of § ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him : take hede to thy self and be still, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tales: that is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnes of Rezin the Sirian and Romelies sonne : because that the Kynge of Siria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wekedly conspyred agaynst the, sayenge : We will go downe in to Iuda, vexe the, and brynge them vnder vs, and set a Kynge there, euen the sonne of Taball. For thus saieth the LORDE God ther to, It shall not so go forth, nether come so to passe: for the head citie of § Sirians is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and threscore yeare, shal Ephraim be nomore a people. And the chefe citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no promyse be kepte with you."

Morouer, God spake vnto Ahas, sayenge : requyre a token of the LORDE thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde $ hight aboue. The sayde Ahas: I will requyre none, nether will I tempte the LORDE. The LORDE answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you, that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therfore the LORDE shal geue you a token of him self: "Beholde, a virgin shal coceaue and beare a sonne, and shal call his name Emanuel. Butter and hony shal he eate, he maye knowe the eucl, and chose y good. But or ever that childe come to knowlege, to eachue the cuel and chose the good: The londe (that thou art so afrayde for) shalbe desolate of both hir kynges.

CROUER the LORDE sayde vnto M me : 'Take the a greate leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haist him to spoyle. And Inmediatly I called vnto me faithful wytnesses: Vrias the prest, and Zacharias § sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the prophetisse, that now had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayde the LORDE to me: geue him this name: Maherschalal haschbas, that is. a spedie robber, an hastie spoyler. For why, or euer the childe shal haue knowlege to saye: Abi and Im, y is father, and mother : shal y riches of Damascus and y substaunce of Samaria be take awaye, thorow the kynge of ŷ Assirians.

Excepte Emanuel: (that is God) be with us. For the LORDE chastised me, and toke me by y honde, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the wave of this people. And many shal stomble, fall, and be broke vpon him : yee they shalbe snared and taken. Ð

Now laye the witnesses together (sayde the LORDE) 'and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I waite vpon the LORDE, that hath turned his face from the house of Iacob, and I loke vnto him. 'But lo, as for me, and the children which the LORDE hath geuen me: we are a token and a wondre in Israel, for the LORDE of hoostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hill of Syon.

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske councel at the soythsayers, witches, charmers and coniurers, then make them this answere: Is there a people enywhere, that axeth not councel at his God: whether it be concernynge the dead, or the lyuynge? Neuertheles § people that haue dwelt in darcknesse, shal se a greate light. As for them that dwel in the londe of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the light shyne. Shalt thou multiplie the people, and not increase the ioye also? <sup>h</sup>They shal reioyse before the euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the peoples burthen : the staff of hys shulder, 'and the rod of his oppressoure, as in § daye at Madiā.

Morouer all temerarious and sedicious power (yee where there is but a cote fyled with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto us a childe shalbe borne, 'and vnto us a sonne shalbe geuē. Vpō his shulder shal the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name: 'The wōderous geuer of councel, the mightie God, the euerlastinge father the prynce of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal syt vpon the seate of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablish it with equyte and rightuousnesse, from thence forth for euermore. This shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoostes bringe to passe.

The LORDE sent a worde in to Iacob, the same is come in to Israel. All the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hie stomackes, on this maner: The tyle worcke is fallen downe, but we will buylde it with harder stones. them before, and the Philistynes behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all this, the "wrath of the LORDE shal not ceasse, but yet his hande shalbe stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto him, that chastiseth them, nether do they seke the LORDE of hoostes. Therfore the LORDE shal rote out of Israel both hcade and tale, braunch and twygge in one daye. By the heade, is vnderstonde the Senatoure and honorable man, and by $ tale, the prophet that preacheth lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a right case, soch be disceauers. Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but cast awaye.

Therfore shal the LORDE haue no pleasure in their yonge mē, nether fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. For thei are altogether ypocrites and wicked, and all their mouthes speake foly. After all this shal not the LORDES wrath cease, but yet his honde shalbe stretched out still. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes: And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a redebush, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde.

For this cause shal § wrath of the LORDE of hoostes fall vpon the londe, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no man shal spare his brother. Yf a man do turne him to the right honde, he shal famesh, or to the lefte hande to eat, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal eate the flesh of his owne arme: Manasses shal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shal eate Iuda. After all this shal not the LORDES wrath ceasse, but yet shal his honde be stretched out still.

For I shal sende him amonge those ypocritish people, amonge the people that have deserved my disfauoure shal I send him : that he may utterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe like the myre in the strete. Howbeit his meanynge is not so, nether thinketh his harte of this fashion. But he ymagineth only, how he maye ouer- 13 throwe and destroye moch people, for he saieth : are not my princes all kynges? Is not Calno as easie to wynne, 'as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lighter to ouercome Damascus the Samaria? As who say: I were able to wynne the kingdome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Ierusalem and Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Ierusalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

Wherfore the LORDE saieth: As soone as I haue perfourmed my whole worcke vpon the Hyl of Syon and Ierusalem: the will I also vyset the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he stondeth thus in his owne coceate : / This do I, thorow the power of myne owne honde, and thorow my wisdome: For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the londes of the people, I robbe their prynces: and (like one of the worthies) I dryue them from their hie seates. they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto the. Art thou wounded also as we? art thou become like vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell:" Mothes shalbe layde vnder the, a wormes shalbe thy coueringe.

How art thou fallen from heauen<sup>d</sup> (o Lucifer) thou faire mornige childe? hast thou gotten a fall even to the grounde, thou that (notwithstondinge) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thine harte: I will clymme vp in to heauen, and make my  $\sigma$ seate aboue the starres of God, I wyll syt vpon the glorious mount toward the North, I wyll clymme vp aboue the cloudes, a wilbe like the highest of all. How happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lie, euery one at home in his owne palace, with worshipe, and thou art cast out of thy graue like a wilde braunch : like as dead mens rayment that are shott thorow with the swerde: as they that go downe to the stones of the depe : as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them? Euen because that thou hast waisted thy lode, and destroyed thy people. For the generacion of the wicked shalbe without honoure, for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroye their childre, for their fathers wickednes: they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the londe, and fyll the worlde ful of castels and townes.

I wil stonde vp agaynst them (sayeth the B LORDE of hoostes) and root out y name and generacion of Babilon (saieth the LORDE) g wil geue it to the Otters, and wil make water poddels of it. And I wil swepe them out with the besome of destruccion, sayeth the LORDE of hoostes. The LORDE of hoostes hath sworne an ooth, sayege: It shal come to passe as I have determined: a shalbe fulfilled as I have deuysed. It shal happe to the, as when one sheareth in haruest, which cutteth his handful with the sickle, g when one gathreth v sheaues together in the valley, of Rephaim, there remayneth yet some ears ouer. Or as whe one shaketh an olyue tre, 'which fyndeth but two or thre olvue beries aboue in the toppe, and foure or fyue in the braunches. Thus the LORDE God of Israel hath spoken.

Then shal man couerte agayne vnto his maker, g turne his eyes to the holy one of Israel. And shal not turne to the aulters that are y worke of his owne hodes, nether shal he loke vpon groaues g ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shal their stronge cities be desolate, like as were once y forsake plowes g corne, which they forsoke, "for feare of y children of Israel.

So shalt thou (o Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotte God thy Sauioure, a hast not called to remebraunce § rock of thi strength, Wherfore thou hast also set a fayre plate, a grafted a straunge braunch. And after lxx. yeares, it shal forgotten. happē to Tirus as with an harlot that playeth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (saie men to her) and go aboute the citie, thou art yet an vnknowne wensche, make pastyme with dyuerse balettes, wherby thou mayest come in to acquantaunce. Thus shal it happen after lxx. yeares. "The LORDE shal uiset the citie of Tirus, and it shal come agayne to hyr Marchaundyse, and shal occupie with al the Kingdomes that be in the worlde. But all hir occupiege and wynnynge, shalbe halowed vnto the LORDE.<sup>4</sup> For then shal they laye vp nothinge behinde them nor vpon heapes: but the marchaudise of Tirus shal beloge vnto the citisens of the LORDE, to the fedinge and susteninge of the hugrie, and to the clothinge of the aged.

The rriif. Chapter.

A | DEHOLDE, y LORDE shal waist and D plage the worlde, 'he shal make the face of the earth desolate, c scatre abrode y inhabitours therof. Then shal the prest be as the people, the master as the seruaunt, the dame like the mayde, the seller like the byer, he that ledeth vpon vsury, like him y boroweth vpo vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yee miserably shal v worlde be waysted a clene destroyed. For § LORDE hath so determed in himself. The earth shalbe heuve and decaye : The face of  $\psi$  earth shal perish  $\pi$  fal awaye, the proude people of y worlde shal come to naught, For y earth is corrupte of hir indwellers.

For why? they have offended y lawe, B chaunged the ordinatices, and made the euerlastinge testamet of none effecte, And therfore shal the curse deuoure the earth: for they y dwell thero, haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brent also, and those that remayne, shalbe very few. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and all y haue bene mery in harte, shal sighe. "The myrth of tabrettes shalbe layde downe, the chere of the ioyful shal cease, and the pleasure of lutes shal haue an ende: there shal no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beer shal be bytter to the that drinke it, the wicked cities shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

because of wyne, all mens chere shal vanish awaye, and all ioye of the earth shal passe. Desolation shal remayne in the cities, and the gates shalbe smytten with waistnesse. For it shal happen vnto all londes and to all people, like as when a mā smyteth downe v olyues, y are left vpon the tre: 'or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheringe is out. And those same (that remayne) shal lift vp their voyce, and be glad, a shal magnifie the glory of the LORDE, euen from the see, g prayse the name of the LORDE God of Israel, in the valeis and Ilodes. We heare songes sunge to g the prayse of the rightuous, fro al the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake : O my vnfrutfulnesse, o my pouerte, Wo is me, all is ful of synneres, which offende of purpose and malice. And therfore, (o thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hode for the, feare, pyt and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crie, shal fall in to the pyt. And yf he come out of the pyt, he shalbe take with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shalbe opened, and the foundacion of the earth shal moue.

The earth shal geue a greate crack, it shal haue a sore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earth shal stacker like a dronken man, and be takē awaye like a tent. Hir misdedes shal lie so heuye vpō her, ý she must fall, and neuer rise vp agayne. At the same tyme shal the LORDE mustre together the hie hooste aboue, and ý kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as prisoners be, and shalbe shut in one warde and punished innumerable daies. <sup>6</sup> The Moone and the Sonne shalbe ashamed, when the LORDE of hoostes shal rule them at Ierusalem vpon the mount Sion, before and with his excellent councel.

The rrb. Chapter.

LORDE, thou art my God, I wil prayse the, and magnifie thy name: For thou bringest marvelous thinges to passe, acordinge to thine olde councels, truly and stedfastly. * Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone: and of head cities, broken walles: The palaces of the wicked destroyest thou out of the citie, that they shal neuer be buylded againe. Therfore the very rude people must magnifie the, and the cities of the cruel heithen must feare the. For thou art the poore mans helpe, a stregth for the neadful in his necessite. Thou art a defence agaynst eael wether, a schadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou art like a stroge whyrle wynde, that casteth downe the boostinge of the vngodly, thou kepest men from heate with the shadow of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the braunches of tyrauntes.

Morouer the LORDE of hoostes shal once B prepare a feast for all people vpo the hill: "A plenteous, costly, pleasaunt feast, of fat and welfed beastes, of swete and most pure thinges. Vpon the hill shal he take awaye the syde vale v hageth before v face of al people, and the coueringe wherwith all Gentiles are couered. 'As for death, he shal vtterly cosume it, The LORDE God shal wipe awaye the teares from all faces, and take awaye the confuciō of his people thorow y whole worlde. For y LORDE himself hath sayde it.

At the same tyme shal it be sayde : lo, this is oure God in who we put oure trust, 'and he hath healed vs. This is the LORDE that we haue wayted for: Let vs reioyse g delyte in his health. For the hode of § LORDE ceaseth vpō this hil. But Moab shalbe throsshe downe vnder bim, like as the straw is trode vnder fete in a doge hill. For he shal stretch out his hodes vpon him, like as a swimmer doth to swymme. And with the power of his hondes shal he cast downe his hie pompe. As for his stroge holdes g hie walles: he shal buwe them, cast the downe, and fell the to the grounde in to dust.

The rrbi. Chapter.

A THEN shal this songe be sunge in the londe of Iuda: "We have a stroge citie, the walles of the ordinauce shal kepe vs. Ope y gates, y the good people maye go in, which laboureth for the treuth. And thou, which art the doer and hast the matter in honde: shult prouyde for peace, "euc the peace y me hope for in the. Hope stil in the LORDE, for in the LORDE God is euerlastinge stregth. For why, it is he, y bringeth lowe the hie mynded citesyns, a casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth the to the groude, yee eue in to § myre, § they maye be trode vnder the fete of the symple, g with the steppes of the poore. Thou (LORDE) cosidrest the path of y rightuous, whether it be right, whether the waye of y rightuous be right. Therfore (LORDE) we have a respecte vnto the waye of thy iudgmentes, thy name and thy remebraunce reioyse the soule. "My soule lusteth after the all the night loge, a my mynde haisteth frely to the. For as soone as thy judgment is knowne to the worlde, the the inhabitours of the earth lerne rightuousnesse. But the vngodly (though he have receased 13 grace) yet lerneth he not rightuousnesse, but in that place where he is punished, he offendeth, a feareth not the glory of the LORDE.

LORDE, they wil not se thine hie honde, but they shal se it, and be confounded : whe thou shalt deuoure them with the wrath of the people, and with the fyre of thine enemies. But vnto vs (LORDE) prouvde for peace: <sup>4</sup> for thou workest in vs all oure workes. O LORDE oure God, though soch lordes haue dominacion vpon vs as knowe not the : yet graute, that we may only hope in the, and kepe thy name in remembraunce. ' The malicious Tyrauntes whe they die, are nether in life nor in the resurrectio, for thou visitest the and rootest the out, and destroyest all the memoryall of them. Agayne, thou increacest the people (o LORDE), thou increacest the people, thou shalt be praysed and magnified in all  $\psi$  endes of the worlde. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite which they complane of, is vnto the a chastenynge before the. Like as a wife with C childe (whē hir trauayle cometh vpo her) ' is ashamed, crieth and suffreth the payne: Eue so are we (o LORDE) in thy sight. We are with childe, we trauayle, ' a beare, a with the sprete we bringe forth health, wherethorow the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the worlde perish not.

" But as for thy dead men and ours, that be departed, they are in life and resurrection. They lie in the earth, they wake, a haue ioye: for thy dew is a dew of life t light. But they had no will to heare. And therfore the LORDE shal answere their a stubbournes (Comaunde y maye be comaunded, byd y maye be bydden, forbyd y maye be forbyddē, kepe backe y maye be kepte backe, here a litle, there a litle) That they maye go forth, fall backwarde, be brussed,

The rrbij. Chapter.

A THEN the LORDE with his heuye, great and loge swearde shal vyset Leuiatha, that invincible serpet : eue Leuiatha y croked serpent, and shal slaye the Wallfish in § see. At the same tyme shal me synge of the vynvarde of Muscatel. I the LORDE kepe it, and water it in due season. I watch daye g night, that no man breake in to it. I beare no euel wil in my mynde. Who will compell me, that I greatly forgettinge all faithfulnesse, shulde burne it vp at once with thornes g bushes? Or who will enforce me to kepe or make peace? It wil come to this poynte, y Iacob shalbe rooted againe, and Israel shalbe grene a beare floures, a they shal fyll y whole worlde with their frute. Smyteth he not his smyter, as euel as he is smytte himself? B Destroieth he not § murtherers, as he is murthured? Euery mā recopenseth with § measure y he receaueth: He museth vpo his sore wynde, as vpō the dayes of extreme heate. And therfore shal the iniquite of Iacob be thus reconciled. And so shal he take awaye all ŷ frute of his synnes.

<sup>b</sup>As for aulter stones, he shal make them all as stones beaten to poulder: the Groues and Idols shal not stonde. They go downe in to Egipte, (and axe me no councel) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and coforte in the shadowe of the Egipcias. But Pharaos helpe shalbe youre cofucion, and the comforte in the Egipcians shadowe shalbe youre owne shame. Youre rulers haue bene at Zoan, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes. *But ye shal all be ashamed of the people vmaye not helpe you, which shal not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confucion.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpo 13 their backes towarde the South, thorow the waye that is ful of parell and trouble, because of the lyo and lyones, of the Cockatrice and shutynge dragon. will? The LORDE sayde vnto me: go downe in to that londe, that thou mayest destroye it. Then sayde Eliachim, Sobna a Iohah vnto Rabsaches: Speake to vs thy seruauntes (we praye the) in the Sirians language, for we vnderstonde it well: And speake not to vs in the Iewes tunge, lest the folcke heare, which lieth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsaches: Thinke ye, y the kinge sent me to speake this only vnto you? Hath he not sent me to the also, that lie vpô the wall? that they be not côpelled to eate their owne donge, and drinke their owne stale with you?

And Rabsaches stode stiff, g cried with a loude voyce in the Iewes tuge, and sayde: Now take hede, how the greate kinge of the Assiriüs geueth you warnynge. Thus saieth the kinge: Let not Ezechias disceaue you, for he shal not be able to delyuer you. Morouer, let not Ezechias comforte you in the LORDE, when he saieth : 'The LORDE with out doute shal defende vs, a shal not geue ouer this cite in to the hondes of the kingo of the Assirias, beleue him not. But thus saieth the kinge of Assiria: opteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: So maye euery mā enioye his vynyardes and fygetrees, and drinke the water of his cisterne : vnto the tyme that I come myself, a bringe you in to a londe, y is like youre owne : wher in is wheat and wyne, which is both sowen with sede, and planted with vynyardes. Let not Ezechias disceaue you, when he sayeth vnto you: the LORDE shal delyuer us.

"Might the goddes of the Gentiles kepe 刃 euerymans londe, from the power of the kinge of the Assirians? Wher is the God of hemath a Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharnaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my honde? Or which of all the goddes of the lodes, hath delivered their countre out of my power, so that the LORDE shulde delyuer lerusalem fro my honde? Vnto this, Ezechias messaungers helde their tunges, and answored not one worde: for the kinge had charged them, that they shulde geue him none answere. So came Eliachim Elchias sonne the presidet, Sobna the scrybe, and Ioah Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, a tolde him the wordes of Rabsaches.

in to the temple of the LORDE. But he sent Eliachim the Presidet, Sobna the scrybe with the eldest prestes cloothed in sack, vnto the Prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, a they sayde vnto him: Thus saieth Ezechias: this is the daye of trouble, of plage c of wrath: like as when a childe cometh to the byrth, but the woman hath no power to bringe it forth. The LORDE thy God (no doute) hath well considered the wordes of Rabsaches, whom his lorde y kinge of the Assirians hath sent, to defie a blaspheme the lyuynge God : with soch wordes, as the LORDE thy God hath herde right well. And therfore lift vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruauntes of kinge Ezechias came to Esay.

And Esay gaue them this answere: Saie thus vnto youre lorde: thus saieth the LORDE: Be not afrayde of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherwith the kinge of Assiriās seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I will cause a wynde go ouer him,<sup>d</sup> as soone as he heareth it, he shal go agayne in to his countre, there will I distroye him with the swerde. 'Now when Rabsaches returned, he founde  $\hat{y}$  kinge of Assiria layenge sege to Lobna, for he had vnderstonde, that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rumoure,  $\hat{y}$  Taracha kinge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.

And when the kinge of Assiria herde y, he sent other messaungers to kinge Ezechias, with this commaundement. Saye thus to Ezechias kinge of Iuda: Let not thy God disceaue the, in whom thou hopest, a sayest: Ierusalē shal not be geue in to the hondes of the kinge of Assiria. For thou knowest well, how the kinges of Assiria haue handled all the londes, that they have subuerted, a hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gctiles (whom my progenitours coquered) delivered at eny tyme thorow their goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, I a the childre of Eden, which dwell at Thalassar. Where is the kinge of Hemath, a the kinge of Arphad, a the kinge of the citie Sepharnaim, Ena and Aua? Now @ when Ezechias had receaued ŷ lettre of the messaungers, a red it, he went vp in to the house of the LORDE, a opened the lettre before $ LORDE. And Ezechias prayed before the LORDE on this maner: OLORDE of hoostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest Encline thine eare LORDE a cosidre, open thine eyes (o LORDE,) a se, and pondre all the wordes of Sēnacherib, which hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the, the lyuynge God. It is true (o LORDE) that the kinges of Assiria haue coquered all kingdomes a londes, a cast their goddes in the fyre. Notwithstodinge those were no goddes but the workes of mens hondes, of wodd or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Delyuer vs then (o LORDE oure God) from the hondes of Sennacherib, y all kingdomes of the earth mave knowe, that thou only art y LORDE. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defied or blasphemed? "And agaynst who hast thou lifted vp thy voyce, a exalted thy proude lokes? euen agaynst the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruauntes hast blasphemed the LORDE, and thus holdest thou of thy self: I couer the hie mountaynes, a sydes of Libanus with my horsmen. And there wil I cut downe the hie Cedre trees a the fayrest Fyrre trees. I will vp in to the heyth of it a in to the chefest of his timbre woddes. Yf there be no water, I wil graue g drynke. That same wil I do now also: waist, destroye, g bringe the stronge cities vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe like lame men, brought in feare g confounded. They shalbe like the grasse g grene herbes in the felde, like the hay vpo house toppes, that wythereth, afore it be growne vp.

For the escaped shal go out of Ierusalē,  $\alpha$  the remnaunte from the mount Sion. And this shal the gelousy of the LORDE of hoostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus saieth the J LORDE, cocernynge the kinge of the Assirians: He shall not come in to the citie, and shal shute no arowe in to it, there shall no shilde hurte it, nether shal they graue aboute it. The same waye that he came, shal he returne, and not come at this citie, saieth the LORDE. And I wil kepe and saue the citie (saieth he) for myne owne, g for my seruaunte Dauids sake.

Thus the angel went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hooste, an clxxxv. thousande. And when men arose vp early (at Ierusalā:) Beholde, all laye ful of deed bodies. So Sennacherib the kinge of the Assirians brake vp, and dwelt at Niniue. Afterwarde it chaunsed, as he prayed in the Teple of Nesrah his god, that Adramalech and Sarazer his owne sonnes slewe him with the swearde, and fled in to the londe of Ararat. And Esarhadon his sonne reigned after him.

wynges shal growe vpon them: When they runne, they shal not fall: and when they go, they shal not be weery.

The rli. Chapter.

B E still (ye Ilondes) and herken vnto me. Be stronge ye people, Come hither, and shew youre cause, we will go to the lawe together. Who rayseth vp $ iuste from the rysinge of the Sonne, and calleth him to go forth ? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kinges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the groude with his swearde, and scatre them like stuble with his bowe? He foloweth vpon them, and goeth safely himself, and cometh in no footpath with his fete. Who hath made, created, and called the generacions from the begynnynge? Euen I the LORDE, "which am the first, and with the last.

Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye feare, and ye endes of the earth, that ye maye feare, and draw nye, and come hither. Euery man hath exorted his neghboure, and brother, and bydden him be strongo. The Smyth conforted the moulder,  $\mathfrak{g}$  the Ironsmyth the hammerman, sayenge: It shalbe good, that we fasten this cast worke : and then they fastened it with nales, that it shulde not be moued. And 弼 thou Israel my seruaunt: Iacob my electe sede of Abrahā my beloued, whom I led from the endes of the earth by the honde: For I called the from farre, a saide vnto the : Thou shalt be my seruaunt : 'I haue chosen the, a will not cast y awaye : be not afrayde, for I wil be with  $\psi$ . Loke not behinde  $\psi$ , for I wil be thy God, to stregth y, helpe y, a to kepe y with this right hode of myne. Beholde, all they that resist the, shal come to confucion and shame: and thine aduersaries shalbe destroyed a brought to naught. So that who so seketh after them, shal not fynde them. Thy destroyers shal perish, g so shall they that vndertake to make batell agaynst the. For I thy LORDE g God, wil strength thy right honde. Euen I that saye vnto the: Feare not, I will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou litle worme Iacob, and thou despysed Israel: For I will helpe the, saieth the LORDE, a the holyone of Israel thine avenger. Beholde, I wil make the a treadinge cart g a new flale, y thou mayest throsshe g grynde the mountaynes, and bringe the hilles to poulder. Thou shalt fanne them, a the wynde shal carie them awaye, a the whyrlwynde shal scatre thē. But thou shalt reioyse in the LORDE, and shalt delite in praysinge the holyone of Israel.

When the thurstie and poore seke water a fynde none, 'g when their tunge is drie of thurst : 4 I geue it them, saieth the LORDE. I the God of Israel forsake them not. I bringe forth floudes in the hilles, g welles in the playne feldes. I turne y wildernes to ryuers, and the drie londe to condytes of water. I plante in the wayst grounde trees of Cedre, Boxe, Myrre and olyues. And in the drie, I set Fyrre trees, elmes and hawthornes together. All this do I, y they altogether maye se and marcke, perceaue with their hertes, a considre: that the honde of the LORDE maketh these thinges, and that the holyone of Israel bringeth them to passe. Stonde at youre cause (saieth the LORDE) and bringe forth youre strögest grounde, counceleth the kinge of Iacob. Let the goddes come forth them selues, and shewe vs the thinges y are past, what they be : let the declare the vnto vs, y we may take them to herte, and knowe them herafter. Ether, let the shewe vs thinges for to come, and tel vs what shalbe done herafter: so shal we knowe, that they be goddes. Shewe somthinge, ether good or bad, so wil we both knowlege y same, a tel it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of naught, a youre makinge is of naught, but abhomination hath chosen you. Neuertheles I haue waked vp one from the North, g he shal come. And another from the East, which shal call vpo my name, g shal come to the prynces, as the Potter to his claye, g as § Potter treadeth downe the myre. Who tolde y afore? So wil we confesse a saye, that he is rightuous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth eny thinge, there is none also that heareth youre wordes. Beholde, I will first graute the of Sion & Ierusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I cosidre : there is not one amonge thē ý prophecieth, nether (when I axe him) y answereth one worde. Lo, wicked are they a vayne, with the thinges also that they take in honde: yee wynde are they, and emptynesse, with their ymages together.

TERKEN vnto me, ye that holde of rightuousnes, ye that seke the LORDE. Take hede vnto the stone, wherout ye are hewen, and to the graue wherout ye are digged. 'Considre Abraham youre father, g Sara that bare you : how that I called him alone, prospered him wel, a encreased him : how the LORDE conforted Sio, and repayred all hir decaye : makinge hir deserte as a Paradise, and hir wildernesse as the garden of the LORDE. Myrth and ioye was there, thankesgeuynge and v voyce of prayse. Haue respecte vnto me then (o my people) and laye thine eare to me: for a lawe, and an ordinaunce shal go forth fro me,* to lighten the Gentiles. It is hard by, that my health a my rightuousnesse shal go forth, and the people shalbe ordred with myne arme.

The Ilondes (that is § Gentiles) shal hope 13 in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lift vp youre eyes toward heaue, and loke vpon the earth beneth. 'For the heauens shal vanish awaye like smoke, and the earth shall teare like a clothe, g they that dwel therin, shal perish in like maner. "But my health endureth for euer, and my rightuousnes shall not ceasse. Therfore hercken vnto me, ye y haue pleasure in rightuousnes, "thou people that bearest my lawe in thine herte. <sup>e</sup> Feare not the curse of men, be not afrayde of their blasphemies g reuylinges : for wormes g mothes shal eat the vp like clothe g woll. But my rightuousnesse shal endure for euer, g my sauynge health from generacion to generacion.

Wake vp, wake vp, t he stronge : O thou arme of the LORDE: wake vp, lyke as in tymes past, euer and sence the worlde beganne. "Art not thou he, that hast wounded that proude lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces? Art not thou even he, which hast dried vp the depe of the see, which hast made playne the see grounde, that the delyuered might go thorow?" THUS saieth the LORDE: Where is the 21 bill of youre mothers deuorcemet, that I sent vnto her ?" or who is the vsurer, to who I solde you? Beholde, for youre owne offeces are ye solde: 'a because of youre transgression, is youre mother forsake. For why wolde no mā receaue me, when I came? a when I called, no man gaue me answere. Was my hode clene smyte of, that it might not helpe? or, had I not power to delyuer? 'lo, at a worde I drike vp the see, g of water floudes I make drie lode: so y for want of water, the fish corruppe and die of thurst. "As for heauen, I clooth it with darcknesse, and put a sack vpon it.

The LORDE God hath geuë me a wel E lerned tuge, so that I can conforte them which are troubled, yee a y in due season. He waked myne eare vp by tymes in y mornynge (as y scolemasters do) y I might herke. The LORDE God hath opened myne eare, therfore cal not save nave, f ner with drawe my self, but I offre my backe vnto v smyters, and my chekes to the nyppers. I turne not my face fro shame ad spittinge, for the LORDE God helpeth me, therfore shal I not be cofounded. I haue hardened my face like a flynt stone, for I am sure, that I shal not come to confucion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wil then go with me to lawe? Let vs stöde one agaynst another: yf there be eny that wil reason with me, let him come here forth to me. Beholde, the LORDE God stondeth by me, "what is he that can condempne me? lo, they shalbe all like as an olde cloth, 'which y mothes shal eate

C Therfore who so feareth the LORDE amoge you, let him heare the voyce of his seruant. Who so walketh in darcknesse, g no light shyneth vpo him, let him hope in the LORDE, and holde him by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gyrded youre selues with the flame: Ye walke in the glistrige of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. Yee § treuth is lade in preson, and he that refrayneth himself fro euel, must be spoyled.

C ' When the LORDE sawe this, it displeased him sore, ý there was no where eny equite. He sawe also, that there was no man, which had pitie therof, or was greued at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and cleued to his owne rightuousnes. 'He put rightuousnes vpö him for a brest plate, g set the helmet of health vpo his heade. He put on wrath in steade of clothige, g toke gelousy aboute him for a cloke: (like as when a man goeth forth wrothfully to recopence his enemies, to be avenged of his aduersaries.) Namely, that he might recompence and rewarde the Ilodes, wherthorow the name of the LORDE might be feared, from the risynge of the Sone: and his magesty, vnto the goinge downe of the same.

For he shal come as a violent waterstreame, which the wynde of the LORDE hath moued. <sup>a</sup> But vnto Sion there shal come a redemer, and vnto them in Iacob that turne from wickednesse, saieth the LORDE. I will make this comenaunt with them (sayeth  $\S$  LORDE): My sprete that is come vpon the,  $\mathfrak{g}$  the wordes which I haue put in thy mouth, shal neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of \$ mouth of thy childre, no ner out of \$ mouth of thy childers childre, from this tyme forth for euer more.

THAT is he this, that cometh from Я Edom, with stayned reade clothes of Bosra: (which is so costly cloth)  $\tau$  cometh in so neēbly with all his strēgth? I am he 🕏 teacheth rightuousnes, g am of power to helpe. Wherfore the is thy clothinge reade, a thy raymēt like his ý treadeth in ý wyne presse? I haue trodde the presse my self alone, a of all people, there was not one with me. Thus haue I trodē downe myne enemies in my wrath,<sup>4</sup> and set my fete vpo them in my indignacion : And their bloude sprange vpo my cloothes, a so haue I stayned all my rayment. For the daye of vengeauce that I have take in honde, a the years of my delyueraunce is come. I loked aboute me, and there was no mū to shewe me eny helpe. I fel downe, and no man helde me vp. The I helde me by myne owne arme, g my feruētnesse susteyned me. And thus have I troden downe the people in my wrath, and bathed them in my displeasure: In so moch that I haue shed their bloude vpon the earth.

them of his owne fauoure, a acordinge to the multitude of his louynge kindnesses. For he sayde: These no doute wilbe my people, and no shrëkinge children, and so he was their Sauioure. "In their troubles he forsoke the not, but the angel that went forth from his presence, delyuered them: Of very loue  $\alpha$ kindnesse that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath borne them, and caried them vp euer, sence the worlde begane. But after they prouoked him to wrath and vexed his holy minde, he was their enemie, and fought agaynst them him self. Yet remebred he the olde tyme, of Moses a his people: 'How he brought them from the water of the see, as a shepherde doth with his shepe: how he had geuen his holy sprete amonge them: how he had led Moses by the right honde with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (wherby he gat him self an euerlastinge name) how he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, that they shulde not stomble. Thus (o God) hast thou led thy people, to  $\mathbb{C}$ make thy self a glorious name with all. Loke downe then from heaue, and beholde the dwellinge place of thy sanctuary a thy glory. How is it, y thy gelousy, thy strength, the multitude of thy mercies and thy louynge kyndnesse, wyl not be entreated of vs? \*Yet art thou oure father: For Abraham knoweth vs not, nether is Israel acquanted with vs. But thou LORDE art oure father and redemer, and thy name is euer lastinge." O LORDE wherfore hast thou led vs out of thy waye? wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not? Be at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake y are of the generacio of thy heretage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possessiō, for oure enemies haue takē it in : And we are become, euen as we were from the beginnynge: but thou art not their LORDE, for they have not called vpon thy name.

For thus sayeth the LORDE: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self? Am not I he that beareth, * and maketh baren? saieth thy God. Reioyse with Ierusalem, g be glad with her, all ye that loue her. Be ioyful with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shal sucke coforte out of hir brestes, and be satisfied. Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abhominacios, shal be taken awaye together, saieth the LORDE. For I wil come to gather all people and tonges, with their workes and ymaginacions: these shal come, and se my glory. Vnto them shal I geue a tokē, and sende certayne of thē (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Celicia, Africa and Lidia (where men can handle bowes) in to Italie also and Greke londe.

"The Iles farre of, that haue not herde speake of me,  $\mathfrak{q}$  haue not sene my glory: shal preach my prayse amonge the Gentiles, and shal bringe all youre brethre for an offringe vnto the LORDE, out of al people, vpō horses, charettes and horse lytters, vpō Mooles and cartes to Ierusalem my holy hill (saieth the LORDE) like as the children of Israel bringe the offringe in cleane vessels, to the house of the LORDE.

<sup>6</sup>And I shal take out certayne of them for to be preastes and leuites, saieth  $\S$  LORDE. For like as the new heauē and the new earth which I wil make, shalbe fast stablished by me: (saieth the LORDE) So shal youre sede and youre name contynue, and there shalbe a new Moone for the other, and a new Sabbath for the other,  $\mathfrak{g}$  all flesh shal come to worshipe before me, (saieth  $\S$  LORDE.) And they shal go forth, and loke vpō the caryons of them, that haue transgressed agaynst me. where is § LORDE? "They § haue the lawe in their hondes, knowe me not: The shepherdes offende agaynst me. The prophetes do seruyce vnto Baal,  $\mathfrak{g}$  folowe soch thinges as shall bringe them no profit.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the LORDE) to make my complaynte vpon you, and vpon youre children. Go in to the Iles of Cethim, and loke wel: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: and se, whether soch thinges be done there, whether the Gentiles themselues deale so falsly  $\mathfrak{g}$  vntruly with their goddes (which yet are no goddes in dede.<sup>6</sup>) But my people hath geuen ouer their hie honoure, for a thinge that maye not helpe them.

Be astonished (o ye heauens) be afrayde, g abashed at soch a thinge, saieth the LORDE. For my people hath done two euels. 'They haue forsakē me the well of the water of life, and digged them pittes, yee vile and broken pittes, that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde?" Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and crie then vpon him, as a lyon? They haue made his londe wayst, 'his cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellinge in them. Yee the children of Noph and Taphanes haue defyled thy necke.

Cometh not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God,<sup>f</sup> euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in  $\hat{y}$  strete of Egipte? to drinke foule water? Ether, what makest thou in the waye to Assiria? To drinke water of the floude? <sup>d</sup> Thine owne wickednesse shal reproue the, and thy turnynge awaye shal condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnderstonde, how euel and hurtful a thinge it is,  $\hat{y}$  thou hast forsaken the LORDE thy God, and not feared him, saieth the LORDE God of hoostes.

The prophet Jeremy.

eth within me, I can not be still, for I haue herde the crienge of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crie murthur vpon murthur, the whole londe shal perish. Immediathly my tentes were destroyed, and my hanginges, in the twincklinge of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Neuertheles this shall come vpon them, Ð because my people is become foolish, " and hath vterly no vnderstondinge. They are the children of foolishnes, 'and without eny discreció. To do euell, they have witt ynough: but to do well, they have no wiszdome. I haue loked vpon the earth, and se, it is wayst and voyde. I loked towarde heauen, and it had no shyne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hilles were in a feare. 1 loked aboute me, and there was no body, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waist: yee all their cities were broken downe at the presence of the LORDE, and indignacion of his wrath.

狐 For thus hath the LORDE sayde: The whole londe shalbe desolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore let the earth mourne, and let the heauen be sory aboue : for the thinge that I have purposed and taken vpon me to do, shal not repente me, and I will not go from it. The whole londe shal fle, for the noyse of the horsmen and bowmen: they shall runne in to dennes in to woddes, and clymme vp the stony rockes. All the cities shalbe voyde, and no man dwellinge therin.

What wilt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? 'For though thou clothest thy self with scarlet, a deckest y with gold: though thou payntest thy face with colours, " yet shalt thou trymme thy self in vayne.

For those that hither to haue bene thy greate fauourers, shal abhorre the, and go aboute to slave §. For (me thinke) I heare a noyse, like as it were of a woman trauelinge, or one laboringe of hir first childe : Euen the voyce of the doughter Sion, that casteth out hir armes, and swowneth, sayenge: Ah wo is me, how sore voxed and faynte is my herte, for them that are slayne?

The b. Chapter.

OKE thorow Ierusalem, beholde and se: A Seke thorow hir stretes also within, yf ye can fynde one man, that doth equall and right, or that laboureth to be faithfull: and I shall spare him (saieth the LORDE). 'For though they can saye: the LORDE lyueth. yet do they sweare to disceaue : Where as thou (o LORDE) lokest only vpon faith and treuth.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast correcte them for amendemet, but they refused thy correction. They made their faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thought in my self: peraduenture they are so symple and folish, that they vnderstonde nothinge of the LORDES wave, 'and iudgmentes of oure God. Therfore will I go vnto their heades and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the LORDE, and the iudgmetes of oure God. But these (in like maner) haue broken the yock, and bursten the bondes in sonder.

Wherfore a lyon out of the wod shal hurte 33 them, "and a wolfe in the euenynge shal destroye them. The cat of the mountayne shal lie lurkinge by their cities, to teare in peces all them, that come therout. For their offences are many, and their departinge awaye is greate.

"Shulde I then for all this have mercy vpon the? Thy children haue forsaken me, and sworne by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrie, and haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vnclenly lust they are become like the stoned horse, euery man neyeth at his neghbours wife. 'Shulde I not correcke this, saieth the LORDE?

* Shulde I not be avenged of euery people, that is like vnto this? Clymme vp vpon their walles, beate them downe, but destroye them not vtterly: cut of their braunches, because they are not the LORDES.

For vnfaithfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, saieth the LORDE. 'They haue denied the LORDE, and sayde: it is not he.

Tush, there shall no miszfortune come vpon vs, we shall se nether swearde ner honger.

vnto whom shal I speake? whom shal I warne, that he maye take hede? "Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, 'they take the worde of God but for a scorne, and haue no lust therto. And therfore I am so full of thy indignacion (o LORDE) that I may suffre no longer. Shed out thy wrath vpon the children that are without, and vpon all yonge men. Yee the man must be taken presoner with the wife, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their loudes and wives shal be turned vnto straungers, whē I stretch out myne hode vpon the inhabitours of this londe, saieth the LORDE. 'For from the leest vnto the most, they hange all vpon covetousnes: and from the prophet vnto the prest, they go all aboute with falsede and lyes.

"And besyde that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayenge: peace, peace, when there is no peace at all." Therfore they must be ashanned, for they haue comitted abhominacion. But how shulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothinge, nether of shame ner good nurture? "And therfore they shal fall amonge the slayne, and in the houre when I shall viset them, they shal be brought downe, saieth the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE: go in to the stretes, considre and make inquisicion for the olde waye: and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. (But they saye: we will not walke therin) and I will set watchmen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the trompet. But they saye: we will not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentiles, and thou congregacion shalt knowe, what I haue deuysed for them. Heare thou earth also: beholde, I will cause a plage come vpon this people, euen the frute of their owne ymaginacions.

For they have not bene obedient vnto my wordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them. *Wherfore bringe ye me incense from Saba, a swete smellinge Calamus from farre countrees? Youre burnt offeringes displease me, and I reloyse not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus saieth the LORDE : beholde, I will make this people fall, and there shal fall from amonge them the father with because of the hurte of my people: I am heuy and abashed, for there is no more Triacle at Galaad, and there is no Phisician, that cā heale the hurte of my people.

The ir. Chapter.

WHO will geue my heade water ynough, a well of teares for myne eyes: that I maye wepe night ād daye, for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I had a cotage some where farre from folke, that I might leaue my people, and go from the: for they be all aduoutrers and a shrenckinge They bede their tuges like bowes, to sorte. shute out lies: As for the treuth, they maye nothinge awaye with all in the worlde. For they go from one wickednes to another, and holde nothinge of me, saieth the LORDE.

Yee one must kepe himself from another, <sup>a</sup> no man maye safely trust his owne brother : for one brother vndermyneth another, g one neghboure begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth with another, and they deale with no treuth. ' They have practised their tunges to lye, and taken greate paynes to do myschefe. They have set their stole in the myddest of disceate, and (for very dissemblinge falsede) they wil not knowe me, saieth the LORDE.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes, beholde, I wil melte them and trie the, for what shulde I els do to my people? Their tunges are like sharpe arowes, 'to speake disceate. With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neghboure, but preuely they lave waite for him. Shulde I not punysh them for these thinges, saieth the LORDE? d'Or, shulde I not be auenged of eny soch people, 33 as this? Vpon the mountaynes will I take vp a lamentacion and soroufull crie, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernes: Namely, how they are so brente vp, that no man goeth there eny more: Yee a man shal not heare one beast crie there.

<sup>e</sup> Byrdes and catell are all gone from thece. I will make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wil make the cities of Iuda so waist, that no man shal dwell therin. What man is so wise, as to vnderstonde this? Or to whom hath the LORDE spoken by mouth, that he maye shewe this, and saye: 'O thou londe, why perishest thou so? Wherfore art thou so brent vp, and like a wildernesse, that no mā goeth thorow? Yee the LORDE himself tolde the same vnto them, that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaundement, nether lyued therafter: <sup>s</sup> but folowed the wickednes of their owne hertes, and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I will fede this people with wormwod, and geue the gall to drynke. <sup>h</sup> I will scatre them also amonge the Heithen, whom nether they ner their fathers haue knowne: and I will sende a swearde amonge them, 'to persecute them, vntill I bringe them to naught. Morouer, thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: loke that ye  $\mathbb{C}$ call for mournynge wyues, and sende for wise women: that they come shortly, and singe a mournynge songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that oure eye lyddes maye guszhe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse herde of Sion: O how are we so sore destroyed? O how are we so piteously confounded? We must forsake oure owne naturall countre, and we are shot out of oure owne lodgiges. Yet heare the worde of the LORDE (o ye women) and let youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: that ye maye lerne youre doughters to mourne, and that euery one maye teach hir neghbouresse, to make lamentacion. Namely thus: Deeth is clymme vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the childe before the dore, a y yonge man in the strete.

But tell thou planely, thus saieth & LORDE: The deed bodies of men shal lye vpon 🕏 grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, * and as the hay after the mower, and there shal be no man to take them vp. Morouer, thus saieth B the LORDE: Let not the wise man reioyse in his wisdome, ner the stronge man in his strength, 'nether the rich man in his riches: But who so wil reioyse, let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstödeth, and knoweth me: for I am the LORDE, which do mercie, equite and rightuousnes vpon earth. "Therfore haue I

The rij. Chapter.

LORDE, thou art more rightuous, then A that I shulde dispute with the : Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thinges reasonable. " How happeneth it, that the waye off the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so wel with them, which (with out enyshame) offede and lyue in wickednesse? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, and bringe forth frute. They boost moch off the, yet doest thou not punysh them. But thou LORDE (to whom I am well knowne) thou that hast sene,  $\alpha$  proued my herte, take them awaye, like as a flock is caried to the slaughter house," and apoynte them for the daye off slaughtinge.

How longe shall the londe mourne, and all the herbes off the felde perish, for the wickednes off them that dwell therin?

The catell and the byrdes are gone, yet saye they: tush, God will not destroye vs vtterly.

Seinge thou art weery in runnynge with the fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure londe thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious pryde of Iordane? For thy brethren ad thy kynred haue altogether despised the, and cried out vpon the in thine absence. <sup>d</sup> Beleue them not, though they speake fayre wordes to the. As for me (saye I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and left myne heretage. My life also that I loue so wel, haue I geuen in to the hodes of myne enemies. Myne heretage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wod. It oried out vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. ' Myne heretage is vuto me, as a spreckled byrde, a byrde of dynerse coloures is vpon it. Go hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they may eate it vp.

'Dynerse hyrdmē haue broken downe my vynyarde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunt porcion, they haue made a wildernes  $\tau$  deserte. They haue layed it waist : and now that it is waist, it sigheth vnto me. Yee the whole londe lieth waist, and no man regardeth it. The distroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for <sup>5</sup> the swearde off the LORDE shal consume from the one ende of  $\mathring{y}$ lode to the other, and no flesh shal haue rest. They shal sowe wheat, and reepe thornes. They shal take heretage in possession, but it shal do them no good. And ye shalbe confounded of youre owne wynnynges, because of the greate wrath of the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE vpon all myne C euel neghbours, that laye honde on myne heretage, which I have geven my people of Israel: Beholde, I wil plucke them (namely Israel) out of their londe, and put out the house of Iuda from amonge them. "And whe I haue rooted the out, I wilbe at one with the agayne, and wil haue mercy vpon them : and brynge them agayne, euery man to his owne heretage, and in to his lode. And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wil lerne ŷ wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The LORDE lyueth (like as they lerned my people to sweare by Baal) the shal they be rekened amoge my people. But yf they wil not obeye, the will I rote out the same folke, and destroye them, saieth the LORDE.

The ruj. Chapter.

OROUER, thus saied the LORDE vnto me: go thy waye g get the a lynnen breche, and gyrde it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then I got me a brech, acordinge to the commaundemet of the LORDE, and put it aboute my loynes. After this, the LORDE spake vnto me agayne: Take the breche that thou hast prepared g put aboute the, and get the vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole off the rock. So wêt I, and hydde it, as the LORDE commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the LORDE spake vnto me: Vp, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the breche from thence, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged vp, and toke the brech from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the brech was corrupte, so that it was profitable for nothinge.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: Thus saieth the LORDE: Euen so will I corruppe the pryde off Iuda, and the hie mynde off the north londe, and from all countrees where I had scatted them, and they shal dwell in their owne londe agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become like a droncken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the LORDE, and of his holy wordes: Because the londe is full of aduoterers, where thorow it is destroyed and mourneth, " and $ pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dryed vp. Yee the waye that men take, is wicked, a their gouernaunce is nothinge like the holy worde of the LORDE. For the prophetes and the prestes them selues are poluted Ypocrytes, ad their wickednes haue I founde in my house, saieth the LORDE. Wherfore, their waye shall be slippery in the darcknesse, wherein they may estacker and fall. For I will bringe a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of their visitacion, saieth the LORDE. I haue sene foly amonge the prophetes of Samaria, y they preched for Baal, ad disceaued my people off Israel. I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes off Ierusalem foule aduoutery, and presumptuous lies. They take the most shamefull men by the hode, flatringe them, so that they can ot returne from their wickednes. All these with their citesyns are vnto me, as Sodom, and as the inhabitours off Gomorre.

C Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes concernynge the prophetes: 'Beholde, I wil fede them with wormwod, g make them dryncke the water of gall. For frō the prophetes of Ierusalem is the sicknes of Ypocrisie come in to all the londe.

And therfore the LORDE of hoostes geueth you this warnynge: 'Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and disceaue you: for they speake the meanynge of their owne herte, and not out of the mouth of the LORDE. "They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The LORDE hath spoken it: Tush, ye shal prospere right well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tush, there shall no myszfortune happen you. For who hath sytten in the councell of the LORDE, that he hath herde and vnderstonde, what he is aboute to

And the wrath of the LORDE shal not turne agayne, vntill he perfourme, and fulfyll the thoughte of his herte. 'And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanynge.

I have not sent these prophetes, (saieth the B LORDE) and yet they ranne. I have not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But vf they had continued in my councell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euell wayes and wicked ymaginacions. "Am I the God that seeth but the thinge, which is nye at honde, and not that is farre of? saieth the LORDE. Maye env man hyde him self so, that I shal not se him? 'Do not I fulfill heauen saieth the LORDE. and earth? saieth the LORDE. I haue herde well ynough, what the prophetes save, that preach lyes in my name, sayege: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wil this cotynue in the prophetes hertes, to tel lyes, and to preach the craftie sotylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is, (with the E dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as their fore fathers dyd, whe Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstondeth my worde,* let him shewe it faithfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? saieth the LORDE. Is not my worde like a fyre, (saieth the LORDE) and like an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus saieth the LORDE: beholde, I wil vpö the prophetes, that steale my worde priuely from every man. Beholde, here am I (saieth the LORDE) agaynst the prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The LORDE hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (saieth y LORDE) agaynst those prophetes, that darre prophecy lies, and disceaue my people with their vanities and miracles, whom I neuer sent, ner commaunded them. They shal do this people greate harme, saieth the LORDE.

Then shal the shepherdes crie horribly, and the rammes of the flocke shal mourne: for the LORDE shal consume their pasture, and their best feldes shal lie deed because of the horrible wrath of the LORDE. They shall forsake their foldes like as a lyon: For their londes shalbe waist, because of the wrath of the destroyer, and because of his fearfull indignacion.

The 17bi. Chapter.

A IN the begynnynge of the reigne of Ioachim the sonne of Iosias kynge of Iuda, came this worde from the LORDE, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE: <sup>b</sup>Stonde in the courte of the LORDES house, and speake vnto all them which (out of the cities of Iuda) come to do worshippe in the LORDES house, all the wordes y I commaunde the to saye. Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf (perauenture) <sup>c</sup> they will herkē, and turne euery man from his wicked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, which I haue determed to brynge vpon them, because of their wicked invencions.

And after this maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE: yf ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes, whom I sent vnto you, rysynge vp tymely, and still sendinge: Yf ye will not folowe the (I saye) then will I do to this house, as I dyd vnto Silo, and will make this cite to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. "And the prestes, the prophetes and all the people herde Ieremy preach these wordes, in the house of the LORDE.

18 Now when he had spoken out all the wordes, that the LORDE commaunded him to preach

And when all the people were gathered aboute Ieremy in the house of the LORDE, the prynces of Iuda herde of this rumoure, a they came soone out of the kinges Palace in to the house of the LORDE, and sat them downe before the new dore of the LORDE. 'Then spake the prestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers a to all the people, these wordes: 'This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cite, as ye youre selues haue herde with youre eares.

Then sayde Ieremy vnto the rulers and to  $\mathbf{C}$ all the people : The LORDE hath sente me to preach agaynst this house g agaynst this cite all the wordes that ye haue herde. <sup>g</sup> Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre advysementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE youre God: so shal the LORDE repēt of the plage, y he had deuysed agaynst you. Now as for me : I am in youre hondes, do with me, as ye thinke expediet and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, ye shal make youre selues, this cite a all the inhabitours there of, 'giltie of innocent bloude. For this is of a treuth: that the LORDE hath sente me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vnto the prestes and prophetes: This man maye not be condemned to death, for he hath preached vnto vs in the name of the LORDE oure God. The Elders also of the londe stode vp, a sayde thus vnto all the people: 'Micheas the Morascite, which was a prophet vnder Ezechias kinge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: * Sion shalbe plowed like a felde, Ierusalē shalbe an heape of stones, g the hill of the LORDES house shalbe turned to an hie wod. Dyd Ezechias y kinge of Iuda g the people of Iuda put him to deeth for this? No verely, but rather feared y LORDE, a made their praier vnto him. For the which cause also & LORDE repented of the plage,

There was a prophet also, thatpreached stiffly in the name of the LORDE,called Vrias the sonne of Semeia of Cariathi-arim : this mā preached also agaynst this citeg agaynst this löde, acordinge to all as Ieremysaieth. Then Ioachim the kinge sent seruauntes in to the lode of Egipte, Namely: Elnathā the sonne of Achbor,  $\mathfrak{q}$  certayne men with him in to Egipte, which fetched Vrias out of Egipte,  $\mathfrak{q}$  brought him vnto kinge Ioachim that slewe him with the swearde,  $\mathfrak{q}$  cast his deed body in to  $\mathfrak{F}$  como peoples graue. But Ahicam the sonne of Saphan helped Ieremy, that he came not in to the hondes of the people to be slavne.

The rybij. Chapter.

TN the begynnynge of the reigne of Ioachim A the sonne of Iosias kynge of Iuda, came this worde vnto Ieremy from the LORDE, which spake thus vnto me : Make the bondes g chaynes, and put them aboute thy neck, g sende the to the kinge of Edom, the kinge of Moab, the kinge of Amon, the kinge of Tirus, a to the kinge of Sidon: a that by the messaungers, which shal come to Ierusalem vnto Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, and byd them saye vnto their masters: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto youre masters: 'I am he that made the earth, the men g v catell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power g outstretched arme, a haue geuen it vnto whom it pleased me. And all people shal serue him, t his some, and his childes children, vntil the tyme of the same lode be come also: Yee many people a greate kinges shal serue him.

Babilon: the same people will I viset with swearde, with honger, with pestilence, vntill I haue consumed them in his hondes, saieth the LORDE. And therfore, folowe not youre prophetes, soythsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers g witches, which saye vnto you: ye shal not serue the kinge of Babilon. For they preach you lies, to bringe you farre from youre londe, g that I might cast you out, g destroye you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yock of the kinge of Babilon, g serue him, those I wil let remayne still in their owne lode (saieth the LORDE) g they shal occupie it, g dwell there in.

All these thinges tolde I Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, and sayde: Put youre neckes vnder the yock of the kinge of Babilon, and serue him g his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wilt thou and thy people perish with the swearde, with honger, with pestilence: like as the LORDE hath deuysed for all people, that wil not serue the kinge of Babilon? Therfore geue no eare vnto those prophetes (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kinge of Babilon) for they preach you lies, <sup>6</sup> nether haue I sent them, saieth the LORDE: how be it they are bolde, falsely for to prophecie in my name: that I might § sooner dryue you out, g that ye might perish with youre preachers.

I spake to the prestes also and to all the  ${\mathbb C}$ people: Thus saieth the LORDE: "Heare not the wordes of those prophetes, that preach vnto you, a saye: Beholde, the vessels of the LORDES house shall shortly be brought hither agayne from Babilon: For they prophecie lies vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kinge of Babilon, y ye maye lyue. Wherfore will ye make this cite to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the LORDE be commytted vnto them, then let them praye the LORDE of hoostes, that the remnaunt of the ornamentes (which are in the house of the LORDE, and remayne yet in the house of the kinge of Iuda and at Ierusalem) be not caried to Babilon also. For thus hath the LORDE of hoostes spoken concernynge the pylers, the lauer, the scate and the residue of the ornamentos that yet remayne in this citie, which Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon toke not, when he caried awaye Iechonias

Then wil I bringe them hither agayne. <sup>c</sup>And this was done in the same yeare: euë in the begynnynge of the reigne of Sedechias kinge of Iuda.

The rrbiij. Chapter.

- BUT in the fourth yeare of the reigne of Sedechias kinge of Iuda, in the fifth A Moneth, It happened, that Hananias y sonne of Assur the prophet of Gabaon, spake to me in the house of the LORDE, in the presence of the prestes g of all the people, g sayde: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: I have broke the yock of the kinge of Babilon, and after two years will 'I bringe agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, y Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon caried awaye from this place vnto Babilon. Yee I will bringe agayne Iechonias the sonne of Ioachim the kinge of luda himself, with all the presoners of Iuda, (v are caried vnto Babilon,) eue in to this place, saieth y LORDE, for I wil breake y yock of the kinge of Babilo.
- B Then the prophet Ieremy gaue answere vnto that prophet Hananias, before the prestes g before all the people that were present in the house of the LORDE. And the prophet leremy sayde : 'Amen, the LORDE do that, graunte the thinge, which thou hast prophecied: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornamentes of the LORDES house, g restore all the presoners from Babilon in to this place. Neuertheles, herken thou also, what I will saye, that thou g all the people maye heare : The prophetes that were before vs in tymes past, which prophecied of warre, or trouble, or pestilence, ether of peace, vpon many nacions a greate kingdomes, were proued by this (yf God had sende them in very dede) when the thinge came to passe, which that prophet tolde before.

'And Hananias the prophet toke the chayne from the prophet Ieremias neck, g brake it: g with that sayde Hananias, that all the people might heare: Thus hath the LORDE spoken: Euen so will I breake the yock of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilö, from the neck of all nacions, yee a that within this two yeare. And so the prophet Ieremy wente his waye. After now that Hananias the prophet had taken the chayne from the prophet Ieremies neck, and broken it: The worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet Ieremy sayenge : Go, and tell Hananias these wordes: Thus saieth the LORDE: Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd, but in steade of wodd, thou shalt make chaynes of yron. For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: I wil put a yock of yron vpon the neck of all this people, that they may eserue Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon, yee a so shal they do. And I wil geue him y beestes in the felde. "Then sayde the prophet Ieremy vnto y prophet Hananias: Heare me (I prave the) Hananias: The LORDE hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people in to a false beleue. And therfore thus saieth y LORDE: beholde, I wil sende the out of the löde, a within a yeare thou shalt die, because thou hast falsely spoke agaynst the LORDE. So Hananias the prophet died the same yeare in the seuenth Moneth.

The rrri. Chapter.

A THUS saieth the LORDE: The people of Israel which escaped in § wildernes from the swearde, <sup>4</sup>founde grace to come in to their rest. Euen so shal the LORDE now also apeare vnto me from farre, and saye: I loue the with an euerlastinge loue, therfore do I sprede my mercy before the. <sup>6</sup>I will repayre the agayne (o thou doughter of Israel) that thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, c go forth with them, that lede the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  hilles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and synge.

And when it is tyme, the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephrain shall crie: "Arise, let vs go vp vnto Sion to oure LORDE God, for thus saieth the LORDE: Reioyce with gladnes because of Iacob, crie vnto the heade of the Gentiles: speake out, synge, and saye: The LORDE shall delyuer his people, the 33 remnaunt of Israel, a make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lode, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with childe, and soch as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shal be greate.

They departed from hence in heuynes, but with ioye will I bringe them hither agayne. I will lede them by the ryuers of water in a strught waye, where they shall not stomble: For I will be Israels father, and Epraim shalbe my firstborne.

Heare the worde of the LORDE (o ye Gentiles) preach in the Iles, that lie farre of, and saye: he that hath scatred Israel, shall gather him together agayne, and shall kepe him as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the LORDE shall redeme Iacob, and ryd him from the honde of the violent. And they shal come, a reioyce vpon the hill of Sion, a shall haue plenteousnes of goodes, which the LORDE shall geue them: Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yonge shepe and calues. And their conscience shalbe as a well watred garden, for they shall nomore be hongrie.

Then shal the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorow in to gladnesse, and will comforte them, and make them ioyfull, euen from their hertes. I will poure plenteousnes vpon the hertes of the prestes, and my people shalbe satisfied with good thinges, saieth the LORDE.

Thus saieth the LORDE: 'The voyce of heuynes, wepynge and lamentacion came vp in to heauen: euen of Rachel mournynge for hir children, and wolde not be comforted, because they were awaye.

But now saieth the LORDE: leaue of from wepynge and crienge, witholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy laboure shalbe rewarded, saieth the LORDE. And they shall come agayne out of the londe of their enemies: Yee euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this (saieth the LORDE) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne londe.

Morouer I herde Ephraim, (that was led awaye captyue) complayne on this maner: O LORDE, thou hast correcte me, and thy chastenynge haue I receaued, as an vntamed calfe. *Conuerte thou me, and I shalbe conuerted, for thou art my LORDE God. Yee as soone as thou turnest me, I shall refourme my self: and when I vnderstonde, I shall smyte vpon my thee. For verely I haue comitted shamefull thinges: O let my youth beare this reprofe and confucion.

Vpon this complaynte, I thought thus by my self: 'is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the childe, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I first comoned with him, I haue him euer in remembraunce: therfore my very herte dryueth me vnto him: gladly and louyngly will I haue mercy vpon him, saieth the LORDE. Get the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the: set thine herte vpon the right waie, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne: (o thou doughter of Israel,) turne agayne to these cities of thyne. How longe wilt thou go astraie, o thou shrēkinge doughter?

Chap. rrrij.

For the LORDE will worke a new thynge vpon earth: A woman shall compasse a man. For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: It will come therto, that when I have brought Iuda out of captivyte, these wordes shalbe herde in ŷ londe and in his cities: "The LORDE, which is the fayre brydegrome of rightuousnesse, make the frutefull, o thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Iuda and all hir cities, the shepherdes and huszbonde men : For I shall fede the hongrie soule,<sup>4</sup> and refresh all faynte hertes. When I herde this, I came agayne to my self, and mused, like as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (saieth the LORDE) the dayes come, that I will sowe the house of Israel and the house of Iuda, with men and with catell. Yee it shall come therto, ' that like as I haue gone aboute in tymes past to rote them out, to scatre them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chaste them : Euen so will I also go diligently aboute, to buylde them vp agayne, and to plante them, saieth the LORDE.

<sup>d</sup> Then shall it no more be sayde: § fathers haue eaten a sower grape, and the childrens teth are set on edge: for every one shal dye for his owne myszdede, so that who so eateth a sower grape, his teth shalbe set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (saieth the LORDE) y I will make a new couenaunt with $ house of Israel g with $ house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the honde, a led them out of the londe of Egipte: which couenaunt they brake, wherfore I punyshed f them sore, saieth the LORDE: But this shall be the couenaunt that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, saieth the LORDE: I will plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and write it in their hertes, and wilbe their God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thece forth shall no man teach his neghboure or his brother, and save : knowe the LORDE: But they shall all knowe me, from the lowest vnto the hyest, saieth the LORDE. For I will forgeue their myszdedes, and wil neuer remembre their synnes

'Thus saieth the LORDE which gaue the sonne to be a light for the daye, and the Moone and starres to shyne in the night: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof waxe fearce : his name is the LORDE of hoostes. Like as this ordinaunce shal neuer be taken out of my sight, saieth the LORDE: So shal the sede of Israel neuer ceasse, but all waye be a people before me.

Morouer, thus saieth the LORDE: like as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth maye not be sought out : "So will I also not cast out the whole sede of Israel, for that they have commytted, saieth the LORDE. Beholde, the daies come saieth the LORDE, y the cite of v LORDE shalbe enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto y gate of the corner wall. 'From thence shal the right measure be taken before her vnto the hill toppe of Gareb, and shal come aboute Gaatha, and the whole valley of the deed carcases, and of the ashes, 'a all Seremoth, vnto the broke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsgate towarde y east, where as the Sanctuary of the LORDE also shal be set. And when it is now buylded, a set vp of this fashion it shall neuer be broken, ner cast downe eny more.

THESE wordes spake the LORDE vnto a kinge of Iuda, which was y xviij yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kinge of Babilons hooste layed sege vnto Ierusalem. But Ieremy the prophet laye bounde in § courte of the preson, which was in the kinge of Iudaes house : where Sedechias the kinge of Iuda caused him to be layed, because he had prophecied of this maner: 'Thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will delyuer this cite in to the hondes of the kinge of Babilon, which shal take it. As for Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, he shal not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shall come in to the hondes of the kinge of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouth to mouth, and one of them shall loke another in the face. And Sedechias shalbe caried vnto Babilon,

And Ieremy sayde: Thus hath the LORDE spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the sonne of Sellum thine Vncles sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme y londe, that lieth in Anathot vnto thy self: "for by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And so Hananeel myne Vncles sonne came to me in the courte of the preson, (acordinge to the worde of the LORDE,) and sayde vnto me: Bye my londe (I praye the) that lieth in Anothot in the countre of Ben Iamyn: for by heretage thou hast right to lowse it out for thy self, therfore redeme it. Then I preceaued, that this was the commaundement of the LORDE, and so I lowsed the londe from Hananeel of Anathot, myne Vncles sonne, and weyed him there the moneye: euen seuen sycles, and ten syluer pens.

l caused him also to make me a writinge, and to seale it, and called recorde there by, and weyed him there the moncy vpon the waightes. So I toke the euydence with the copie (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia in the sight of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euydence, and before all the Iewes that were therby in the courte of the preson.

I charged Baruch also before them, saienge: The LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this sealed euydence with the copie, and to laye it in an erthen vessell, that it maye longe continue.

For the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel hath determed, that houses, feldes and vynyardes shall possessed agayne in this londe.

C Now when I had delyuered the euydence vnto Baruch ŷ sonne of Nerias, I besought the LORDE, sayenge: 'O LORDE God, It is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hie arme, and there is nothinge to harde for ŷ. Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, 'thou recompēcest the wickednes of the fathers, in to the bosome of the children that come after them.

Thou art the greate and mightie God, whose name is the LORDE of hoostes : greate in councell, and infinite in thought: Thine eves loke vpon all the wayes of mens children, to rewarde euery one after his waye, and acordinge to the frutes of his inuencions: Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the londe of Egipte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye: "Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the londe of Egipte, with tokens, with wondres, with a mightie honde, with a stretched out arme and with greate terriblenes: and hast geuen them this londe, like as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers : Namely, that thou woldest geue them a lode, that floweth with mylke and honye.

'Now when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe : but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plages vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulworckes made now agaynst the cite, to take it: and it shalbe wonne of the Caldees that besege it, with swearde, with honger and death, and loke what thou hast spoken, that same shal come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the: Yet sayest thou vnto me (o LORDE God) and commaundest me, that I shall loose a pece of londe vnto my self, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cite is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Beholde, I am the LORDE God of all flesh, Is there eny thinge then to harde for me? Therfore thus sayde the LORDE: beholde, I shal delyuer this cite in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor' the kinge of Babilon, they shall take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured drynke offeringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

But now y Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilo came vp in to the lode, we sayde : come, let vs go to Ierusalë, y we maye escape the hooste of the Caldees ad the Assirias : g so we dwell now at Ierusalē. Then came v worde of the LORDE vnto Ieremy, sayenge: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: Go a tell whole Iuda a all the inhabitours of Ierusalē: Wyll ye not be refourmed, to obeye my wordes? saieth the LORDE. The wordes which Ionadab the sonne off Rechab comaunded his sonnes, y they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast a surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke no wyne: but obeye their fathers comaundement. C But as for me," I haue stode vp early, I haue spokē vnto you, g geuen you earnest warnynge : g yet haue ye not bene obediet vnto me. Yee I haue sent my seruaütes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, a sent you worde, sayenge: O turne you, euery man from his wicked waye : amêde youre lyues, a go not after strauge goddes, to worshippe the: y ye maye cotinue in the lode, which I have geven vnto you and youre fathers, but ye wolde nether heare me, ner folowe me.

Ieremy also spake vuto the housholde off the Rechabites: Thus saidth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: For so moch as ye haue obeyed $ comaundemet of Ionadab youre father, a kepte all his preceptes, g done acordinge vnto all v he hath bydden you : Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: 'Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shal not fayle, but have one out of his stocke, to stöde allwaye before me.

The prrbi. Chapter.

▼N the fourth yeare of Ioachim the sonne A of Iosias kynge of Iuda, came y worde of the LORDE vnto Ieremy, sayce : Take a boke, a "write therin all y wordes, y I haue spoke to the, to Israel, to Iuda t to all the people, fro the tyme y I begane for to speake vnto the (in y reigne of Iosias) vnto this That when the house of Iuda heareth daye. of the plage, which I haue deuysed for the, they maye peraduēture turne, 'euery man fro his wicked waye, that I maye forgeue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Ieremy call Baruch the sonne of Nerias, a Baruch wrote in the boke at y mouth of Ieremy, all the wordes of the LORDE, which he had spoken vnto him. And Ieremy commaunded Baruch sayenge : I am in preson, so that I may not come in to the house of § LORDE: therfore go thou thither, a rede the boke, that thou hast writte at my mouth: Namely, the wordes off the LORDE, g rede the in the LORDES house vpon the fastinge daye : that the people, whole Iuda,  $\mathfrak{q}|_{\mathbf{B}}$ all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye mekely before the face of the LORDE, and turne, euery one from his wicked waye. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that the LORDE hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Nerias dyd, acordinge vnto all that Ieremy the prophet comauded him, readinge the wordes off the LORDE out off the boke in the LORDES house. And this was done in the fyfth yeare off Ioachim y sonne of Iosias kinge of Iuda, in the ix. moneth "when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde fast before the LORDE, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of leremy out of the boke within the house of the LORDE, out of y treasury of \* Gamarias the sonne off Saphan the scrybe, which is besyde the hyer loffte off the new dore of the LORDES house : that all y people might heare. Now whe Micheas the sonne of Gamarias the sonne of Saphan had herde all the wordes of the LORDE out of y boke, he wete downe to the kinges palace in to y scrybes chabre, for there all  $\hat{y}$  prynces were set: Elisama the scrybe, Dalias the sonne of Semei, Elnathā the sonne off Achbor, Gamaria the sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Hananias, with all the princes. And Micheas tolde them all the wordes,  $\hat{y}$  he herde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the prynces sent Iehudi v sonne of Nathanias the sonne of Salamia the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayenge: Take in thine honde the boke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch C the sonne of Nerias toke y boke in his honde, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt downe, and rede the boke, y we maye heare also. So Baruch red, y they might heare. Now when they had herde all the wordes, they were abaszhed one vpon another, and sayde vnto Baruch: We wil certifie the kinge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, sayenge: Tell vs, how didest thou wryte all these wordes out off his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I alone was with him, and wrote them in the boke.

Then sayde the prynces vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the with Ieremy, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the kinge to the courte. But they kepte the boke in the chambre off Elisama the scrybe, ad tolde the kynge all the wordes, that he might heare. So the kynge sent Iehudi to fetch him y boke, which he brought out of Elisama y scrybes chambre. And Iehudi red it, that the kynge and all the prynces, which were aboute him, might heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. Moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And whe Iehudi had red thre or foure leaues therof,<sup>a</sup> he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and cast it in to the fyre vpo the herth, vntil the boke was all brente in the fyre vpon the herth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente his clothes: nether the kynge himselffe, ner his seruauntes, though they herde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Dalias ād Gamarias, besoughte the kinge, that he wolde not burne the boke: notwithstondinge ŷ kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Ieramyhel the sonne off Amalech, Sarias the sonne of Esriel and Selamia  $\mathring{y}$  sonne of Abdiel, to laye hondes vpon Baruch the scrybe, and vpon Ieremy the prophet: but the LORDE kepte them out of sight. After now that the kynge had brente the boke, ad $\mathring{y}$  sermos which Baruch wrote at  $\mathring{y}$  mouth off Ieremy: The worde of the LORDE came vnto Ieremy sayenge: Take another boke, and write in it all the forsayde sermons, that were written in the first boke, which Ioachim the kynge off Iuda hath brente.

And tell loachim the kynge off Iuda, Thus saieth the LORDE: thou hast brente v boke, and thoughtest within thy selff: Why hast thou written therin, that the kynge off Babilon shal come, g make this lode waist? so that he shall make both people and catel to be out of it? 'Therfore thus the LORDE saieth, of Ioachim the kynge of Iuda: There shal none of his generacion syt vpon the trone of Dauid. His deed corse shalbe cast out, that the heat off the daye, and the frost of the night maye come vpon him: And I will vyset the wickednes of him, of his sede, and of his seruauntes. Morouer all the eucli that I have promised thē (though they herde me not) will I bringe vpon them, vpon y inhabitours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Ieremy another boke, and gaue it Baruch the scrybe the sonne of Nerias, which wrote therin out of the mouth off Ieremy: all the sermons that were in the first boke, which Ioachim the kynge off Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many mo sermons, then before.

So Iohanna the sonne of Carea, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the LORDE: Namely, to dwell in the londe off Iuda: But Iohanna the sonne of Carea c all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye all the remnaunt in Iuda, that were come together agayne from the Heithen (amoge whom they had bene scatred)" to dwell in the londe of Iuda: Men, women, childre, the kynges doughters: all those that Nabusaradan the chefe captayne had left with Godolias the sonne of Ahicam. They caried awaye also the prophet Ieremy, Baruch the sonne of Nerias, and so came in to Egipte: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde off the LORDE B happened vnto Ieremy, sayenge: Take greate stones in thine hode, and hyde them in the brick wall, vnder the dore off Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda maye se, and saye vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: 'Beholde, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kyuge of Babilon my seruaunt, and will set his seate vpon these stones that I have hyd, and he shall sprede his tente ouer them.

haue sene all 🕏 mysery, y I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon all the cities of Iuda: so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellinge therin: g y because of the greate blasphemies, which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to do sacrifice ad worshipe vnto straunge goddes: whom nether they, ner ye, ner youre fathers haue knowne. How be it, I sent vnto them my seruautes all the prophetes: 'I rose vp early, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warninge: O do no soch abhominable thinges, a thinges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ner herke, to turne from their wickednes, and to do no more sacrifice vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore my indignacion g wrath was kyndled, and it brente vp the cities of Iuda, the feldes with the stretes off Ierusalem : so that they were made waist and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Now therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God of Israel: How happeneth it, that ye do so greate euell vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, childre and babes of Iuda? so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of youre owne hondes: whe ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the londe off Egipte, where as ye be gone to dwell: That ye might B vtterly perishe, and that ye might be reuyled and shamfully intreated of all nacions. Or, haue ye now forgotten the wickednes off youre forefathers, the wickednes off v kynges of Iuda and their wyues, y wickednes that ye youre selues ad youre wyues haue done in the londe of Iuda, in the cite and in the londe off Ierusalem?

Yet are ye not sory this daye, ye feare not, nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuē vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes the God off Israel: "I am stedfastly advysed and determed, to punysh you, and to rote out all Iuda. 'As for the remnaunt off Iuda that purposly wente in to Egipte, there to ease them off their mysery: I will take them, and they shall all be destroyed. In y londe of Egipte shall they perishe, beynge consumed with the swearde and with honger. For from ŷ leest vnto ŷ most, they shal perishe with the swearde and with honger. Morouer they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will viset them that dwell in Egipte, "as I haue visited Ierusalem : with the swearde, with honger and with pestilence: So that none off the remnaunt off Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egipte, shall be left to come agayne in to y londe off Iuda: all though they thynke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none shal come agayne, but soch as are fled awaye.

Then all the men which knewe that their C wyues had offred vnto straunge goddes, g a greate sorte off wyues that stode there, yee and all the people that dwelt there in Egipte in the cite of Patures, answerde Ieremy, g sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the LORDE, we will in no wyse heare them: but what so euer goeth out of oure owne mouth, that wil we do: We will do sacrifice, and offre oblacions vnto the Quene off heauen: 'like as we and oure forefathers, oure kynges and oure heades haue done in the cities off Iuda, and in the stretes and feldes of lerusalem. For then had we plenteousnesse off vytales, then were we in prosperite, and no myszfortune came vpon vs.

But sens we left of, to offre, and to do sacrifice vnto the Quene of heauen, 'we haue had scarcenes of all thinges, and perish with the swearde and honger. Last of all, when we wome did sacrifice and offred vnto the Quene of heaue, did we make her cakes ad poure vnto her drinkofferinges, to do her seruyce, without oure huszbondes wylles?

Then sayde Ieremy vnto all the people, to Ð the men, to the women and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answere: Dyd not the LORDE remembre the sacrifices that ye, youre forefathers, youre kiges a rulers (with all the people) haue offred in the cities of Iuda, in the stretes and londe off Ierusalem? and hath he not considered this in his mynde? In so much, that the LORDE might no longer suffre the wickednes off youre inuencions, and the abhominable thynges which ye dyd? 'Is not youre londe desolate g voyde, yee and abhorred, so that no mā dwelleth therin eny more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Dyd not all this happen vnto you, because ye made soch sacrifice, and synned agaynst the LORDE? Ye have not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yee this is the cause, that all mysfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye.

Morouer, Ieremy spake vnto all the people and to all the women : Heare the worde off the LORDE all Iuda, ye that be in the londe off Egipte: Thus saieth the LORDE off hoostes the God of Israel: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouth, the thinge that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Yee thus have ye sayde : "We will not fayle, 😰 but do the thynge that pleaseth vs: we wil do sacrifice and poure out drynkoffringes to the Quene of heauen. Purposly haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, g hastely haue ye fulfilled youre owne intente. And therfore, heare the worde of the LORDE all Iuda, ye that dwell in the londe off Egipte.

Beholde, 'I haue sworne by my greate name (saieth the LORDE) that my name shal not be rehearsed thorow eny mans mouth of Iuda, in all the londe of Egipte: to saye: The LORDE God lyueth, for I wil watch, to plage them, and not for their wealth. And all the men of Iuda that be in the lode of Egipte, * shal perish with the swearde and with hoger, vntill they be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled awaye for $ swearde, shal come agayne in to the lode of Iuda (but there shal be very fewe of them) And all the remnaunt off Iuda, that are gone in to Egipte, there to dwell, shall knowe, whose wordes shalbe founde true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wil viset you in this place (saieth the LORDE) and that ye maye knowe, how that I (without doute) wil perfourme my purpose vpon you, to punysh Beholde (saieth the LORDE) I wil you. delyuer Pharao Ophram kynge of Egipte in to the hondes of his enemies, y seke after his life: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Iuda 'in to the hondes of Nabuchodonosor kige of Babilo, which sought after his life.

Fearfulnesse is fallen vpon euerychone off them, saieth the LORDE. The lightest off fote shall not fle awaye, and the worthies shall not escape.

33 Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates they shall stomble and fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe g raginge like the streames off water? It is Egipte that ryseth vp like the floude, and casteth out the waters with so greate noyse.

But lo, the tyme commeth (saieth the LORDE) that I shall sende hir trussers to trusse her vp, to prepare and season hir vessels : yee hir tankerdes rattell, and shake to a fro. And Moab shalbe ashamed off Chamos, like as Israel was ashamed off Bethel, wherin she put hir trust.

Wherfore do ye thinke thus: we are mightie, and stronge men off warre?" Moab shal be destroyed, and hir cities brente vp : 6 hir chosen yonge men shall be slayne, saieth the kinge, whose name is the LORDE off hoostes. The destruction off Moab commeth on a pace, and hir fall is at honde.

All hir neghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe hir name, shal saye : O how happeneth it, that the stronge staff and the goodly rod is thus broken? And thou doughter Dibō, come downe from thy glory, and syt in pouerte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to y strete, g loke aboute the: axe them that are fled and escaped, and saye : what thynge is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Ye Moabites shal leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes off stone, and become like doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde off it, she is very hie mynded. 'I knowe hir stoutnesse, hir boostinge, hir arogacy and the pryde off hir stomack, saieth the LORDE. Therfore shal there mournynge be made for Moab, and euery mā shal crie for Moabs sake: a lamentacion Æ shalbe made, to the men that stonde vpon the wall. For thus saieth the LORDE: "Beholde, the enemie shal come flyenge as an Aegle, and sprede his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clymme ouer the walles, and wynne the stronge holdes. Then the mighty mens hertes in Moab, 'shalbe like the herte off a woman trauelinge with childe.

And Moab shalbe made so desolate, that she shal nomore be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynst the LORDE. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpō the (o Moab) saieth the LORDE. Who so escapeth the feare, shal fall in the pyt: and who so getteth out off the pyt, shall be taken in the snare.<sup>6</sup>

For I will bringe a yeare off visitation vpon Moab, saieth the LORDE. They that are able to fle, shall stonde vnder the shadowe off Hesebon. For there shall go a fyre out off Hesebon, and a flame from Sion,  $\mathfrak{g}$  shall burne vp that proude people off Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vuto the (o Moab) for thou people off Chamos shalt perish: Yee thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the last will I bringe Moab out off captiuyte agayne, saieth the LORDE. Thus farre off the plage off Moab.

The rlir. Chapter.

S concerninge the Ammonites, <sup>d</sup> thus the LORDE saieth : Hath Israel no children, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wherfore doth his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (saieth $ LORDE) that I will brynge a noyse off warre in to Rabath off the Ammonites. Lahel shalbe desolate, and hir cities brent vp: and the Israelites shull be lordes ouer those, that had the in possession afore, saieth the LORDE. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shal be roted out off the grounde, saieth the LORDE. The cities off Rabath shall crie out, and gyrde them selues with sack cloth: they shall mourne, and runne aboute the walles: for their kynge shall be led awaye presoner : yee his preestes and prynees with him.

Idumea shall be a wildernesse: "who so goeth by it, shalbe abashed, and wondre at all hir miserable plages. Like as Sodom, Gomor and the cities that laye there aboute, were turned vpsyde downe (saieth LORDE) so shal no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habitacion there. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haist you, stode not still, remembre the LORDE afarre of: and thinke vpon Ierusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemies: oure faces were couered with shame, because the straunge aleauntes came in to the Sanctuary of the LORDE. Wherfore beholde (saieth the LORDE) the tyme commeth, that I wil vyset the ymages of Babilon, and thorow the whole lode they shal mourne and fall. <sup>s</sup> Though Babilon clymmed vp in to heauē, and kepte her power an hie: yet shal I sende her destroyers saieth the LORDE.

A piteous crie shall be herde from Babilon, 3 and a greate mysery from the londe of the Caldees: when the LORDE destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hie stomack g proude boostinge, where with they have bene as furious, as the wawes of greate water floudes, and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen voon Babilon) which shal take hir worthies, and brake their bowes: for God is disposed to avenge him self vpon them, g sufficiently to recompence the. Yee (saieth the LORDE) I will make their prynces, their wyse men, their chefe rulers a all their worthies, dronckē: so that they shal slepe an euerlastinge slepe, and neuer wake : Thus saieth the kinge, whose name is y LORDE of hoostes.

Morouer, thus saleth the LORDE of hoostes: The thicke wall of Babilon shal be broken, and hir proude gates shalbe brente vp. And the thinge that the Gētiles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle and laboure, shal come to naught, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Ieremy gaue vnto Sarias the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasia, when he wente towarde Babilon with Sedechias the kinge of Iuda, in the fourth yeare of his reigne. Now this Sarias was a peaceable prynce. Ieremy wrote in a boke, all the misery that shulde come vpon Babilon, yee and all these sermons that be written agaynst Babilon, and gaue Sarias this charge: When thou commest vnto Babilon, se that thou rede all these wordes, and saye: O LORDE, thou art determed to rote out this

The Prophet Baruch.

What Baruch contegneth.

Chap. I.

Baruch readeth the boke before the kynge and all the people, which sende money to Ierusalem.

Chap. II.

They knowlege, that they have deserved punyshment : God promyseth them forgeuenesse.

Chap. III.

They praye hartely beinge in preson, and he exorteth them to amende.

HESE are the wordes of the boke, that Baruch the sonne of Nerias the sonne of Maasia, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Sedei, the sonne of Helchia, wrote at Babilon in the fifth yeare the seuēth daye of the moneth: "what tyme as the Caldees wanne Ierusalem and brent it.

The first Chapter.

A ND Baruch dyd rede the wordes of this boke, that Iechonias the sonne of Ioachim kynge of Iuda might heare : and in the presence of all the people, that were come to heare the boke : yee and before all the noble kinges sonnes, before  $\mathring{y}$  lordes of the councell and elders : and before the whole people, from  $\mathring{y}$  lowest vnto the hyest : before all them that dwelt at Babilon, by  $\mathring{y}$  water of Sodi. Which when they herde it, wepte, fasted, and prayed before the LORDE.

They made a colleccion also of money, acordinge to euery mans power, and sent it to Ierusalem vnto Ioachim the sonne of Helchia the sonne of Salon prest, with y other prestes: and to all the people which were with him at Ierusalē, what tyme as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of y LORDE (that were taken awaye out of the temple) that they might brynge them agayne in to the londe of Iuda, the x. daye of the moneth Siban:

Chap. IIII.

A sermon to the people, with an exortacion to pacience.

Chap. V.

He conforteth them, and sheweth the vocacion of the Heithen.

Chap. VI.

A copie of the epistole, that Ieremy sent to the Iewes, which were led awaye presoners vnto Babilon.

namely, syluer vessel, (which Sedechias the sonne of Iosias kinge of Iuda had made.) After that Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon had takē Iechonias, with all his prynces, lordes, and all the people, and led them captyue from Ierusalem vnto Babilon.

And they sayde: 'Beholde, we have sent @ you money, to bye you burntofferynges and incense withall: make you vnleuended bred, g offre for synne vpon the aulter of the LORDE oure God. 'And praye for the prosperite of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, and of Balthasar his sonne: y their dayes maye be vpon earth, as the dayes of heauen : that God also maye geue vs strength, and lighten oure eves : that we maye lyue ynder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon, and vnder the protection of Balthasar his sonne: that we maye longe do them seruyce, and fynde fauoure in their sight. Praye for vs also vnto the LORDE oure God, for we have synned agaynst the LORDE oure God, and vnto this daye is not his wrath turned yet awaye from vs. And se that ye rede this boke (which we haue sent vnto you to be rehearced in the temple of the LORDE) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shal ye saye: "The LORDE oure God is rightuous, but we are worthy of cofucion  $\mathfrak{g}$  shame: like as it is come to passe this

The iiij. Chapter.

¬HIS is the boke off the commaundemētes | ℜ of God, and the lawe y endureth for euer. All they y kepe it, shall come to life : but soch as forsake it, shall come to death. Turne the o Iacob, and take holde of it: walke by this waye, thorow his brightnesse and shyne. Geue not thyne honoure to another, and thy worshipe to a straunge people. ° O Israel, how happie are we, seige that God hath shewed vs soch thynges as are pleasaut vnto him? Be of good cheare, thou people of God, o thou awnciet Israel. Now are ye solde amonge the Heithen, howbeit not for youre vtter destruccion : but because ye prouoked God the LORDE to wrath and displeasure, therfore were ye delyuered vnto youre enemies: For ye displeased the euerlastinge God that made you, offerynge vnto deuels and not God. Ye haue forgotte him that brought you vp, ad youre nurse haue ye greued, o Ierusalem.

When she sawe that the wrath off God was commynge vpon you: she sayde: Herkë o ye that dwell aboute Sion, for God hath brought me in to greate heuynesse: ād why? I se the captyuyte of my people, of my sonnes and doughters, which the euerlastynge God will brynge vpon them. With ioye dyd I norish them, but now must I leaue them with wepynge and sorow.

Let no man reioyce ouer me wyddowe ād forsaken: which for the synnes off my children, am desolate of euery man. For why, they departed from the lawe of God: they wolde not knowe his rightuousnes, ner walke in the waye off his comaundementes: and as for the pathes off the treuth and godlynesse, they had no lust to go in them.

O ye dwellers aboute Sion : come, and let  $\mathbf{r}$  vs call to remembraunce the captingte, that the euclastinge God hath brought vpon my sonnes and my doughters. He hath brought a people vpon them from farre, an vncurteous people, and of a straunge laguage: which nether regarde the olde, ner pyte the yonge.

These have caried awaye the deare beloued of my wyddowes, leauynge me alone, both desolate and childlesse. But alas, what can I helpe you? Now he y hath brought these Go youre waye (O my children) go youre waye : for I am desolate and forsaken. I haue put of the clothinge of peace, and put vpon me the sackcloth off prayer, and for my tyme I will call vpon the most hyest. Be off good cheare, o my children : "crie vnto the LORDE, and he shal delyuer you from the power of the prynces, youre enemies.

For verely, I have ever a good hope off youre prosperous health: yee a very gladnesse is come vpon me from the holy one, because of the mercy that ye shall have off our everlastinge Sauioure.

With mournynge and wepinge dyd I let you go fro me, but with ioye and perpetuall gladnesse, shall the LORDE brynge you agayne vnto me. Like as the neghbours of Sion sawe youre captyuite from God, Euē so shal they also se shortly youre health in God, which shal come on you with greate honoure and euerlastinge worshipe.

O my children, suffre pacietly the wrath that shal come vpon you, For the enemie hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his destruccion, and shalt treade vpon his necke. My derlinges haue gone rough harde wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scatred abrode with the enemies. But be of good coforte (o my children) a crie vnto the LORDE: For he that led you awaye, E hath you yet in remembrauce : and like as ye haue bene mynded to swarue from youre God, so shal ye now endeuoure youre selues x. tymes more, to 'turne agayne, and to seke him. For he that hath brought these plages vpō you, shal brynge you euerlastinge ioye agayne with youre health. Take a good herte vnto the, o Ierusalē: for he which gaue ŷ that name, exorteth the so to do.

The wicked doers that now put the to trouble, shall perish: and soch as haue reioysed at thy fall, shalbe punyshed. The cities whom thy children serue, and that haue caried awaye thy sonnes, shal be correcte. For like as they be now glad of thy decaye, so shal they mourne in their owne destruccion. The ioye off their multitude shalbe taken awaye ād their cheare shalbe turned to sorowe. For a fyre shal fall vpon them from the euerlastinge God, longe to endure: and it shalbe inhabited of deuels for a greate season. O IERUSALEM, loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde the ioye, that commeth vnto the from God. For lo, thy sonnes, (whom thou hast forsake, and that were scatted abrode) come gathered together from the east and west, reioysinge in the worde of the holy one, vnto the honoure off God.

The b. Chapter.

Put of thy mournynge clothes (o Ierusalem) and thy sorow, and decke the with the worshipe and honoure, that commeth vnto the from God, with euerlastinge glory. God shal put the cloake off rightuousnesse vpon the, and set a crowne off euerlastinge worshipe vpon thine heade: for vpon the will God declare his brightnes, that is vnder the heauen : Yee an euerlastinge name shalbe geuen the of God, with peace of rightuousnesse,  $\mathfrak{g}$  ŷ honoure of Gods feare.

Arise o Ierusalem, stöde vp on hye: loke 3 aboute the towarde the east, and beholde thy children gathered from the east vnto the west: which reioyce in the holy worde, hauynge God in remembraunce. They departed from the on fote, and were led awaye of their enemies: but now shal the LORDE bringe them caried with honoure, as children off y kyngdome. For God is purposed to brynge downe all stoute moūtaynes, yee and all hye rockes, to fyll the valleys, g so to make them eauen with the grounde : y Israel maye be diliget to lyue vnto ý honoure of God. The woddes a all pleasaût trees shal ouershadowe Israel, at the comaundement of God. For hyther shal God brynge Israel with ioyfull myrth, and in the light of his magesty : with the mercy and rightuousnesse, that cometh of himselff.

in Babilō, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wodd and of stone: borne vpon mens shulders, to cast out a fearfulnes before the Heithen. But loke that ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them ouercome you.

Therfore, when ye se the multitude of peo-33 ple worshippinge them behinde a before, saye ye in youre hertes: O LORDE, it is thou, that oughtest only to be worshipped? "Myne angel also shal be with you, and I myself wil care for youre soules. As for the tymbre of those goddes, y carpeter hath polisshed them: yee gylted be they, a layed ouer with syluer, yet are they but vayne thinges, g can not speake. Like as a wench y loueth peramours is trymly deckte, euen so are these made g hanged with golde. Crownes of golde verely haue their goddes vpon their heades : so the prestes them selues take the golde and syluer from them, g put it to their owne vses : yee they geue of the same vnto harlottes, ad trymme their whores withall: Agayne, they take it from the whores, and decke their goddes therwith. Yet can not these goddes delyuer them selues from rust and mothes. ୬ Whē they haue couered them with clothynge off purple, they wype their faces for the dust of the temple, wherof their is moch amoge the. One hath a sceptre in his honde, as though he were iudge of the countre: yet can he not slaye soch as offende him. Another hath a swearde or an axe in his honde, for all that, is he nether able to defende him selfe from batayll, ner fro murtherers. Æ

By this ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddes: therfore se  $\mathring{y}$  ye nether worshipe them, ner feare them. For like as a vessel  $\mathring{y}$ a man vseth, is nothinge worth when it is broken, euen so is it with their goddes. When they be set vp in the temple, their eyes be full of dust, thorow the fete of those that come in. And like as y dores are shut in roude aboute vpo him, y hath offended the kinge: Or as it were a deed body kepte besyde the grave : Even so the prestes kepte the dores with barres and lockes, lest their goddes be spoyled with robbers. They set vp cadels before the (yee verely and y many) wherof they can not se one, but euen as blockes, so stonde they in the temple. It is sayde, y the serpentes and wormes, which come off the earth, gnawe out their hertes, eatinge them a their clothes also, and yet they fele it not. Their faces are blacke, thorow the smoke  $\frac{1}{2}$  is in the temple. The oules, swalowes  $\frac{1}{2}$  byrdes fle vpon them, yee and the cattes runne ouer their heades.

By this ye maye be sure, that they are not  $\mathbf{D}$ goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them beutifull: for all that, excepte some body dight off their rust, they wil geue no shyne : and when they were cast in to a fourme, they felt it not. They are bought for money, and haue no breth off life within them. They must be borne vpon mens shulders, as those that haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothynge worth. Confounded be they then, that worshipe them. For yf they fall to the grounde, they can not ryse vp agayne of the selues: Yee though one helpe them vp and set them right, yet are they not able to stonde alone : but must haue proppes set vnder them, like deed men. As for the thinge that is offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, ad abuse it : yee the prestes wyues take therof, but vnto the sicke and poore they geue nothinge of it, the women with childe a the mestruous laye hondes of their offerynges. By this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore be not ye alrayde of them. From whence cometh it the, that they be called goddes? The women syt before the goddes of syluer, golde and wolde, and the prestes syt in their temples, hauynge open clothes, whose heades and beerdes are shauen, and haue nothige vpon their heades: roaringe and cryenge vpon their goddes, as men do at the feast, when one is deed.

The prestes also take awaye the garmentes a of the ymages, and decke their wyues a child-Whether it be good or euell y ren withall. eny man do vnto them, they are not able to recompence it: they can nether set vp a kynge, ner put him downe. In like maner they maye nether geue riches, ner rewarde Though a man make a vowe vnto euell. them ad kepe it not, they wil not requyre it." They can not restore a blynde ma to his sight, ner helpe eny ma at his nede. They ca shewe no mercy to the wyddowe, ner do good to  $\psi$  fatherles. then be taken for goddes? yee how darre men of wodde, of stone, of golde a syluer maye call the goddes? And though the caldees worshiped the not, hearinge y they were but domme g coude not speake: Yet they them selues offre vnto Bel, and wolde fayne haue him to speake : as who saye, they coude fele, y maye not moue. But when these me come to vnderstödinge, they shall forsake them, for  $\mathbf{J}$  their goddes have no felinge. A greate sorte off women gyrded with coardes, syt in the stretes, a burne olyue beries. Now yf one off them be conveyed awaye, a lye with eny soch as come by: she casteth hir neghburesse in the teth, because she was not so worthely reputed, ner hir coorde broken. What so euer is done for them, it is but in vayne ad lost: How maye it the be thought or sayde, y they are goddes? Carpenters goldsmythes make the, nether be they eny other thinge, but euen what the worke men wil make of them. Yee the goldsmithes them selues that make the, are of no longe cotynuaunce: How shulde then the thiges that are made of them, be goddes? Vayne therfore are the thinges (yee very shame is it) that they leaue behinde the for their posterite. For as soone as there cometh eny warre or plage vpon the, then the prestes ymagyn, where they maye hyde the selues with the. How can men thynke then, that they be goddes, which nether maye defende them selues from warre, ner delyuer the fro mysfortune? For seynge they be but of wodd, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people g kynges shal knowe herafter, that they be but vayne thinges: yee it shalbe openly declared, that they be no goddes: but even the very workes off mes hodes, a that God hath nothinge to do with the. They can set no kynge in the londe ner geue rayne vnto They can geue no sentence of a matter, men. nether defende the londe fro wronge: For they are not able to do so moch as a crowe, that flyeth betwixte heuen and earth. 6 Whc there happeneth a fyre in to the house of those goddes of wodde, of syluer and of golde, the prestes wil escape a saue the selues,

nether defende the selues from theues ner robbers: yee ŷ very wicked are stronger the they. These strype them out off their apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take their golde a syluer fro the, and so get the awaye: yet ca they not helpe the selues. Therfore it is moch better for a man, to be a kinge a so to shewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherin he y oweth it, might haue pleasure: yee or to be a dore in a house, to kepe soch thinges safe as be therin: the to be soch a vayne god. The Sone, the Mone a all the starres when they geue their shyne a light, are obedient, a do men good: When the lightenynge glistreth, all is cleare: The wynde bloweth in euery countre, a whe God comaundeth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the whole worlde, they do as they are bydden: when the fyre is sent downe fro aboue a comaunded, it burneth vp hilles ad woddes: But as for those goddes, they are not like one off these thynges, nether in beuty ner stregth. Wherfore me shulde not thynke, a ner saye that they be goddes, seynge they ca nether geue sentence in judgment, ner do men good. For so moch now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not: For they can nether speake euell ner good of kynges. They cā shewe no tokens in heauē for y Heithen, nether shyne as the Sone, ner geue light as the Mone: yee v vnreasonable beastes are better then they: for they can get the vnder the rofe, and do them selues good: So can ye be certified by no maner off meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare the not. For like as a frayboggarde in a garden off Cucumbers kepeth nothinge, euen so are their goddes of wod, of syluer golde: and like as a whyte thorne in an orcharde, that euery byrde sytteth vpon: yee like as a deed body that is cast in the darcke, Euen so is it with those goddes of wodde, syluer and golde. By the purple and scarlet which they have vpon thē, ād soone faydeth awaye, ye maye vnderstonde, that they be no goddes: yee they them selues shal be cosumed at the last, which shal be a greate cofucion of the londe. Blessed is the godly man, y hath no ymages a worshippeth none, for he shalbe farre from reprofe.

A I T chaūsed, in the xxx. yeare the fifth daye off the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the presoners by the ryuer off Cobar: where the heauens opened, g I sawe a vision of God. off the fyre there wente lighteninge. Whe y beestes wête forwarde a backwarde, one wolde haue thought it had lightened. Now whe I had well considered the beestes, I sawe a worke off wheles vpon the earth with foure faces also like the beestes.

The fashion g worke of the wheles was like Ð The foure wheles were ioyned and the see. inade (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another: When one wente forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned the not aboute i their goinge. They were large, greate and horrible to loke vpon.

Their bodies were full off eyes rounde aboute them all foure. Whe the beestes wete, the wheles wente also with them: And when the beestes lift them selues vp from y earth, the wheles were lift vp also. Whyther so euer the sprete wente, thither wente they also, a y wheles were lift vp a folowed the, for y sprete of life was in the wheles. When y beestes wete forth, stode still, or lift them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also wente, stode still, a were lift vp, for y breth off life was in the wheles.

Aboue ouer y heades of the beestes there Æ was a firmament, which was fashioned as it had bene off the most pure Christall, g that was spred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layed abrode, one towarde another, and two wynges couered the body of euery beest. And when they wente forth, I herde the noyse off their wynges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce off the greate God, and a russhinge together as it were off an hoost off men. And when they stode still, they let downe their winges. Now when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament, that was about their heades.

About the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was the fashion off a seate, as it had bene made off Saphir. Apon the seate there sat one like a ma. I behelde him, and he was like a cleare light, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I loked vpon him vnder § loynes, me thought he was like a shyninge fyre, that geneth light on enery syde. Yee the shyne and glistre v lightened rounde aboute, was like a raynbowe, which in a raynie daye apeareth in the cloudes. Euē so Morouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the  $\alpha$   $\vartheta$  cite in steade off an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shal be a token vnto the house off Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house off Israel vpon the.

Certayne dayes apoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes." Neuertheles I will apoynte the a tyme (to put off their synnes) and the nombre off the daies: Thre hundreth  $\mathfrak{q}$  xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednesse off the house of Israel. B Morouer I will make the waist and abhorred, before all the Heithen that dwell aboute the, and in the sight off all them, that go by the: so that when I punysh the in my wrath, in myne anger, and with the plage off my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a gasinge and wondringe stocke, amonge the Heithen that lye aboute the.

Youre slayne men will I laye before youre goddes, and the deed carcases off the children off Israel will I cast before their ymages, youre bones wil I strowe rounde aboute youre aulters, and dwellinge places.

The cities shalbe desolate,  $\oint$  hillchapels layed waist: youre aulters destroyed,  $\mathfrak{g}$  broken: youre goddes cast downe, and taken awaye, youre tepels layde eaue with the groude, youre owne workes clene roted out. Those  $\oint$  amoge you haue escaped the swearde, will I leaue amonge the Gentiles, for I will scatre you amonge the nacions. And they that escape from you, shall thinke vpon me amonge the heithen, where they shalbe in captiuyte.

As for that whorish and vnfaithfull herte of theirs, wherwith they runne awaye fro me, I will breake it: yee g put out those eyes off theirs, that committe fornicacion with their Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for the wickednesses  $\bar{a}d$ abhominacions, which they haue done: and shal lerne to knowe, how that it is not in vayne, that I the LORDE spake, to bringe soch mysery vpon them.

The LORDE sayde morouer vnto me: Smyte thine hondes together, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for because of thē, they shal perish with the swearde, with hoger and with pestilence. ## The biij. Chapter.

T happened, that in the sixte yeare, the A fifth daye of the sixte Moneth I sat in my house, and the lordes off the councell off Iuda with me: and the honde off the LORDE God fell euen there vpo me.

And as I loked vp, I sawe as it were a licknesse off fyre from his loynes downwarde, <sup>i</sup> and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous cleare.

This symilitude stretched out an honde, and toke me by the hayrie lockes off my heade, and the sprete lift me vp betwixte heauen and earth: and God brought me in a vision to Ierusalem, in to the courte off the inwarde porte that lieth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whom he that hath all thinges in his power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glory off the God off Israel was in the same place: 'euē as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne off man, O lift vp thine eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lift I vp myne eyes towarde the north, and beholde: Besyde the porte northwarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage off prouocacion in the very entrynge in.

And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne off man, Seist thou what these do? Seist thou the greate abhominacions that the house off Israel commytte in this place? which ought not to be done in my sanctuary?

But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And with that brought he me to the courte gate: and whe I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off B man, dygge thorow the wall. And when I dygged thorow the wall, beholde, there was a dore. And he sayde vnto me: go thy waye in, a loke what wicked abhominacions they do there.

So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages off wormes g beastes, all Idols and abhominacions of $ house off Israel paynted euerychone rounde aboute the wall.

<sup>d</sup> There stode also before the ymages lxx. lordes of the councell off the house off Israel : and in the myddest off them stode Iaasanias the sonne off Saphan: And euery one off them had a censoure in his honde,  $\alpha$  out off the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne off man, "hast thou sene what the Senatours off] the house off Israel do secretly, euery one in his chambre? For they saye: Tush, the LORDE seth vs not, the LORDE regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se the greate abhominacions that they do.

And with that, he brought me to the dore off the porte off the LORDES house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of ma? Turne y aboute, a thou shalt se yet greater a abhominacions. And so he brought me in to the inwarde courte of the LORDES house: a beholde, at the porte of the LORDES house, betwixte the fore entrie and the aulter, there were fyue and twenty men, that turned their backes vpon the Temple of the LORDE, g their faces towarde the easte, and these worshipped the Sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Thinketh the house of Israel, that it is but a trifle, to do these abhominacions here? Shulde they fyll the londe full of wickednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yee a purposly to cast vp their noses vpon me? Therfore wil I also do some thinge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouersee them, nether wil I spare them. <sup>f</sup>Yee and though they crie in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wil I not heare them.

A HE cried also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayenge: Come here ye rulers of the cite, euery man with his weapened honde to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of the strete of the vpper porte towarde the north, and euery man a weapen in his honde to the slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on him a lynninge rayment, and a wryters ynckhorne by his syde.

These wente in, and stode beside the brasen aulter: "for the glory of the LORDE was gone awaye from the Cherub, and was come downe to the thresholde of the house, g he called the mā, that had the lynnynge rayment vpon him, and the writers ynckhorne by his syde, and the LORDE sayde vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the cite of Ierusalem, and

A ND as I loked, beholde, In the firmament that was aboue the Cherubins there apeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vpō them: 'Then sayde he that sat therin, to him that had the lynnynge rayment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine honde full of hote coales out from betwene the Cherubins, and cast them ouer the cite. And he crepte in, that I might se.

Now the Cherubins stode vpo the right syde of the house, when the man wete in, and the cloude fylled the ynnermer courte. /But the glory of the LORDE remoued from the Cherubins, and came vpon the thresholde of the house: so that the Temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the LORDES glory. ## The rif. Chapter.

A THE worde of the LORDE came vnto me, savege: Thou sonne of man, Speake prophecie agaynst those prophetes, that preach in Israel: g save thou vnto them that prophecie out of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the LORDE, thus saieth the LORDE God: "Wo be vnto those folish prophetes, that followe their owne sprete, and speake, where they se nothinge. O Israel, thy prophetes are like the foxes vpon the drie felde: For they stonde not in the gappes, nether make they an hedge for the house of Israel, "that me might abyde the parell in the daye of the LORDE. Vayne thinges they se, g tell lies, to mayntene their preachinges withall. The LORDE (save they) hath spoke it, when in very dede the LORDE hath not sent them. Vayne visios haue ye sene, a spokē false prophecies, when ye saye : the LORDE hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Myne hondes shal come vpon the prophetes, that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lies: they shal not be in the councell of my people, ner written in the boke of the house of Israel, nether shal they come in the londe of Israel: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE God. One setteth vp a wall, g they dawbe it with lowse claye. <sup>d</sup>Therfore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shal come a greate shuwer of rayne, greate stones shall fall vpon it, a sore storme of wynde shal breake it, so shal y wall come downe. Shal it not then be sayde vnto you : where is now the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: I will breake out in my wrothfull displeasure with a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shal come a mightie shuwer of rayne, g hale stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

Wherfore (o thou sonne of ma,) set thy face agaynst the doughters of thy people, which prophecie out of their owne hertes: a speake thou prophecie agaynst them, a saye: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pilowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and olde, to catch soules withall. Do me take wodd of it, to make eny worke withall? Or maye there a nale be made of it, to hange eny thinge vpon? Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is brent to aszshes. Is it mete then for eny worke? No.

Seinge then, that it was mete for no worke, beinge whole: moch lesse maye there eny thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath conthinge be made of it, when the Tyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: Like as I cast the vyne in to the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wil I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, and set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. "Then shal ye knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I set my face agaynst them, and make the londe waist: because they haue so sore offended, saieth the LORDE God.

And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to drosse.<sup> $\varepsilon$ </sup> All they that shulde be brasse, tynne, yrō g leade, are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: For so moch as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I will brynge you together vnto Ierusalem, like as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the fornace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melt them: Euen so will I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath and indignacion. "They put no dyfference betwene the holy and vnholy, nether discerne betwene the clene and vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my Sabbathes, and I am vnhalowed amonge them.

'Thy rulers in the are like rauyshinge wolues, to shed bloude, and to destroye soules, for their owne covetous lucre. As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vanities, and prophecie lies vnto them, sayenge: the LORDE God sayeth so, where as the LORDE hath not spoken. The people in the londe vseth wicked extorcio and robberv. 'They vexe the poore and nedy: and oppresse the straunger agaynst right. And I sought in the londe for a man, that wolde make vp the hedge, and set him self in the gappe before me in the lodes behalfe, y I shulde not vtterly destroye it: but I coude fynde none. Therfore wil 1 poure out my cruell displeasure upon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence vpö their heades, saieth the LORDE God.

The priij. Chapter.

A FILE worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, there were two wome, that had one mother: "These (when they were yonge) beganne to playe the harlottes in Egipte. There were their brestes brussed, and the pappes off their maydenheade destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oola, and hir yongest sister Ooliba. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters. Their names were, Samaria, and that was Oola: and Ierusalem, that was Ooliba. As for Oola, she beganne to go a whorynge, when I had take her to me. She was set on fyre vpon hir louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: 'euen the prynces and lordes, that were deckte in costly araye : fayre yonge men, lusty ryders of horses.

Thus thorow hir whordome, she cleued vnto all the yonge men off Assiria: Yee she was madde vpon them, and defyled herselff with all their Idols. Nether ceased she fro the

'These discouered hir shame, toke hir sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the swearde: An euell name gat she of all people,  $\bar{a}d$  they punyshed her.

"Hir sister Ooliba sawe this, ad destroyed B herself with inordinate loue, more then she, a exceaded hir sister in whordome : she loued vAssirians (which also laye with her) namely, the prynces a greate lordes, that were clothed with all maner of gorgious apparell, all lusty horsmen and fayre yonge personnes. Then I sawe, that they both were defyled a like. But she increased still in whordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages off the Caldees set forth with fresh colours, with fayre gyrdles aboute them, and goodly bonettes vpon their heades, lokynge all like prynces (after ŷ maner of the Babilonias and Caldees in their owne londe, where they be borne) Inmediatly, as soone as she sawe them, she brent in loue vpon them, and sent messaugers for them in to the londe of the Caldees.

Now when the Babilonias came to her, they laye with her, and defyled her with their whordome, and so was she poluted with them. And when hir lust was abated from them, hir, whordome and shame was discouered g sene: then my herte forsoke her, like as my herte was gone from hir sister also. Neuertheles she vsed hir whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes off hir youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the londe off Egipte : she brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like y flesh of Asses, * and their sede like the sede off horses. Thus thou hast renued the fylthynesse of thy youth, when thy louers bressed thy pappes, and marred thy brestes in Egipte.

Therfore (o Ooliba) thus saieth § LORDE God. I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) agaynst the, and gather them together rounde aboute the: Namely, the Babilonians, and all the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa and Coa, with all the Assirians:

all yonge and fayre louers : prynces and lordes, knyghtes and gentlemen, which be all good horsmen: These shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, g a greate multitude of people: which shal be harnessed aboute the on euery syde, with brestplates, sheldes and helmettes. I will punysh y before them, yee they the selues shal punysh the, acordinge to their owne iudgmet. They shal strype the out of thy clothes, a cary thy costly Iewels awaye with them.

玬 Thus will I make an ende off thy fylthynesse a whordome, which thou hast brought out of the lode of Egipte: so that thou shalt turne thine eyes nomore after them, a cast thy mynde nomore vpon Egipte. For thus saieth the LORDE: Beholde, I will delyuer y in to the hodes of them, whom thou hatest: yee euen in to the hondes of them, with who thou hast fulfylled thy lust, which shall deale cruelly with y: All thy laboure shal they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy filthy whordome shal come to light. All these thinges shal happen vnto the, because of thy whordome, which thou hast vsed amonge the Gentiles, with whose Idols thou hast defyled thy self. Thou hast walked in the waye of thy sister, therfore will I geue the hir cuppe in thy honde.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou shalt drynke off thy sisters cuppe, how depe a farre so euer it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be full off dronckennes and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruccion g waistinge: the same shalt thou drynke, and suppe it out eue to y dregges, yee thou shalt eate vp the broken peces off it, and so teare thine owne brestes: For euen I haue spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

Therfore thus saieth § LORDE God: For Æ. so moch as thou hast forgotte me, a cast me asyde, so beare now thine owne fylthinesse g whordome. The LORDE sayde morouer vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, wilt thou not reproue Oola g Ooliba? Shewe the their abhominaciös: namely, y they haue brokē their wedlocke, a stayned their hodes with bloude: yee euen with their Idols haue they committed aducutry, "g offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) who they had borne vnto me. 'Yee a this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sactuary in that same daye, g haue vnhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne their childre for their Idols, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary, to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house. Besyde all this, thou hast sent thy messaungers for men out of farre coutrees: and whe they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed and set forth thy selff off the best fashion: 'thou sattest vpo a goodly bed,  $\alpha$  a table spred before the: where you thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare with her,  $\alpha$ the men y were sent fro farre coutrees ouer the deserte: vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon their hondes, a set glorious crownes vpon their heades. Then thought I: no doute, these wil vse their harlotry also with yöder olde whore. And they wente in to her, as vnto a comon harlot: Euen so wente they also to Oola & Ooliba, those filthy women.

<sup>d</sup>O ye all that loue vertue and rightuousnes, judge the, punysh them : as aduoutrers and murtherers ought to be judged and punyshed. For they are breakers off wedlocke, and the bloude is in their houdes. Wherfore thus saieth the LORDE God: bringe a greate multitude off people vpon them, and make them be scatted and spoyled: these shal stone them, and gorre them with their sweardes. They shal slave their sonnes and doughters and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus will I destroye all soch fylthynes out off the londe: that all women may lerne, not to do after youre vnclenesse. And so they shall laye youre fylthinesse vpon youre owne selues, and ye shalbe punyshed for the synnes, that ye have committed with youre Idols: a ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE.

Wherfore, thus saieth # LORDE God: O, wo be vnto that bloudthurstie cite, for who I wil prepare a heape off wodde : beare thou $ bones together, kyndle thou the fyre, seeth the flesh, let all be well sodde, that the bones maye be suckte out. Morouer, set the pot emptye vpon the coales, that it maye be warme and the metall hote: that the fulth and rustynesse maye be consumed. But it will not go off, there is so moch off it: the rustinesse must be brent out. Thy filthinese is abhominable, for I wolde haue clensed the, but thou woldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pourged from thine vnclennesse, till I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Even I the LORDE have so deuysed: Yee it is come therto allredy, that I will do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I wil not be intreated : but acordinge to thy wayes ad ymaginacions, thou shalt be punyshed, saieth the LORDE God.

▲ And the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, beholde, I will take awaye the pleasure off thine eyes with a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne ner wepe, ner water thy chekes therfore: thou mayest mourne by thy selff alone, but vse no deadly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shues vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners bred. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the mornynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morow, I dyd as I was comaunded. And $ people sayde vnto me : wilt thou not tell vs, what that signifieth, which thou doest? I answered them, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayege: Tell the house of Israel, thus saieth y LORDE God : beholde, I wil suspende my Sanctuary: euē the glory of youre power, the pleasure of youre eyes, and the thinge that ye loue: youre sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shal fall thorow the swerde.

Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shal not hyde youre faces, ye shal eate no mourners bred : youre bonettes shal ye haue vpon youre heades, g shues vpon youre fete. Ye shal nether mourne ner wepe, but in youre synnes ye shal be soroufull, and one repēte with another. Thus Ezechiel is youre shewtoke. For loke as he hath done, so (when this commeth) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am # LORDE God. But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take from them their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust off their eyes, the burthe of their bodies : namely, their sonnes and doughters : The shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe the. In that daye shal thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, that thou mayest speake, and be nomore domme: Yee and thou shalt be their shewtoke, that they may knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

In the xxvij. yeare, the first daye of the first Moneth, came v worde off the LORDE vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babilon hath made his hoost, with greate trauayle and laboure to come before Tyre: that every heade maye be balde, and every shulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether him ner his hoost eny rewarde, for y greate trauayle y he hath taken there. Therfore thus saieth & LORDE God: beholde I will geue the lode of Egipte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kynge off Babilo, y he maye take awaye all hir substauce, robbe hir robberies, ad spoyle hir spoyles, to paye his hoost their wagies withall. I wil geue him the londe of Egipte for his laboure, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme wil I cause the horne off the house of Israel to growe forth, a open thy mouth agayne amonge them : that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

MOROUER, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, prophecy g speake: thus saieth the LORDE God: "Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE is come: the darcke daye of  $\mathring{y}$  Heithē, the houre is at honde, the swearde commeth vpon Egipte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egipte, when hir people are taken awaye, and when hir foundaciōs are destroyed: the Morians londe shal be afrayed, yee the Morians londe, Lybia  $\mathfrak{g}$  Lydia, all their comon people,  $\mathfrak{g}$  Chub,  $\mathfrak{g}$  all  $\mathring{y}$  be confederate vnto thē, shal fall with thē thorow  $\mathring{y}$  swearde.

Thus saieth § LORDE: The maynteyners of the lode of Egipte shal fall, the pryde of hir power shal come downe: eue vnto the tower off Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, saieth § LORDE God:

33 amonge other desolate countrees they shal be made desolate, g amonge other waist cities they shalbe waisted. And they shal knowe, y I am y LORDE, when I kyndle a fyre in Egipte, g when all hir helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shal there messaungers go forth fro me in shippes, to make  $\mathring{y}$  carelesse Morians afrayed: and sorowe shal come vpon them in the daye of Egipte, for doutles it shal come. Thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil make an ende of the people of Egipte thorow the honde of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon. He and his people with him, yee and the cruell tyrauntes of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the londe. They shal drawe out their sweardes vpon Egipte and fyll the londe full of slayne men. I will drye vp their floudes of water, ād sell the lode in to the hondes of wicked people. The lode and all ŷ is therin, wil I destroye thorow the enemies. Euē I the LORDE haue sayde it.

And thus saieth the LORDE God: I will destroye the Idols, and brynge the ymages of Noph to an ende. 'There shal nomore be a prynce of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse will I sende in to the Egipcians londe. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, ad kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria will I punysh, c poure my wrothfull indignacio vpo Sin, which is the strength of Egipte. All the sustaunce of Alexandria will I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egipte.

Sin shalbe in greate heuynesse, Alexandria shalbe roted out, and Noph shall haue daylie sorowe. The best men off Heliopolis (Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swearde, ād caried awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shalbe darcke, when I breake there the scepter of the londe of Egipte, and when § pompe of hir power shal haue an ende. A cloude shal couer her, and hir doughters shalbe led awaye in to captyuyte. Thus will I punysh Egipte, that they maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

It happened in the xi. yeare, vpon the seuëth daye of ŷ first Moneth, ŷ the LORDES worde came vnto me, sayēge: Beholde, thou sonne of mā, I wil breake ŷ arme of Pharao kynge of Egipte: and lo, it shal not be boūde vp to be healed, nether shal eny playstre be layed vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strōge, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde, I will vpon Pharao ŷ kinge of Egipte, g brusse his strōge arme (yet is it but a broken one) g will smyte the swearde out of his honde.

As for the Egipcians, I wil scatre them amonge the Heithen, g strowe the in the londes aboute. Agayne I wil strength y arme of the kinge of Babilo, g geue him my swearde in his hode: but I wil breake Pharaos arme, so y he shal holde it before him piteously, like a wounded man.

namely, a greate multitude of people: these shal dryue the in to my yarne, for I will cast the vpō the lōde, and let the lye vpō the felde, that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpō the: I wil geue all the beastes of the felde ynough off the. Thy flesh will I cast vpō the hilles, and fyll the valleys with thy hyenesse. I will water the londe with the abundaunce off thy bloude euen to the moūtaynes,  $\mathfrak{g}$   $\mathfrak{y}$ valleys shal be full off the.

<sup>a</sup>When thou art put out, I will couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will sprede a cloude ouer the Sonne, ād the Moone shall not geue hir light. All the lightes off heauen will I put out ouer the, and bringe darcknesse vpon thy londe, saieth § LORDE God. I wil trouble the hertes off many people, when I bringe thy destruction amõge the Heithen and countrees, whom thou knowest not. Yee I will make many people with their kynges so afrayed thorow ŷ, that their hayre shal stonde vp, whē I shake my swearde at their faces. Sodenly shal they be astonnyed, euery man in him self, at § daye of thy fall.

For thus saieth the LORDE God: the kynge of Babilons swearde shal come vpon y, with y sweardes of the worthies will I smyte downe thy people. All they that be mightie amonge the Getiles, shal waist the proude pompe of Egipte, and brynge downe all hir people. All the catell also of Egipte wil I destroye, that they shal come nomore vpo the waters: so that nether mās fote ner beastes clawe, shal stere them eny more. Then wil I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne like oyle, sayeth the LORDE God: when I make the londe of Egipte desolate, and when § countre with all that is therin, shalbe layde waist: and whe I smyte all the which dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the LORDE. This is the mournynge, that the doughters off the Heithen shall make: Yee a sorow and lamentacio shal they take vp, vpon Egipte and all hir people, saieth the LORDE God.

In the xij. yeare, the xv. daye of the Moneth, came the worde off the LORDE vnto me sayenge: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egipte, and cast them downe, yee ād the mightie people of the Heithē also, 'euen with the that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (how fayre so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amōge those that be slayne with the swearde, shal they lye. The swearde is geuen alredy, he shal be drawen forth and all his people. The mightie worthies and his helpers,  $\dot{y}$  be gone downe and lye with the vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with  $\ddot{y}$  swearde: shal speake to him out of the hell.

Assur is there also with his company,  $\bar{a}d$  their graues rounde aboute, which were slayne  $\bar{a}d$  fell all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde him in the lowe pytte. His comos are buried rounde aboute his graue: alltogether wounded and slayne with the swearde, which men afore tyme brought feare in to y londe off the lyuynge.

There is Elam also with all his people, and their graues rounde aboute : which all beynge wounded and slayne with the swearde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, which neuertheles somtyme brought feare in to the londe off the lyuynge : for the which they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to  $\mathring{y}$  graue.

Their buryall is geuen them and all their E people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute all them, which be vncircumcised, and with them that be slayne thorow the swearde : for seynge that in tymes past they made the londe off the lyuynge afrayed, they must now beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, and their people, and their graues rounde aboute. These all are amonge the vncircūcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the londe off the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge  $\mathring{y}$ worthies, and vncircumcised Giauntes? which with their weapens are gone downe to hel: whose sweardes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthies, they haue brought feare in to  $\mathring{y}$  lode of  $\mathring{y}$  lyuinge? With their feare and strength they are come to confucion, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the swearde: and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to \$ pytte. Now when Pharao seyth this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swearde: both Pharao  $\frak{a}$  all his hoost, saieth \$ LORDE God. For I haue geuē my feare in the löde of the lyuynge. But Pharao  $\frak{g}$  all his people shal lye amõge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde, saieth the LORDE God.

The rrriff. Chapter.

GAYNE, the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off man, Speake to the childr $\bar{c}$  of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a londe, yf the people off the londe take a man off their countre, and set him to be their watchman: " $\hat{y}$  same man (wh $\bar{a}$  he seyth the swearde come vpon the londe) shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

Yff a man now heare the noyse off the trompet q will not be warned, and the swearde come ād take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpō his owne heade: For he herde the soūde of the trompet, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yff he will receaue warnynge, he shal saue his life. Agayne, yf the watch man se the swerde come, and shewe it not with the trompet, so y the people is not warned: yff the swearde come then, and take eny man from amōge thē: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne symme, but his bloude will I requyre off the watchmans honde.

And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman 'vnto the house of Israel: that where as thou hearest eny thinge out of my mouth, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. Yff I saye vnto the wicked: thou wicked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou genest him not warnynge, that he maye bewarre off his vngodly waye: then shall the wicked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude will I requyre of thy honde. Neuertheles yf thou warne the wicked off his waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wil not be turned from it: then shal he dye because off his synne, but thou hast delyuered thy soule.

Therfore (O thou sonne off man) sould. when the house off Israel, Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shulde we then be restored vnto life? Tell them: As truly as I lyue (saieth the LORDE God) I haue no pleasure in the death off the wicked, but moch rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, o ye off the house off Israel. Oh, wherfore will ye dye?

Thou sonne off man, tell the children off thy people : "The rightuousnes of the rightuous shall not saue him, whan so euer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully : Agayne, the wickednesse of the wicked shal not hurte him, whan so euer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse :

And  $\hat{y}$  rightuousnesse of the rightuous shal not saue his life, when so euer he synneth. Yff I saye vnto the rightuous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he trust to his owne rightuousnesse, and do synne: then shall his rightuousnesse be nomore thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hath done, he shall dye.

Agayne, yff I saye to the wicked: "thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne fro his synnes, and do the thinge that is laufull and right: In so moch that the same wicked mā geueth the pledge agaync, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walketh in the comaundementes off life, aud doth no wroge:

Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yee the synnes that he had done, shal neuer be thought vpon: For in so moch as he doth now the thynge that is laufull and right, he shall lyue. And yet the children off thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the LORDE is not right, where as their owne waye is rather vnright.

When the rightuous turneth from his rightuousnesse, and doeth the thynge that is wicked, he shall dye therfore. But yf the wicked turne from his wickednesse, doinge the thinge that is laufull and right, he shall lyue therfore. f Yet ye saye: the waye of $

LORDE is not equall. O ye house of Israel, I wil iudge euery one of you after his wayes. In the xij. yeare, the v. daye of the x. Moneth of oure captyuyte, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierusalem, came vnto me, and sayde : & cite is destroyed. Now the honde of the LORDE had bene vpon me the euenynge, afore this man (which was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntyll the mornynge that he came to me: Yee he opened my mouth, so y I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of  $\psi$ LORDE vnto me, and sayde: Thou sonne off man, these that dwell in the waisted londe of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, ād he had the londe in possessio: now are we many, and the londe is geuen vs to possesse also. And therfore tell them: Thus saieth Hithe LORDE: In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lift vp to Idols, "and haue shed bloude: shal ye then haue the londe in possession?

Ye leane vpon youre sweardes, ye worke abhominacions, euery one defyleth his neghbours wife: and shal ye then possesse the londe? Saye thou these wordes vnto thē: Thus saieth the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, all ye that dwell in this wildernesse, shall be slayne with the swearde: what so is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beestes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and dennes, shall dye off the pestilēce. For I wil make the londe desolate and waist, and  $\hat{y}$  pōpe off hir strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shal be so waiste that no man shall trauayle therby.

<sup>b</sup> Then shall they lerne to knowe, that I am the LORDE, whe I make the lode waist and desolate, because off all their abhominacions, F that they haue wrought. And thou sonne off man, the children off thy people y talke of the, by the walles ad in the dores of their houses, sayenge one to another: come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the LORDE: These come vnto the, after y maner of a greate people : yee my people syt downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not therafter : ' For in their mouthes they shewe them selues, as though they were feruent, but their herte goeth after their owne couetous lucre. And as a balet y hath a swete tune, ād is pleasaūt to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shal they heare, but they will not do therafter. Whe this commeth to passe (for lo, it cometh in dede) then shal they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The rpriuj. Chapter.

ND the worde off the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne off mā, prophecye agaynst the shepherdes of Israel, prophecy, and speake vnto them: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Wo be vnto the shepherdes off Israel, "that fede them selues. Shulde not the shepherdes fede § flockes?

Ye have eaten vp the fatte, ye have clothed you with the woll: the best fedde have ye slayne, but  $\mathring{y}$  flocke have ye not norished: 'The weake have ye not holden vp, the sicke have ye not healed: the broken have ye not bounde together, the outcastes have ye not brought agayne:  $f\mathring{y}$  lost have ye not sought, but churlishly and cruelly have ye ruled thē. Thus are they scatted here and there without a shepherde: yee all the beastes off the felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

My shepe go wandringe vpon all moutaynes and vpon euery hye hill, yee they be scatted abrode in all feldes, and there is no man, that careth for them, or seketh after them.

Therfore o ye shepherdes, heare the worde 13 off the LORDE, Thus sayeth the LORDE God: As truly as I lyue, for so moch as my shepe are robbed, and deuoured off all the wylde beestes off the felde, hauynge no shepherde: and seynge that my shepherdes take no regarde off my shepe, but fede them selues only, and not my shepe: Therfore heare y worde off the LORDE, o ye shepherdes: Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Beholde, I my selff will vpon the shepherdes, and requyre my shepe from their hondes, and make the ceasse from fedynge of my shepe: yee the shepherdes shall fede them selues nomore: For I will delyuer my shepe out off their mouthes so that they shall not deuoure them after this.

The prrbi. Chapter.

HOU sonne of man, prophecie vpon the ۹ I mountaynes of Israel, c speake : Heare the worde of the LORDE, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Because youre enemie hath sayde vpon you: A ha, y hie euerlastynge places are now become ours: prophecy therfore, g speake: thus saieth y LORDE God: Seinge ye be waisted g trode downe on euery syde, g become a possession vnto v resydue of v Getiles, which haue brought you in to mes mouthes a vnto an euel name amonge y people: Therfore, heare the worde of the LORDE God, o ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys a dales, to the voyde wildernesses a desolate cities, which are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the resydue of the Heithe : Yee eue thus saieth the LORDE God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyce, agaynst the resydue of the Getiles, and agaynst all Edom: which haue take in my lode vnto the selues for a possession: which also reioysed fro their whole herte with a despiteful stomacke, to waist it, and to spoyle it. Prophecy therfore vpon the londe of Israel, 33 speake vnto § mountaynes and hilles, to valleys and dales, thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, this haue I deuysed in my gelousy and terrible wrath: For so moch as ye haue suffred reprofe of the Heithen, therfore thus saieth the LORDE God: I haue sworne, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shal beare youre confucion them selues. And as for you (o mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out youre braunches, and bringe forth youre frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by, that it wil come.

Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I turne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen. I wil sende you moch people, which shalbe all of the house of Israel: the cities shalbe inhabited, and § decayed places shalbe repayred againe. I wil prouyde you with moch people and catell, which shal increase g bringe frute. I wil restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kindnes the euer ye had before: wherby ye shal knowe, y I am the LORDE. Yee people wil I sende vnto you (o my folke of İsrael) which shal haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus saieth the C LORDE God: For so moch as they saye vnto you: thou art an eater vp of men, and a waister of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, nether destroye thy people eny more, saieth the LORDE God. And I wil not suffre the, for to heare thine owne confucion amonge the Gentiles from hensforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprofe of the nacions, ner cast out thine owne people enymore, saieth the LORDE God.

Morouer, the worde of the LORDE came vnto me, sayenge: O thou sonne of mā, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde, they defyled them selues with their owne wayes  $\mathfrak{g}$  ymaginacions: so that in my sight their waye was like the vnclennesse of a menstruous woman. Wherfore I poured my wrothfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the londe,  $\mathfrak{g}$ because of their Idols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scatted them also amonge the Heithen, so that they were strowed aboute in the lodes. Acordinge to their wayes  $\mathfrak{g}$  after their owne inuencions, so dyd I punysh them.

"Now when they were gone vnto the Heithen, and come in amonge them, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them : Are these the people of God, g must go out of their owne londe? Then spared I my holy name, which y house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therfore tell y house of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: I do not this for youre sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, which ye dishonoured amoge the Heithen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I wil halowe my greate name agayne, which amonge the Getiles is euel spoken of: for ye youre selues haue dishonoured it amoge them. And the Gentiles shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, saieth V LORDE God.

As for you, I wil take you from amonge the Heithen, and gather you together out of all countrees, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne londe. "Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, q ye shalbe clene: Yee from all youre vnclennesse and from all youre Idols shal I clense you. A new herte also wil I geue you, 'and a new sprete wil I put in to you: As for that stony hert, I will take it out of youre body, and 'geue you a fleszshy herte. I wil geue you my sprete amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commaundemētes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the londe, that I gaue to youre forefathers,  $\mathfrak{g}$  ye shal be my people, and I wil be youre God. I wil helpe you out of all youre vnclēnesse, I wil call for the corne, and wil increase it, and wil let you haue no honger. I will multiplie the frutes of the trees and  $\mathfrak{F}$  increase of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reprofe of honger amõge the Heithē. Then shal ye remebre youre owne wicked wayes, and youre ymaginaciös, which were not good: so that ye shal take displeasure at youre owne selues, by reason of youre synnes and abhominacions.

f But I wil not do this for youre sakes (saieth the LORDE God) be ye sure of it. Therfore (o ye house of Israel) be ashamed of youre synnes. Morouer, thus saieth the LORDE God: what tyme as I shal clēse you from all youre offences, then wil I make the cities to

The desolate londe shal be buylded agayne, which afore tyme laye waist, in the sight of all them, that wete by. Then shal it be sayde: This waist lode is become like a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate and broke downe cities, are now stronge, and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heithen that lye rounde aboute you, shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which repayre that was made waist. Euen I the LORDE haue spoken it, g wil do it in dede.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: I wil yet once be founde agayne of  $\hat{y}$  house of Israel,  $\mathfrak{g}$ do this for them: 'I shal increase them as a flocke of men. Like as the holy flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hie solempne feastes: so shal also the wilde waisted cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they shal knowe, that I am the LORDE.

The rrrbij. Chapter.

THE honde of the LORDE came vpon a me, g caried me out in the sprete of the LORDE, g let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, g he led me rounde, aboute by them: g beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, g maruelous drye also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O LORDE God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me : Prophecy thou ypon these bones, g speake vnto them: Ye drye bones, heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus saieth the LORDE God vnto these bones: Beholde, I will put breth in to you, that ye maye lyue : I wil geue you synowes, a make flesh growe vpon you, a couer you ouer with skynne: a so geue you breth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the LORDE.

<sup>5</sup>So I prophecied, as he had comaunded me. And as I was prophecienge, there came a noyse and a greate mocion, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now who I had loked, beholde, they had synowes, and flesh grewe vpon them : and aboue they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou 13 sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophecy, and speake to the wynde: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Come (o thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, g blowe vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to life. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breth in to them, and they receaued life, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greate sorte.

Morouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye : "oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecie thou, g speake vnto Thus saieth the LORDE God: Bethem. holde, I wil open youre graues (o my people) a take you out of youre sepulcres, a bringe you in to the londe of Israel agayne. So shall ve knowe v I am the LORDE, when I open youre graues, a bringe you out of them. Mv sprete also wil I put in you, g ye shal lyue: I wil set you agayne in youre owne londe, and ve shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the LORDE came vnto me, C sayenge: Thou sonne of man, take a sticke and wryte vpon it: Vnto Iuda g to the children of Israel his companyons. Then take another sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the housholde of Israel his companyons. And than take both these together in thine honde, so shal there be one stycke therof. Now yf the childre of thy people save vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answere: Thus saieth the LORDE God: Beholde, 'I wil take the stocke of Ioseph, which is in the honde of Ephraim and of the trybes of Israel his felowes, and wil put them to the stocke of Iuda, T make them one stocke, and they shal be one in my honde. And the two stickes where vpon thou wrytest, shalt thou haue in thine honde, that they may se, and shalt says vnto them :

Thus saieth the LORDE God: beholde, I wil take awaye the childrē of Israel from amonge the Heithen, vnto whom they be gone, and wil gather them together on euery syde, and bringe them agayne in to their owne londe: yee I wil make one people of thē in ŷ londe, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shal haue but one kinge. They shall nomore be two peoples from hensforth, nether be deuyded in to two kingdomes: they shal also defyle thē selues nomore with their abhominacions, Idols and all their wickeddoinges. I wil helpe thē out of all their dwellinge places, wherin they haue synned: will so clense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

Dauid my seruaunt shalbe their kinge, a they all shal haue one shepherde only. They shal walke in my lawes, and my commaundementes shal they both kepe g fulfill. They shal dwell in the londe, that I gaue vnto Iacob my seruaunt, where as youre fathers also haue dwelt. Yee eue in the same londe shal they, their children, g their childers children dwell for euermore: and my seruaunt Dauid shal be their euerlastynge prynce. Morouer, I will make a bonde of peace with them, which shal be vnto them an euerlastinge couenaunt. 1 wil sattle the also, and multiplie them, my Sanctuary wil I set amonge the for euermore.

My dwellinge shalbe with them, yee I wil be their God, g they shalbe my people. Thus the Heithen also shal knowe, that I the LORDE am § holy maker of Israel: whe my Sanctuary shal be amonge them for euer more.

The probiij. Chapter.

ND the worde of the LORDE came a vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face towarde Gog in the londe of Magog, which is the chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal: prophecy agaynst him, and saye: <sup>d</sup> Thus saieth the LORDE God : 'O Gog thou chefe prynce of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I wil vpon the, and wil turne the aboute, and put a bytt in thy chawes: I wil bringe the forth and all thine hoost, both horse g horsmen, which be all weapened of the best fashion: a greate people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swerdes: the Perses, Moryans and with them the Lybians, which all beare shyldes and helmettes : Gomer, and all his hoostes: the house of Thogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hoostes, yee and moch people with the.

Therfore prepare the, set thy self in araye with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in the latter yeares thou shalt come in to the lode, that hath bene destroyed with the swearde, a now is replenished agayne with dyuerse people vpon the mountaynes of Israel, which haue loge lyen waist. Yee they be brought out of the nacions, g dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a stormy wether, to couer the lode, and as it were a darcke cloude: thou with all thine hoostes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

Morouer, thus saieth the LORDE God: 36 At the same tyme shal many thinges come in to thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn myschefe, and saye : I wil vp to yonder playne londe, seinge they syt at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwell all without eny walles, they have nether barres nor dores) to spoyle them, to robbe the, to lave honde vpon their so wel inhabited wildernesses: agaynst that people, y is gathered together from amonge the Heithe, which haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the myddest of the londe. Then shal Saba and Dedan and the marchauntes of Tharsis with all their Worthies, saye vnto the : Art thou come to rohbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good: and to have a greate pray?

Therfore, o thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophecie, and saye vnto Gog: Thus saieth the LORDE God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place, out of the north partes: thou and moch people with the, which ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and an innumerable sorte. Yee thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the löde. This shal come to passe in the latter dayes: I wil bringe the vp in to my londe, that the Heithen maye knowe me, when I get me honoure vpon the (o Gog) before their eyes.

Thus saieth the LORDE God: Thou art he, of whom I have spoken afore tyme, by my sermannes y prophetes of Israel, which prophecied in those dayes g yeares, that I shulde bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the londe of Israel (saieth the LORDE God) shal my indignacio go forth in my wrath. For in my gelousy and hote displeasure 'I have deuysed, that there shalbe a greate trouble in the londe of Israel at that tyme. The very fyszshes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the beestes of the felde, and all the men y are vpon the earth, shal tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shalbe turned vp side downe, the stayres of stone shal fall, and all walles shal syncke to the grounde. I wil call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, saieth the LORDE God: so that euery mans swearde shal be vpon another. With pestilèce and bloude wil I punysh him : stormy rayne and hale stones, fyre and brymstone, wil I cause to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee and vpon all that greate people that is with him. Thus wil I be magnified, honoured, and knowne amonge the Heithen : that they maye be sure, how § I am § LORDE.

The rrrir. Chapter.

¬HERFORE o thou sonne of man, |𝔄 prophecie agaynst Gog, and speake: Thus saieth the LORDE God : Beholde, o Gog: 'thou chefe prynce at Mesech and Tubal, I wil vpon the, and turne the aboute, g earie the forth, g lede y from the north partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wil smyte it out of thy left honde, and cast thine arowes out of thy right honde. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is with the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wil I geue the vnto y foules and wilde beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for eue I the LORDE have spoken it, saieth the LORDE God.

In to Magog, and amonge those that sit so 13 carelesse in the Iles: wil I sende a fyre, and they shal knowe,  $m \dot{y}~I~am$  the LORDE. I will make also the name of my holynesse to be knowne amonge my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euel spoken of enymore: but the very Heithen also shal knowe, that I am the LORDE, the holy one Beholde, it commeth, and shalbe, of Israel. fulfilled in dede, saieth the LORDE God. This is the daye, wherof I have spoken: They that dwell in § cities of Israel, shal go forth and set fyre vpon the weapens, and burne them : shyldes and speres, bowes and arowes, bylles and clubbes : seuen yeares shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall els bringe no stickes from y felde, nether haue nede to hew downe eny out of the wodde: For they

At the same tyme will I geue vnto Gog, a C place to be buried in, in Israel: eue the valley, where thorow men go from the east to the see Those that trauayle therby, shal warde. There shal Gog and all his peoabhorre it. ple be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be burienge of them, that they maye clense the lode: Yee all the people of the londe shal burie them. O it shal be a glorious daye, when I get me that honoure, saieth the LORDE God. They shal ordene men also to be deedburiers, euer goinge thorow the lode, and appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remayne vpon the felde, that the londe maye be clensed. From ende to ende shal they seke, and that vij monethes lõge. Now those that go thorow the londe, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a token by it, till the deedburiers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the cite shalbe called Hamona : Thus shall they make the londe clene. And thou sonne of man: thus saieth the Ð LORDE God: Speake vnto all the foules and euery byrde, yee and to all the wilde beastes of the felde : heape you together and come, gather you roude aboute vpo my slaughter, that I have slavne for you : euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate flesh, and drynke bloude. "Ye shal eate y flesh of the worthies, and drynke the bloude of the prynces of the londe: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be all slayne at Basan. Eate $ fat youre bely full, and drynke bloude, till ye be droncken of the slaughter, which I have slayne vnto you. Fyl you at my table, with horses a stronge horsmen : with captaynes and all me of warre, saieth the LORDE God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentiles, that all the Heithen maye se my iudgment, that I haue kepte, and my honde which I have layed vpon them: that y house of Israel maye knowe, how that I am y LORDE their God, from that daye forth. E And the Heithen shal knowe, that where as the house of Israel were led in to captinyte:

it was for their wickednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and delyuered them in to the hondes of their enemies, that they might all be slavne with the swearde. Acordinge to their vnclennesse and vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them. Therfore thus saieth $ LORDE God: Now will I bringe agayne the captyues of Iacob, and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holy names sake. All their confucion and offence that they haue done agaynst me, shal be taken awaye : and so safely shal they dwell in their londe, that no man shal make them afrayed. And when I haue brought the agayne from amonge the people, when I have gathered them together out of their enemies londes, and am praysed in them before many Heithen: then shall they knowe, that I am the LORDE their God, which suffred them to be led in to captiuyte amonge the Heithen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne londe, and not left one of them yonder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from them, but will poure out my sprete vpon the house of Israel, saieth the LORDE God.

TN the xxv yeare of oure captivite, in the g begynnynge of the yeare, the x daye of the moneth : that is the xiiij yeare, after that v cite was smytten downe: the same daye came the honde of the LORDE vpon me, and caried me forth : euen in to the londe of Israel brought he me in the visions of God: and set me downe vpō a maruelous hie mountayne, whervpon there was a buyldinge (as it had bene of a cite) towarde the north.

Thither he caried me, and beholde, there was a man, whose similitude was like brasse, which had a threde of flax in his honde, and a meterodde also. He stode in the dore, a sayde vnto me: marcke well with thine eyes, herken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hert, what so euer I shal shewe the, for to the intent that they might be shewed the, therfore art thou brought hither. And what soeuer thou seyst, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Then came he vnto the east dore, and wente vp the stares, g measured the postes of the dore : wherof euery one was a meterodde thicke. Euery chambre was a meterodde longe and brode: betwene the chambers were fyue cubites. The poste of the dore within the porche, was one mete-He measured also the porche of the rodde. ynnermer dore, which conteyned a meterodde. The measured he the entrie of the dore, that conteyned eght cubites, and his pilers two cubites : and this entrie stode inwarde.

The chambers of the dore eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: alike brode and longe. The pilers also that stode of both the sydes, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the dore: which was x cubites, a the heyth of the dore xiij cubites. The edge before the chabres was one cubite brode vpo both the sydes, a the chambres six cubites wyde of either syde. He measured y dore from the rygge of one chabre to another, whose wydenesse was xxv cubites, a one dore stode agaynst another. He made pilers also lx cubites hie, rounde aboute the courte dore. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entre of the ynnermer dore, were fiftie cubites. The chambers and their pilers within, rounde aboute vnto § dore, had syde wyndowes: So had the fore entries also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pilers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me in to the fore courte, where as were chabres a paued workes, made in § fore courte roude aboute : xxx chabres vpon one paued worcke. Now the paued worke was a loge besyde the dores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he measured & bredth from the lower dore, vnto the ynnermer courte of the out syde, which had an hundreth cubites vpon the east g the north parte. And the dore in the vttemost courte towarde the north, measured he after the legth and bredth: his thre chambres also on either syde, with his pilers a fore entries: which had even the measure of the first dore. His heyth was fiftie cubites, the bredth xxv cubites : his wyndowes a porches with his date trees, had even like measure as the dore towarde the east: there were vij steppes to go vp vpō,  $\mathfrak{g}$  their porche before them. Now  $\mathfrak{F}$  dore of the ynnermer courte stode straight ouer agaynst the dore, that was towarde  $\mathfrak{F}$ north east. From one dore to another, he measured an C cubites.

After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a dore towarde y south : whose pilers and porches he measured, these had the fyrst measure, g with their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, The heyth was 1 like the first wyndowes. cubites, y bredth xxv, with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before him, with his pilers and date trees on either syde. And the dore of the ynnermer courte stode towarde the south, g he measured from one dore to another an C cubites. So he brought me in 3 to ŷ ynnermer courte, thorow the dore of the south syde: which he measured, g it had the In like maner, his measure a fore sayde. chambres, pilers and fore entries, had euen the fore sayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde aboute, wyndowes of l cubites hye, g xxv cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were xxv cubites longe, and v cubites brode: and his porch reached vnto v vttemost courte : vpon his pilers there were date trees, and viij steppes to go vp vpon.

He brought me also in to the ynmost courte vpon the east syde, and measured the dore, acordinge to y measure afore sayde. His chābers, pilers and porches had euen the same measure, as the first had: a with his porches he had wyndowes roude aboute. The heith was I cubites, § bredth xxv cubites: Hisporches reached vnto the vttemost courte: his pilers also had date trees on either syde, and viij And he brought me E steppes to go vp vpon. to the north dore, and measured it, which also had the foresayde measure. His chābres, pilers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute : whose heyth was I cubites, and the bredth xxv. His pilers stode towarde the vttemost courte, and vpon them both were date trees, and viij steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose intrauce was at the dore pilers, and there the burntoffringes were waszshed.

In the dore porche, there stode on ether syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to slaye the brentoffringes, synneoffringes and trespaceoffringes thervpon. And on the out syde Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntoffringes, of a cubite and a half longe and brode, and one cubite hie : whervpon were layed & vessels and ornamentes, which were vsed to, the burnt g slayne offeringes, when they were slaughted. And within there were hokes foure fyngers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hange flesh vpon, g vpon the tables was layed the offringe flesh. On the outsyde of the ynnermer dore were the syngers chambers in the inwarde courte besyde § north dore ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, besyde the east dore north warde.

And he sayde vnto me : " This chambre on F the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habitacion: and this towarde the north, is the prestes that wayte vpon the aulter: which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruyce before the LORDE in steade of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore courte, which had in length an C cubites, and as moch in bredth by the foure corners. Now the aulter stode before the house: And he brought me to the fore entre of the house, and measured the walles by the entre dore: which were fyue cubites longe on ether syde. The thicknesse also of the dore on ether syde, was thre cubites. The legth of the porche was xx cubites, the bredth xj. cubites, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pilers, on either syde one.

A FTER this he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes: which were of both the sydes vj. cubites thicke, acordinge to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of  $\hat{y}$  dore was x. cubites,  $\mathfrak{g}$  the walles of the dore on either syde fyue cubites. He measured the length therof, which conteyned xl. cubites, and the bredth xx. Thē wente he in, and measured the dore postes, which were two cubites thicke : but the dore it self was size cubites, and the bredth of the dore was vij. cubites. He measured the length and bredth therof, which were euery one xx. cubites, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was sixe cubites. The chambres v stode rounde aboute v house, were euery one foure cubites wyde, and one stode harde vpõ another, wherof there were xxxiij. And there stode postes beneth by the walles rounde aboute the house, to beare the vp: but in $ wall of y house they were not fastened : The 13 syde chambres were the hyer the wyder, and had steppes thorow them rounde aboute § house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest men might go to the hyest a mydde chabers. I sawe also that the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundacion of the syde chambres was a meterodde (that is sixe cubites) brode. The thicknesse of the syde wall without, conteyned fyue cubites, a so dyd ŷ outwall of the chābers in ŷ house.

Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes xx. cubites rounde aboute ŷ house. The chambre dores stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one dore was towarde the north, § other towarde the south: and the thicknesse of the outwall was v cubites rounde aboute. Now the buyldinge that was separated towarde the west, was lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the buyldinge was v cubites thicke roude aboute, and the length foure score cubites and So he measured the house which was an a ten. C. cubites longe, and the separated buyldinge with the wall were an C. cubites loge also. The wydnesse before the house and of it y was separated towarde the east, was an C. cubites.

And he measured the length of the buyldinge before and behinde with the chabers vpon both the sydes : and it conteyned an C. cubites. The ynnermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, ŷ syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pilers rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: a thus was it aboue the dore, vnto the ynmost house, and without also: Yee the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes. There were Cherubins and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euer betwixte two Cherubins: One Cherub had two faces, ŷ face of a man lokinge asyde towarde the date tre, and a lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made roude ma aboute in all the house: Yee the Cherubins and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dore, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bypostes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashion of the Sanctuary was, euen as it appeared vnto me afore in y vision. The table was of wodde, thre cubites hie and two cubites longe: his corners, the length and the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: This is the table, that shal stonde before the LORDE. The temple and the holiest of all had ether of them two dores, and euery dore had two litle wickettes which were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a greate thicke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. Vpo both the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauvnge beames and balkes, like as the house had.

The rlij. Chapter.

A THEN caried he me out in to the fore courte towarde the north, a brought me in to the chambre that stode ouer agaynst the backebuyldinge northwarde, which had the length of an C. cubites, whose dore turned towarde the north. The wydenesse conteyned L. cubites, ouer agaynst the xx. cubites of the ynnermer courte, a gaynst the paued worke that was in the fore courte. Besyde all these thre there stode pilers, one ouer against another: And before this chabre there was a walkinge place of x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyest chambres were allwaye narower then the lowest and myddelmost of y buildinge : for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another, not hauynge pilers like the fore courte: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

33 The wall without that stode by  $\hat{y}$  chambres towarde the vttemost courte vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was L. cubites loge: for the legth of  $\hat{y}$  vttemost chambers in the fore courte was L. cubites also: but the length theref before the temple was an C. cubites. These chambres had vnder them an intraunce of the east syde, wherby a man might go in to them out of the fore courte, thorow the thicke wall of the fore courte towarde the east, right ouer agaynst the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldinge vpō this syde there were chābers also, which had a waye vnto them, like as the chambers on the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashion and dores were all of the same maner. Yee euen like as the other chamber dores were, so were those also of the south syde. And before the wave of towarde the syngers steppes on the east syde, there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambers towarde the north a the south, which stode before the backe buyldinge: those be holy habitacions, wherin the prestes that do seruyce before the LORDE, must eate the most holy offringes : and there must they laye the most holy offringes : meat offringes, synneoffringes a trespaceoffringes, for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shal not go out in to the fore courte: but (seynge they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministracion, and put on other garmentes, when they haue eny thinge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the ynnermer house, he brought me forth thorow the east porte, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measured the east syde with  $\hat{y}$ meterodde, which rounde aboute conteyned v. C. meteroddes. And the north syde measured he, which conteyned rounde aboute euen so moch. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned ether of them v. C. meteroddes. So he measured all  $\hat{y}$  foure sydes where there wente a walle rounde aboute v. C. meteroddes longe, and as brode also, which separated the holy from the vnholy.

At the porche shal he come in, and there shal he go out agayne. "Then brought he me to the dore, vpon the north syde of the house. And as I loked aboute me, beholde, the glory of the LORDE fylled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the LORDE spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, fasten this to thine herte, beholde, and take diliget hede to all that I wil saye vnto the, concernynge all the ordinaunces of the LORDE and all his lawes: pondre well with thine herte the commynge in of the house and the goinge forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obstinate housholde of Israel: Thus saieth the LORDE God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done ynough with all youre abhominacios, seynge that ye haue brought in to my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncircumcised hertes a flesh, where thorow my Sactuary is defiled, whe ye offre my bred, fat, g bloude.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuary, euen after youre owne mynde. Therfore thus saieth y LORDE God: Of all the straungers that dwell amoge the childrē of Israel, no straunger (whose herte g flesh is not circumcised) shal come within my Sanctuary: No ner the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue disceaued the people of Israel with erroures, goinge after their Idols: therfore shal thei beare their owne wickednes. Shulde they be set and ordened to ministre, vnder the dores of the house of my Sanctuary? and to do seruyce in the house : to slaye burntoffringes and sacrifices for y people: to stode before them, and to serve them : seynge the servyce that they do them, is before their Idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow wickednesse?

The rlb. Chapter.

W HEN ye deuyde the lode by the lott, ye shal put asyde one parte for the LORDE, *to be holy from other londes: namely, xxv M meteroddes longe, and x M brode. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde aboute. Of this parte there shal belonge vnto the Sanctuary v C meteroddes in all the foure corners, and I cubites wyde rounde aboute to the suburbes. And from this measure, namely of xxv M metteroddes longe, and x M brode, thou shalt measure, wherin the Sanctuary and the holiest of all maye stonde.

The resydue of that holy grounde shall be the prestes, which do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the LORDE, and go in before the LORDE to serue him, that they may haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary, it shal stonde for itself: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shalbe geuen xx habitacions, of the xxv M legth  $\mathfrak{g}$  x M bredth: ye shal geue also vnto the cite a possessio of v M meteroddes brode,  $\mathfrak{g}$  xxv M longe, besyde the parte of  $\mathfrak{F}$ Sanctuary: that shal be for the whole house of Israel. Vpon both the sydes of the Sanctuarys parte,  $\mathfrak{g}$  by the cite, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce, what so euer lyeth ouer agaynst the cite, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde: which shalbe as longe as one parte, fro  $\mathfrak{F}$  west vnto  $\mathfrak{F}$  east.

This shalbe his owne lode in Israel, that my princes be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And soch as remayneth yet ouer in the londe, shalbe geuen to the house of Israel acordinge to their trybes. Thus saieth the LORDE God: O ye princes, ye haue now oppressed and destroyed ynough: now leaue of, handle now acordinge to the thinge, that is equall and laufull : and thrust out my people nomore, sayeth § LORDE God. Ye shal haue a true weight, a true Epha, c a true Bat.

<sup>d</sup> The Epha g the Bat shalbe a like. One Bat shal coteyne § teth parte of an Homer, and so shal one Epha do: their measure shal be after § Homer. One Sycle maketh xx. Geras. 'So xx. Sycles, and xxv. g xv. Sycles make a pounde. This is the Heaue offrynge, that ye shal geue to be heaued: namely, the xvj. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of wheat: and the xvj. parte of an Epha, out of an Homer of barlie. The oyle shal be measured with the Bat: euen the x. parte of one Bat out of a Cor.

Ten Battes make one Homer: for one Homer maketh ten Battes. And one labe from two hundreth shepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to recocile them, sayeth the LORDE God. All the people of the londe shal geue this heaue offrynge with a fre wil. Agayne, it shal be the prynces parte to offre burntoffrynges, meatoffrynges and drynkoffrynges vnto the LORDE, in the holy dayes, new Moones, Sabbathes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synoffrynge, meatofferynge, brentofferynge a healthoffringe shal he geue, to recocile the house of Israel. Thus sayeth 🖞 LORDE God : The first daye 🖉 of the first moneth thou shalt take a yoge bullocke without blemysh, and clense the Sanctuary.

So the prest shal take of the bloude of y synoffrynge, and sprenkle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the dorepostes of the ynnermer courte. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth daye of y moneth (for soch as haue synned of ignoraunce, or beynge disceaued) to reconcile the house withall. Vpon y xiiij. daye of the first moneth ye shal kepe Easter. / Seuē dayes shal the feast contynue, wherin there shal no sower ner leuēded bred be eatē.

Vpon the same daye shal  $\hat{y}$  prynce geue for himself and all the people of the londe, a bullocke for a synoffringe. And in the feast of the seuen dayes he shal offre euery daye a bullocke g a ram, that are with out blemysh, for a burntoffrynge vnto the LORDE: g an he goate daylie for a synoffrynge. HUS sayeth the LORDE God: of the ynnermer courte towarde the east, shall be shut the vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the new Moone, it shalbe opened. Then shal the prynce come vnder the dore porche, a stonde still without by the dore cheke. So y prestes shall offre vp his burnt a healthoffrynges. And he shal worshipe at the dore poste, and go his waye forth agayne: but \$ dore shal nomore be shut till the euenynge.

On the same maner shal the people of the londe also do their worshipe before the LORDE, without this dore vpon the Sabbathes and new Moones. This is now the burntoffrynge, that the prynce shall bringe vnto the LORDE vpon the Sabbath: sixe lambes without blemysh, g a ram without blemysh, and an Epha for a meatoffringe, with y ram. As for the lambes, he maye geue as many meatoffrynges to them, as he wil, a an Hin of oyle to an Epha. In the daye of the new moneth, it shalbe a yonge bullocke with out blemysh, sixe lambes a a ram also without blemysh. With the bullocke he shal geue an Epha, and with the ram an Epha also for a meatofferinge : but to y lambes, what he maye come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. When the prynce cometh, he shall go under the dore porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the londe come before the LORDE in the hye solempne feast, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshipe, shal go out agayne at the south dore. And they that come in at the south dore, shal go forth agayne at ŷ north dore. There shal none go out at the dore where he came in, but shal go forth right ouer on the other syde, and the prynceshall go in and out amonge them.

Vpon the solempne and hie feaste dayes, this shalbe the meatofferynge : An Epha to a bullock, and an Epha to a ram: and to the lambes, as many as he wil, but euer an Hin of oyle to an Epha. Now when the prynce yngeth a burntofferynge or an healthofferynge th a fre wil vnto the LORDE, the east dore albe opened vnto him, y he maye do with burnt a healthofferynges, as he doth vpo e Sabbath: and when he goeth forth, the [cre shal be shut after him agayne. He shal ylie brynge vnto the LORDE a lambe of a are olde without blemish for a burntofferynge : this shall he do euery mornynge. And for a meatofferynge he shal geue the sixte parte of an Epha, a the thirde parte of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euery mornynge. Yee this shalbe a daylie meatofferinge vnto the LORDE, for an euerlastinge ordinaunce: g thus shal the lambe, the meatofferynge and oyle be geuen euery mornynge, for a dailie burntofferinge.

Morouer, thus sayeth the LORDE God: Yf the prynce geue a gifte vnto eny of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heretage perpetuall, y he maye possesse it. But yf he wil geue one of his seruauntes some of his heretage, "it shall be his to the fre yeare, and the to returne agayne vnto y prynce: 'for his heretage shalbe his sonnes only. The prynce also shal take none of the peoples enheritaunce, ner put the from their possession : but to his owne sonnes shal he geue his possession, that my people be not scatred abrode, but that euery man maye haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the intraunce at the syde of the dore to y habitacion of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to y prestes and stode towarde the north, a beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the prestes shall dight the trespace and synofferynges, a bake y meatofferynges: that they nede not beare the in to the outwarde courte, and so to vnhalowe So he brought me in to the the people. vttemost courte, rounde aboute all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of § fore courte, there was yet a litle courte. Yee in all the foure corners of the courte, there was made a litle courte of xl. cubites longe, and xxx. cubites brode: these foure litle courtes were of one like measure, a there went a rygge wall rounde aboute them all foure, vnder the which there were harthes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vuto me : This is the kechin, where the ministers of the house shal dight the slayne offerynges of the people.

FTER this he brought me agayne before я the dore of the house: g beholde, there guszshed out waters from vnder y postes of the house eastwarde (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpo the right syde of the house, which lyeth to the aulter south warde. The caried he me out to the north dore, and brought me forth there rounde aboute by the vttemost dore, y turneth eastwarde. Beholde, "there came forth the water vpon the right syde. Now whan the man y had the meterodde in his honde wente out vnto the east dore, he measured a M. cubites, g the he brought me thorow y water, eue to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, a brought me thorow y water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thorow the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it soch a ryuer, y I might not wade thorow it: The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to have swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, o thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

Now when I came there, there stode many trees vpon ether syde of the ryuer backe. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out towarde the east, and runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth in to the see: and from the see it runneth out,  $\alpha$ maketh the waters whole. Yee all that live and moue, where vnto this ryuer commeth, shal recouer. And where this water cometh, there shalbe many fysh. For all that commeth to this water, shall be lusty and whole. By this river shal the fyszshers stonde from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, a there sprede out their nettes: for there shalbe greate heapes of fysh, like as in the mayne see. As for his claye and pyttes, they shal not be whole, for why, it shalbe occupide for salt.

C By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, nether shal their frute perish: <sup>b</sup> but euer be rype at their monethes, for their water runneth out of the Sanctuary. His frute is good to eate, and his leaf profitable for medycine. Thus sayeth the LORDE God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shall deuyde the londe vnto the xij. trybes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: ' of the which lode I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shulde fall to youre enheritaunce.

This is the border of the londe vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to Zadada: namely, Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Tichon, that lieth vpon the coastes of Hauerā. Thus the borders frō the see forth, shalbe Hazar Euan, the border of Damascus the north, and the borders of Hemath: that is the north parte.

The east syde shal ye measure from Haueran and Damascus, from Galead and the londe of Israel by Iordane and so forth, from the see coast, that lieth eastwarde : and this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of strife vnto Cades, "the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greate see  $\mathbf{B}$  from the borders therof, till a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This londe shal ye parte amonge you, acordinge to the trybes of Israel, and deuyde it to be an heretage for you, and for the straugers that dwel amoge you, and begette children.

<sup>e</sup> For ye shal take them amonge the childrē of Israell, like as though they were of youre owne housholde and countre, and they shal haue heretage with you amonge the childrē of Israel.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shal ye geue him his heretage, saieth the LORDE God.

Then was the mystery shewed vnto Daniel in a visiō by nyght. And Daniel praysed 🕏 God of heaue, Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God might be praysed for euer and euer, for wiszdome and strength are his owne: "he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wyszdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstödinge to those that vnderstöde: he openeth the depe secretes : he knoweth $ thynge that lyeth in darcknesse, for the light dwelleth with him." I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God off my fathers) that thou hast lent me wyszdome and strength, g hast shewed me the thinge, that we desyred off the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Vpon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, 玬 whom the kinge had ordened to destroye the wyse at Babilon: he wente vnto him, and sayde : destroye not soch as are wyse in Babilon, but bringe me in vnto the kynge, and I shal shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kynge in all the haist, and sayde vnto him : I haue founde a man amonge the presoners off Iuda, y shal shewe the kinge the interpretacion. Thē answered the kynge, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he, y cast shewe me y dreame, which I haue sene, a the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayde : As for this secrete, for the which the kinge maketh inquisicion : it is nether the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer ner the deuell coniurer, that can certifie the kynge off it : Only God in heauē cā open secretes, 'and he it is, that sheweth the kinge Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

Thy dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thyne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kynge, thou didest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come herafter: So he that is the opener off mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for Sydrac, Misac and Abdenago answered the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to cosente vnto y in this matter, for why: "oure God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can right wel delyuer vs out off thy hondes. And though he wil not, yet shalt thou knowe (o kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerēce to the ymage, D which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full off indignacion, so that y countenaunce of his face chaunged vpo Sidrac, Misac & Abdenago. Therfore he charched and commaunded, that the ouen shulde be made seuen tymes hoter, then it was wote to be: and spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hooste, for to bynde Sidrac, Misac and Abdenago, and to cast them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, shues with their other garmentes,  $\bar{a}d$ cast in to the hote burnynge ouen: for the kinges commaundement was so strate, and the ouen was exceadynge hote. # Chap. iiij.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules off the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vision vpon my bed: g beholde, a watcher (euē an holy angel) came downe from heauen, and cryed mightely, sayenge: Hew downe the tre, breake off his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his frute abrode: that all the beestes maye get them awaye from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of his rote still in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dew of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

That mans herte off his shall be taken from him, and a beastes herte shall be geuen him, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him.

This erande of the watcher, is a comaundemet grounded and sought out in the councel off him, that is most holy: to lerne men for to vnderstonde, that the hyest hath power ouer the kyngdomes off men, ad geueth them, to whom it liketh him, and bryngeth the very outcastes off men ouer them. This is the dreame, y I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene.

Therfore o Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so moch as all the wyse men off my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for  $\hat{y}$ sprete of the holy Goddes is in the.

C Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre ad his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayde : O Balthasar, let nether the dreame ner the interpretacion theroff feare the. Balthasar answered, sayenge: O my lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretacion to thyne aduersaries. As for the tre that thou sawest which was so greate a mightie, whose heyth reached vnto the heaven, and his bredth in to all the worlde : whose leaves were fayre, ad the frute moch: under the which the beastes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt:

Euen thou (o kynge) art the tre, greate g ströge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, g reacheth vnto the heauen, so doth thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge sawe a watcher euen an holy angel, that came downe from heauen, and sayde : hew downe the tre, and destroye it : yet leaue the grounde of the rote in the earth, and bynde him vpon the playne felde with cheynes off yron and stele: He shall be wet with the dew off heaurn, and his parte shalbe with the beestes of the felde, till seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him : This (o kynge) is ŷ interpretaciō, yee it is the very deuyce of him, ŷ is hyest of all, g it toucheth my lorde the kynge.

Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwellinge shalbe with the beestes of the felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen: yee seuen yeares shall come and go vpon the, till thou knowe, that the hyest hath power 🗃 vpon the kyngdomes of men, "g geueth them, to whom he lyst. Morouer, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tre shulde be left still in the grounde: it betokeneth, y thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto y, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore (o kinge) be contet with my councel, that thou mayest lowse thy synnes with rightuousnesse, ad thyne offences with mercy to poore people : for soch thinges shall prolonge thy peace. All these thynges touch the kynge Nabuchodonosor.

So after xij. monethes, the kynge walked vp and downe in the paalace off the kyngdome off Babilon, and sayde: This is the greate cite off Babilo, which I myself (with my power g strength) have made a kynges courte, for the honoure off my magesty. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voyce from heauc, sayenge: O kinge Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoke: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellinge shalbe with the beestes off the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse like as an oxe, till seuen yeares be come and gone ouer the : euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes off men, and that he maye geue them, vnto whom it pleaseth hun.

The very same houre was this matter fulfylled vpo Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out off mēs cōpany, g ate grasse like an oxe. His body was wet with the dew of heauen, till his hayres were as greate as Aegles fethers, and his nales like byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lift vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstondinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euermore, whose power endureth allwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacion to another: in comparyson off whom, all they that dwell vpon the earth, "are to be reputed as nothinge.

He handleth acordinge to his will, amoge $ powers of heauen 'a amonge the inhabitours of the earth: and there is none that maye resiste his honde, or saye: 'what doest thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstondynge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kingdome, to my dignite, and to myne owne shappe agayne. My great estates and prynces sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshipe.

Thē dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loaue, magnifie and prayse the kynge of heauen: for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that go on proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

The b. Chapter.

BALTHASAR the kynge made a greate bancket to his thousande lordes: withall these thousande he made greate cheare, and when he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to brynge him § golden and syluer vessel, which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem:<sup>4</sup> that the kynge and his lordes (with his quene and concubynes) might drike therout.

So they brought the golden vessel, that was take out of the temple of the LORDES house at Ierusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubines dronke out of them. They dronke wyne, and praysed their Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans honde writynge, right ouer agaynst the candelsticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: and the kynge sawe the palme of  $\mathring{y}$  honde  $\mathring{y}$  wrote. 'Then chaunged the kynge his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him: so that the ioyntes off his body shoke, and his knees smote one agaynst the other. Wherfore the kynge cryed mightely, 'that they shulde brynge him the charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuels. The kynge spake also to the wyse men of Babilon, and sayde: Who so can rede this wrytynge, and shewe me the playne meanynge theroff: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne off golde aboute his necke, and rule the thirde parte off my kyngdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men: but they coude nether rede the wrytinge, ner shewe the kynge what it signified. The was the kynge sore afrayed, in so moch, that his coloure chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason off this matter, v had happened to the kynge g his lordes, the quene went vp herself in to the bancket house, and spake vnto the kynge, sayenge : O kynge, God saue thy life for euer: Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why: there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sprete off the holy goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstondinge ad wysdome like the goddes. Yee the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the soythsayers, charmers, Caldees and deuel conjurers: because that soch an  $| \mathbf{C} |$ abundaunt sprete, knowlege a wisdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him : yee euen in Daniel, whom the kynge named Balthasar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel brought before the kinge. So the kynge spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Art thou that Daniel, one off the presoners of Iuda, whom my father the kynge brought out of Iewry? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the sprete of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstödinge, and that there hath bene greate wisdome founde in the. Now haue there bene brought me, wise and connynge charmers, to rede this wrytynge, and to shewe me the meanynge theroff: But they coude not tell me, what this matter signified. Then herde I saye, y thou canst expounde darcke thinges, and declare harde doutes.

Chap. bíj.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge his peticion, and prayenge vnto his God. So they came to the kynge, and spake before him concernynge his commaundement, sayenge: O kynge, hast thou not subscribed the statute, that within xxx. dayes who so requyreth his peticion off eny god or man, but only of thyself, o kynge: he shalbe cast in to the denne of the Lyons? The kynge answered, ād sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of § Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kynge: Daniel one of the presoners of Iuda (O kynge) regardeth nether the ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticion thre tymes a daye. When the kynge herde these wordes, he was sore greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to delyuer him, and put off the matter, vnto the Sonne wēte downe, to the intent that he might saue him.

These men perceauynge the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (o kynge) that the lawe off the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement and statute which the kynge maketh, maye not be altered. "Then the kynge bad them brynge Daniel, and they cast him in to the Lyons denne.

The kynge also spake vnto Daniel, ād sayde: Thy God, whom thou allwaye seruest, euen he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layed vpon the hole of the denne: this the kynge sealed with his owne rynge, and with ŷ signet of his prynces: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kynge wente in to his palace, and kepte him sober all night, so that there was no table spred before him, nether coude he take eny slepe. But be tymes in the mornynge at the breake off the daye, the kynge arose, and wente in all haist vnto the denne off the Lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto  $\mathring{y}$  dēne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: Yee  $\mathring{y}$  kīge spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt off the lyuynge God, Is not thy God (whom thou allwaye seruest) able to delyuer the from the lyons? Then was the kynge exceadinge glad,  $\bar{a}d$ commaunded to take Daniel out off the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the dene, and no maner of hurte was founde vpō him. For he put his trust in his God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, the kīge commaunded to bringe them, and to cast them in the lyons denne: 'them, their children and their wyues. So the lyons had the mastry of them, and brake all their bones a sonder, or euer they came at the grounde.

The biij. Chapter.

A IN the thirde years off the raigne of kinge Balthasar, there apeared a visiō vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the first. "I sawe in a vision, (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chefe cite, which lyeth in the londe off Elam) and in § vision, me thought I was by the ryuer off Vlai.

Then I loked vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and these hornes were hye, but one was hyer then another, and the hyest came vp last. I sawe that this ramme puszhed with his hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the south: so that no beestes might stonde before him, ner defende them from his power: but he dyd as him listed, and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an hegoate from the west, ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a maruelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme, that had the two hornes (whom I had sene afore by the ryuer syde) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. I sawe him drawe nye vnto the ramme, beynge very fearce vpon him : yee he gaue him soch a stroke, that he brake his two hornes :

Nether had the ramme so moch strength as to stonde before him: but he kest him downe, trodde him vnder his fete: and no man was able to delyuer the ramme out of his power.

The goate waxed exceadinge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his greate horne was broken also. Then grewe there other foure soch like in the steade, towarde the foure wyndes off the heauen. "Yee out of one of the leest off these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous greate: towarde the south, towarde the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt londe. It grewe vp to the hoost off heauen, wherof it dyd cast some downe to the grounde, and off the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yee it grewe vp vnto the prynce off the hoost, from whom the daylie offeringe was taken, and the place off his Sanctuary casten downe. And a certayne season was geuen vnto it, agaynst the daylie offeringe (because of wickednesse) that it might cast downe the verite to the grounde, and so to prospere in all thinges, that it went aboute. Vpon this I herde one off the sayntes speakynge, which saynte sayde vnto one that axed this question :

How longe shall this vision off the daylie sacrifice and of the waistinge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be troden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge g the morninge, euen two thousande and thre hūdreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuary be clensed agayne.

Now when I Daniel had sene this vision,  $\mathbb{C}$ and sought for the vnderstondinge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer off Vlai, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderstonde the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his cominge, and fell downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marcke well, for in the last tyme shall this vision be fulfylled. Now as he was speakynge vnto me, I waxed faynte, so that I suncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayne, sayenge: Beholde, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shal be fulfilled.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge off the Medes ād Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Greke londe: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the pryncipall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stonde vp foure kyngdomes, but not so mightie as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growinge) there shall aryse a kynge off an vnshamefast face, which shall be wyse in darcke speakinges.

He shalbe mightie and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute, shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorow his craftynes, falsede shall prospere in his honde, his herte shall be proude, and many one shall he put to death in his welthynesse. He shal stonde vp agaynst the prynce off prynces, but he shalbe destroyed

Vpon this was I Daniel very faynte, so that I laye sicke certayne dayes: but whan I rose vp, I wente aboute the kynges busynesse, and marueled at the vision, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

TN the thirde yeare of kinge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar) a matter, yee a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it.

He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the vision was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bred: as for flesh and wyne, there came none within Vpon the xxiiij. daye of the first moneth, I was by the greate floude, called Tigris: I lift vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnynge, "whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Araby: his body was like the Chrisolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was like lightenynge, his eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes and fete were like fayre glisteringe metall, but the voyce of his wordes was like y voyce of a multitude.

I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled 13 awaye, and hyd them selues. I was left there my self alone, and sawe this greate vision, so longe til there remayned nomore strength within me: Yee I lost my coloure clene, I waisted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes: a as soone as I herde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblinge. ND in the first years of Darius of Me-A dia, I stode by him, to conforte him, a to strength him, and now wil I shewe the the treuth. Beholde, there shal stonde vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but § fourth shal be farre richer then they all. And when he is in the chefest power of his riches, he shal prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekelonde. Then shal there arise yet a mightie kinge, that shal rule with greate dominion, and do what him list. 'And as soone as his kingdome commeth vp, it shalbe destroyed, a deuyded towarde y foure wyndes of the heauen. They y come after him, shall not have soch power a dominion as he: but his kingdome shalbe scatred, yee euen amonge other the those. And the kynge of y south shalbe mightier, then his other prynces. Agaynst him there shal one make himself stroge, a shal rule his dominio with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shalbe ioyned together,  $\mathfrak{q}$  the kynges doughter of the south shall come to the kynge of the north, for to make frèdshipe, but she shal not optayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure thorow his might: but she,  $\mathfrak{q}$  soch as brought her (yee  $\mathfrak{q}$  he  $\mathfrak{f}$  begat her,  $\mathfrak{q}$  conforted her for his tyme) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of  $\mathfrak{f}$  braunches of hir rote, there shal one stonde vp in his steade: which with power of armes shal go thorow the kynges londe of the north,  $\mathfrak{q}$  handle him acordinge to his strength. As for their Idols  $\mathfrak{q}$  prynces, with their costly Iewels of golde  $\mathfrak{g}$  syluer, he shal cary them awaye captyues in to Egipte, and he shal preuayle agaynst the kynge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to  $\mathfrak{F}$  kynges realme of  $\mathfrak{F}$  south, he shal be fayne to turne agayne in to his owne londe. Wherfore his sonnes shalbe displeased, and shal gather together a mightie greate hoost of people: and one of them shal come, and go thorow like a waterfloude: then shal he returne, and go forth with defyenge and boostinge vnto his owne londe.

The the kinge of  $\oint$  south shalbe angrie, and shal come forth to fight agaynst the kinge of the north: Yee he shall bringe a greate multitude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geue in to his honde: these shal he cary awaye with greate pryde, for so moch as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shall not preuayle. At the same tyme there shall many stonde  $\mathbf{C}$ vp agaynst the kinge of the south, so that \$ wicked children of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to fulfill the vision) and then fall. So the kinge of the north shall come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fensed cities: And the power of the of  $\psi$  south shal not be. able to abyde him, a the best men of the people shall not be so stronge, as to resist him. 8 TEARE this, o ye prestes: take hede, o thou housholde of Israel: geue eare, o thou kingly house: for this punyshment wil come vpon you, that are become a snare vnto Myspa, and a spred net vnto the mount of Thabor: They kyll sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: "therfore wil I punysh them all. I knowe Ephraim well ynough, a Israel is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, and Israel is defyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they have an whorish herte, so y they can not knowe the LORDE.

'But the pryde of Israel wil be rewarded him in his face, yee both Israel and Ephraim shal fall for their wickednesse, and Iuda with them also. 'They shall come with their shepe a bullockes to seke y LORDE, but they shal not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the LORDE, they have refused him, and brought vp bastarde children: a moneth therfore shall demoure them with their porcions.

And Ionas wente to, and entred in to y cite: euen a dayes iourney, and cried, sayenge : There are yet xl. dayes, and then shal Niniue be ouerthrowen. <sup>g</sup> And the people of Niniue beleued God, and proclamed fastinge, and arayed them selues in sack cloth, as well the greate as the small of them. And the tydinges came vnto y kinge of Niniue, which arose out off his seate, and dyd his apparell off, and put on sack cloth, and sate him downe in asshes.

And it was cried and commaunded in 33 Niniue, by the auctorite of the kige and his lordes, sayenge : 4 se that nether man or beest, oxe or shepe taist ought at all: and that they nether fede ner drincke water: but put on sack cloth both man and beest, and crye mightely vnto God: yee se that euery man turne fro his euell waye, ' and from the wickednesse, y he hath in honde.

WHERFORE Ionas was sore discontet, A and angrie. And he prayed vnto the LORDE, and sayde : O LORDE, was not this my sayenge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre? therfore I haisted rather to fle vnto Tharsis, for I knowe well ynough that thou art a mercifull God, full of compassion, loge sufferinge, and of greate kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shuldest take punyshment. And now o LORDE, take my life fro me (I beseke the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the LORDE: art thou so angrie? and Ionas gat him out of the cite, and sat downe on y east syde therof: and there made him a bothe, and sat vnder it in the shadow, till he might se, what shulde chaunce vnto the cite.

And the LORDE God prepared a wylde vyne, which sprange vp ouer Ionas, that he

The first Chapter.

A THIS is the worde of the LORDE, that came vnto Micheas <sup>a</sup> the Morastite, in the dayes of Ioathan, Achas and Ezechias kīges of Iuda: which was shewed him vpon Samaria and Ierusalem.

<sup>6</sup> Heare all ye people, marcke this well o earth, and all that therin is: Yee the LORDE God himself be witnesse amonge you, euen  $\hat{y}$ LORDE from his holy temple. For why? beholde, the LORDE shal go out of his place, g come downe, and treade vpon the hie thinges of the earth. The moūtaynes shall consume vnder him, 'g the valleys shal cleue asunder: like as wax cosumeth at the fyre, g as  $\hat{y}$  waters runne downwarde. And all this shal be for the wickednesse of Iacob, and the synnes of the house of Israel

But what is the wickednesse of Iacob? Is 36 not Samaria? "Which are the hye places of Iuda? Is not Ierusalē? Therfore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde, to laye aboute the vynyarde: hir stones shal I cast in to the valley, a discouer hir foudacios. All hir ymages shalbe broke downe g all hir wynnynges shal be brent in the fyre: yee all hir Idols will I destroye : for why, they are gathered out of the hyre of an whore, 'g in to an whores hyre shal they be turned agayne. Wherfore I wil mourne g make lamentacion, bare 🛯 naked will I go: I must mourne like 🕏 dragos, a take sorow as y Estriches : for their would is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Iuda, g hath touched y porte of my people at Ierusalē allredy. Wepe not, <sup>1</sup> lest they at Geth perceaue it.

Thou at Betaphra, welter thy self in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost nonnore for very sorowe: a why? hir neghboure shall take from her what she hath. The rebellious cite hopeth, that it shal not be so cuell : but for all that, the plage shal come from the LORDE, euen in to the porte of lerusalem. <sup>s</sup> The greate noyse off the charettes shall feare them, that dwell at Luchis, which is an occasion of y synne of ydoughter of Sion, for in the came vp the wickednesses of Israel. Yee she sent hir coursers in to the londe of Geth.

Thus they oppresse a mā for his house,  $\mathfrak{g}$ euery man for his heretage. Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, agaynst this housholde haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke youre neckes: Ye shal nomore go so proudly, for it will be a perlous tyme. In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shal be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate, the porcion off my people is translated. Whan wil he parte vnto vs the Ionde, that he hath taken from vs?

Neuerthelesse there shalbe no man to deuyde the thy porcion, in the congregacion off the LORDE. *Tush, holde youre tunge (saye they) It shall not fall ypon this people, we shall not come so to confucion, sayeth the house off Iacob. Is the sprete off the LORDE so clene awaye? or is he so mynded? Treuth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto them that lyue right: but my people doth the contrary, therfore must I take parte agaynst them: for they take awaye both cote and cloke from the symple.

Ye haue turned youre selues to fight, the women off my people haue ye shot out fro their good houses, and taken awaye my excellent giftes from their children. Vp, get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because off their Idolatry they are corrupte, and shall myserably perish. Yff I were a fleshly felowe, and a preacher of lyes and tolde them that they might syt bebbinge and bollynge, and be droncken: O that were a prophet for this people.

A BEHOLDE, vpon the mountaynes come tydinges, g preacheth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holy dayes, perfourme thy promyses: for Belial shal come nomore in the, he is vtterly roted out.

The scaterer shal come vp agaynst the,  $\mathfrak{g}$ laye sege to the castell. Loke thou wel to the stretes, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the LORDE shal restore agayne the glory of Iacob, like as  $\mathfrak{\hat{y}}$ glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them downe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  marred the wyne braunches. The shylde of his giauntes glistereth, his men of warre are clothed in purple. His charettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forwarde, his archers are wel deckte  $\mathfrak{g}$  trimmed. The charettes rolle vpon the stretes,  $\mathfrak{g}$  welter in the hye wayes. They are to loke vpon like cressettes of fyre, and go swyftly, as the lightenynge.

When he doth but warne his giauntes, they fall in their araye, a haistely they clymme vp the walles: yee the engyns of the warre are prepared all ready. The water portes shal be opened, and the kinges palace shall fall. The quene hir self shal be led awaye captyue, and hir gentilwomen shal mourne as the doues, a grone within their hertes. ' Niniue is like a pole full of water, but then shal they be fayne to fle. Stonde, stode, (shal they crie) a there shal not one turne backe. Awaye with the syluer, awaye with the golde: for here is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of all maner costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emptied a clene striped out: that their hertes maye be melted awaye, their knees treble, all their loynes be weake, and their faces blacke as a pot.

Where is now the dwellinge of the lyos, and the pasture of the lyons whelpes? where the lyon and the lyonesse wente with the whelpes, and no man frayed them awaye? But the lyon spoyled ynough for his yonge ones, and deuoured for his lyonesse : he fylled his dennes with his pray,  $\mathfrak{g}$  his dwellinge place with that he had rauyszshed. LORDE, when I herde speake of §, I was afrayed. The worke y thou hast taken in honde, shalt thou perfourme in his tyme, O LORDE: and when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Sela.

His glory couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as  $\hat{y}$ sonne,  $\mathfrak{g}$  beames of light go out of his hondes, there is his power hid. Destruccio goeth before him, and burnynge cressettes go from his fete. He stondeth,  $\mathfrak{g}$  measureth the earth : He loketh,  $\mathfrak{g}$  the people consume awaye, the moutaynes of  $\hat{\mathfrak{g}}$  worlde fall downe to powlder, and the hilles are fayne to bowe them selues, for his goinges are euclastinge and sure.

I sawe, that the pauilions of the Morians and the tentes of the londe of Madian were vexed for weerynesse. Wast thou not angrie (o LORDE) in the waters? was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? yes, whē thou sattest vpon thine horse, and when thy charettes had the victory. Thine arowes wente out glisteringe, and thy speares as the shyne of the lightenynge. 'Thou trodest downe the londe in thine anger, and didest throsshe the Heithen in thy displeasure. Thou carnest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine anoynted. Thou smotest downe the heade in the house of the vngodly,  $\mathfrak{g}$  discoueredest his foundacions, eue vnto  $\hat{\mathfrak{Y}}$  necke of him. Sela.

Thou cursest his septers, the captayne of his men of warre: which come as a stormy wynde to scatre me abrode,  $\mathfrak{g}$  are glad when they maye eat vp  $\mathfrak{F}$  poore secretly. Thou makest a waye for thine horses in the see, euen in the mudde of greate waters. ## The Prophet Aggeus.

What Aggeus contegneth.

Chap. I.

He exorteth the people to buylde vp the teple, and reproueth their loge tariege.

The first Chapter.

A N the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, "in the vj. moneth the first daye of the moneth, came the worde of the LORDE (by the prophet Aggeus) 'vnto Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel y prynce of Iuda, and to Iesua the sonne of losedec the hye prest, sayenge: Thus speaketh the LORDE of hoostes, and saieth: This people doth saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the LORDES house. Then spake the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus a sayed: 'Ye youre selues can fynde tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shal this house lye waist? Considre now yourc owne wayes in youre hertes (saieth $ LORDE of hoostes) ye sowe moch, but ye bringe litle in: "Ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drinke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke youre selues, but ye are not warme: g he y carneth eny wage, putteth it in a broken purse. 36

Thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: Cosidre youre owne wayes in youre hertes, get you vp to the mountayne, fetch wod, g buylde vp the house: 'that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honoure, saieth the LORDE. Ye loked for moch, and lo it is come to litle: g though ye brynge it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so, saieth the LORDE of hoostes? Euē because that my house lyeth so waist, f and ye renne euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the heauen is forbyddē to geue you eny dew, and the earth is forbydden to geue you encrease. f I haue called for a drouth, both vpō the londe  $\mathfrak{g}$  vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne  $\mathfrak{g}$  vpon oyle, vpon euery thinge that the grounde bryngeth forth, vpon men and vpon catell, yee and vpon all handy laboure.

Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, a Iesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the LORDE their God, a the wordes of the prophet Aggeus (like as the LORDE their God had sent him) the people dyd feare the LORDE. Then Aggeus the LORDES angel sayed in the LORDES message vnto the people: "I am with you, saieth the LORDE. So the LORDE waked vp the sprete of Zorobabel the prynce of Iuda, and the sprete of lesua the sonne of Iosedec the hye prest, and the sprete of the remnaunt of all the people: y they came g laboured, in the house of the LORDE of hoostes their God.

The ij. Chapter.

PON the xxiiij. daye of the sixte moneth, R in the secode years of kinge Darius, the xxi. daye of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the LORDE by the prophet Aggeus, sayenge: speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prynce of Iuda, and to lesua the sonne of losedec the hye prest, and to the residue of y people, a saye: "Who is left amoge you, that sawe this house in hir first beuty? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not in youre eyes, euē as though it were nothinge? Neuerthelesse be of good chere, o Zorobabel (saieth the LORDE)<sup>5</sup> be of good conforte, o Iesua thou sonne of Iosedec, hye prest: take good hartes vnto you also, all ye people of the londe, saieth the LORDE of hoostes, and do acordinge to the worde (for I am with you, saieth the LORDE of hoostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the londe of Egypte: g my sprete shalbe amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus saieth the LORDE of hoostes: "Yet once more will I shake heauē and earth, the see and the drye lode: Yee I will moue all Heithen, g the comforte of all Heithen shall come, g so wil I fyll this house with honoure, saieth the LORDE of hoostes. The syluer is myne," g the golde is myne, saieth the LORDE of hoostes. Thus y glory of the last house shalbe greater the the first, saieth the LORDE of hoostes: g in this place wil I geue peace, saieth the LORDE of hoostes.

The xxiiij. daye of the ix moneth in the seconde yeare of kinge Darius, came the worde of the LORDE vnto the prophet Aggeus sayenge: Thus saieth  $\S$  LORDE God of hoostes: Axe the prestes concernynge the lawe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  saye: fYf one beare holy flesh in his cote lappe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  with his lappe do touch the bred, potage, wyne, oyle or eny other meate: shall he be holy also? The prestes answered,  $\mathfrak{g}$  saide: No. Then sayde Aggeus: Now yf one beynge defyled with a deed carcase, touch eny of these: shall it also be vnclene? The prestes gaue answere  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayed: yee, it shall be vnclene. "Thē Aggeus answered, and sayde: Euen so is this people  $\mathfrak{g}$  this nacion before me, saieth  $\mathfrak{F}$  LORDE: and so are all the workes of their hodes, yee and all that they offre, is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) cosidre from this C daye forth, and how it hath gone with you afore: or euer there was layed one stone vpo another in the temple of the LORDE: that when ye came to a corne heape of xx. busshels, there were scarce ten: "and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure out L. pottes of wyne, there were scarce xx. For I smote you with heate, blastinge a hale stones in all the labours of youre hondes: yet was there none of you, that wolde turne vnto me, saieth the LORDE. Considre then from this daye forth and afore, namely, from the xxiiij. daye of the ix. moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the LORDES temple was layed: 'Marck it well, Is not the sede yet in the barne? haue not the vynes, the fyge trees, the pomgranates and olyue trees bene yet vnfrutefull? but fro this daye forth, I shal make them to prospere.

Morouer the xxiiij. daye of the moneth came the worde of the LORDE vnto Aggeus agayne, sayenge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Iuda, and saye: I will shake both heauen and earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kingdomes, yee g destroye the mightie kingdome of the Heithē. I wil ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shal fall downe, euery man thorow his neghbours swerde. And as for the, o Zorobabel (saieth the LORDE of hoostes) thou sonne of Salathiel, my seruaunt: I wil take the (saieth the LORDE) at the same tyme, and make the as a seale: for I have chosen the, saieth the LORDE of hoostes Ierusalē also shalbe inhabited agayne: namely, in the same place where Ierusalem stondeth.

The LORDE shall preserve the tentes off Iuda like as afore tyme: so that the glory of the house of Dauid and the glory of the cytesyns of Ierusalem, shalbe but litle regarded, in comparison off the glory off Iuda. In that daye shall the LORDE defende the citesyns of Ierusalem: so that the weakest then amonge them shalbe as Dauid: "and the house of Dauid shalbe like as Gods house, and as the angell off the LORDE before them.

The riff. Chapter.

I N that tyme shall the house off Dauid and the citesyns off Ierusalem haue an open well, 'to wash of synne and vnclennesse. And then (sayeth the LORDE off hoostes) I will destroye the names of Idols out off the londe: 'so that they shal nomore be put in remembraunce.

"As for the false prophetes also and the vn clene sprete, I shall take them out of the londe: So that yf eny off them prophecy eny more, his owne father and mother that begat him, shall save vnto him: "Thou shalt dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name off the LORDE: Yee his owne father and mother that begat him, shall wounde him, when he prophecyeth. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euery one off his vision when he prophecieth: nether shall they weere sack clothes env more, to disceaue mē with all. "But he shall be fayne to saye: I am no prophet: I am an husbonde man, for so am B I taught by Adam fro my youth vp.<sup>p</sup> And yff it be sayde vnto him: How came these woundes then in thine hondes? He shall answere: Thus am I wounded in the house off myne owne frendes.

<sup>a</sup> but the thirde parte shal remayne therin. And the same thirde parte wil I brynge thorow the fyre, and will clense them, as the syluer is clensed: Yee and trye them, like as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name, and I wil heare them : I will saye : it is my people. And they shal saye: LORDE, my God.

The riiij. Chapter.

BEHOLDE, the daye of the LORDE cometh, that thou shalt be spoyled and ମ robbed: for I wil gather together all the Heithen, to fight agaynst lerusalem : so that the cite shalbe wonne, the houses spoyled, and the women defyled. The half of the cite shal go awaye in to captiuyte, and the residue of the people shal not be caried out of the cite.

After that shall the LORDE go forth to fight agaynst those Heithen, as men vse to fight in the daye of batell. The shall his fete stöde vpö the mount oliuete, that lieth vpon the east syde of Ierusalē. And y mount olyuete shal cleue in two, eastwarde, g westwarde so y there shal be a greate valley: a the halff mount shal remoue towarde the north, and the other half towarde the south.

And ye shall fle vnto the valley of my hilles, for the valley off the hylles shal reach vnto 'Yee fle shall ye, like as ye fled for Asal. the earthquake in the dayes off Osias kynge of Iuda. And the LORDE my God shal come, and all sanctes with him. <sup>d</sup> In that daye shal it not be light, but colde and frost. This shalbe that specyall daye, which is knowne vnto the LORDE: nether daye ner night, but aboute the euenynge tyme it shal be light. In that tyme shall there waters of life runne out from Ierusalem: the half parte of them towarde the east see, ad the other half towarde the vtternost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. 'And the LORDE himself shalbe kynge ouer all the earth.

At that tyme shal there be one LORDE only, and his name shalbe but one. Men shal go aboute the whole earth, as vpon a felde: from Gibea to Remmon, and from § south to Ierusalem. "She shalbe set vp, and inhabited in hir place: From Ben Iamins porte,

There shall men dwell, and there shal be nomore cursinge, but Ierusalem shalbe safely inhabited.

This shalbe the plage, wherwith § LORDE C wil smyte all people, that haue fought agaynst Ierusalem : Namely, their flesh shall consume awaye, though they stonde vpon their fete: their eyes shall corruppe in their holes, and their tunge shal consume in their mouth.

In that daye shall the LORDE make a greate sedicion amoge them, so that one ma shal take another by the honde, and lave his hondes vpon the hondes of his neghboure. 'Iuda shal fight also agaynst Ierusalem, ad the goodes of all the Heithen shalbe gathered together rounde aboute : golde and syluer and a very greate multitude off clothes. And so shal this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses and all the beastes that shall be in the hooste, like as yonder plage was.

Euery one that remayneth then of all $ people, which came agaynst Ierusalem, shal go vp yearly, to worshipe the kynge (euen $ LORDE of hoostes) 'and to kepe the feast And loke what generacion off tabernacles. vpon earth goeth not vp to Ierusalem, for to worshipe the kynge (euen the LORDE of D hoostes) vpon the same shal come no rayne. Yff the kynred of Egipte go not vp g come not, it shall not rayne vpon them nether.

This shalbe the plage wherwith § LORDE wil smyte all Heithen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: Yee this shalbe the synneplage of Egipte and the synneplage of all people, that go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydinge geer of y horses be holy vnto the LORDE, and the kettels in the LORDES house shal be like the basens before the aulter: yee all the kettels in Ierusalem and Iuda, shalbe holy vnto the LORDE of hoostes: and all they that slaye offeringes, shall come and take of them, and dight them therin. And at that tyme there shal be no mo Cananites in the house of the LORDE.

The Prophet Malachy.

What Malachy contegneth.

Chap. I.

The benefites of God, shewed specially vnto Israel before all other: Agayne, the punyshment of the vnthanfulnesse, vnfaithfulnesse and covetousnesse of the prestes and the people.

Chap. II.

He threatneth punyshment and confucion vnto

the prestes, and commaundeth men to loue their wyues.

Chap. III.

Of Christes commynge, and of him that maketh redy his waye before him. Off the abrogacion of the olde leuiticall prestheade. Of the power of the iudge for to come and of that fearfull daye.

The first Chapter.

The heuy burthen which the LORDE sheweth agaynst Israel by Malachy.

A HAUE loued you, sayeth § LORDE: ād yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Iacobs brother, sayeth the LORDE? yet haue I loued Iacob, and hated Esau: "Yee I haue made his hilles waist, and his heretage a wyldernesse for dragōs. And though Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wil go buylde vp agayne the places that be waisted: yet (sayeth § LORDE of hoostes) what they buylded, that brake I downe: "so that it was called a cursed londe, and a people, whom the LORDE hath euer bene angrie withall.

Youre eyes haue sene it,  $\bar{a}d$  ye youre selues must confesse, that  $\tilde{y}$  LORDE hath brought the londe of Israel to greate honoure. Shulde not a sonne honoure his father, and a serua $\bar{u}t$ his master? Yf I be now a father, where is myne honoure? 'yf I be the LORDE, where am I feared? sayeth the LORDE of hoostes.
